Companioned Prayer is taught and practiced as a Christian, interactive, contemplative prayer. The prayer experience is between the person praying and God, and requires an active faith relationship with Him. Neither the companion nor the person praying should view the role of the companion, or the prayer practice or prayer experience, as a substitute for professional therapy or treatment. Companioned Prayer is not a form of therapeutic treatment. If you have related questions or concerns about Companioned Prayer, discuss them with your therapist, doctor and/or priest before beginning or engaging in any further practice of the prayer. For additional information, see “Trauma and Major Illness” and “Influences of Other Prayer or Meditative Practices” in chapter 11.

Companioned Prayer is dedicated to the Virgin Mary, the mother of our Lord, who in Luke 1:48 says,
“Behold, all generations shall call me blessed.”
Moved by the Holy Spirit, she responded to God, offering herself completely to Him.

We have always desired to feel and know that we are a part of God’s loving care.
Companioned Prayer offers a way, through God’s love, to know that directly.

"Companioned Prayer is a prayer with a friend that can eventually bring you to the real purpose of your faith, which is an intimate, daily, loving relationship with God. It is a miracle that you will feel taking place within you. It will take time, but it will happen in you."

"Companioned Prayer is a form of personal prayer that can change your relationship to God."

"I hope everyone can participate in the Companioned Prayer program. It can change your life."

Chapter 1

What is Companioned Prayer?

Abide in me, as I abide in you. Just as the branch cannot bear fruit by itself unless it abides in the vine, neither can you unless you abide in me. I am the vine, you are the branches. ...As the Father has loved me, so have I loved you; abide in my love.

John 15:4-5a, 9

A New Prayer Experience

Sometimes we are fortunate to experience God's loving grace gifted to us with the help of another person. Those are precious moments – when we know God's abiding love for us, experienced and known through the gift of friendship or a special moment in a relationship. When we hold our child or grandchild, or when we look into our mother's eyes and feel her heart. Or those special times when we feel we are one with our husband or wife, or our brother or sister. Sometimes we find these moments with a friend, or more rarely, with a small group of friends.

When we do experience such moments of grace, we cherish their personal richness and special meaning for us. They are times of treasure that often just seem to happen – when our feeling of wholeness in ourselves, our family, and in God's creation seem to break through into a connectedness we recognize as very special, even holy.

In faith we know such opportunities for being open to the gift of God's grace can also occur in our worship and prayer. But these prayer times are usually either in corporate worship or solitary prayer or reflection. It is not common to find a prayer specifically designed to open us up to that private inner knowing of God's presence with the guidance of one other person. That is the unique gift of this prayer.

Companioned Prayer is a simple way to help one another be present to God and open to his gift of grace and understanding felt and known directly. In this manner we accompany or companion each other in prayer. Yet our prayer subject and experience are completely private and personal. In faith we take our personal prayer to God, to the loving heart of Jesus, and wait for some inner movement or discernment. We stay with this as it unfolds and leads us to new personal understanding and renewal, given from God's love.

In Companioned Prayer the traditional contemplative blending of devotion, alert listening, and faithful waiting come together with personal and private prayer issues. This is a prayer of the gift of God's love, his mercy felt and known within us.

“My spiritual journey has taken on a new dimension. I feel God’s call and Christ’s love. Each time I pray with my companion, I feel like God has touched me.”

“When I let myself listen in this contemplative way, the Holy Spirit gently guides me to new revelation, to new understandings that are very personal to my situation. God is with me in this prayer.”

“I felt that God was present; his glory penetrated me. I knew Jesus’ love was total.”

This unique interactive prayer is ideal for friends, family members, and acquaintances. It can be practiced at home, in church, or in other settings. It can be part of a regular practice of spiritual growth in our faith journeys, and it can be practiced as part of a healing ministry with others.

In whatever way we practice it, we experience ourselves as part of a community or fellowship of God’s children. Our faith is awoken from within. We are called into a new being, as a child of God. We find his love transforming. Each time we pray we discover anew our life in Christ. We find that in this Christ-centered prayer and experience, we come to know his saving presence. “For, everyone who calls on the name of the Lord shall be saved.” (Romans 10:13)

Praying with Another Person

Companioned Prayer is usually practiced with another person, a companion. The companion guides the person through a structured prayer experience, following the desires of the person praying. The companion assists the person praying to stay focused on their inner prayer experience, surrendering into their walk with God. With this companionship and supportive instructions, the person praying can be more present to their inner prayer experience. We find that we are in a prayer of attentive inner listening. In this holy listening we are no longer “doing prayer.” Instead we find ourselves “in prayer” and then “being prayer” as we let go into God praying in us. Our soul is nourished by His gifted intimate presence and love.

In this prayer, the term “companion” carries a double meaning. In addition to the person assisting in the prayer, it also refers to Christ. Christ is our Companion in our prayer. We find him present in his constant love throughout the prayer, including within our experience of the very things that we pray about.

Unlike the more traditional forms of contemplative prayer in which a word or phrase may be silently repeated or in which one sits in silence, in this prayer we pray about the same kinds of things that we might otherwise find ourselves praying about. We pray about things that are personally important to us, such as our concerns, about thankfulness, personal challenges, loved ones, our faith, and so forth. But instead of us selecting, we listen to what God is calling us to be with in prayer. Of all the issues that might be personally important to us, we ask which one might God want us to listen to.

Once a prayer subject is identified, instead of simply praying about it, talking about it, or asking God for his intervention or other action about it, we take it to the loving heart of Jesus. We experience our prayer subject within God's tender love and remain open to the Holy Spirit. Within the compassion of Jesus' sacred heart we wait for some inner movement – for something to come that we sense is related to what we are praying about. In this way we follow the inner direction of the Holy Spirit, letting it guide us to greater understanding and mercy.

Throughout this experience we let our attention also be on our physical nature, our body. This helps us to be grounded in our prayer experience, and to not get caught up into analytical thinking and emotional responsiveness. It also facilitates being open to noticing God's quiet inner movement and call within us.

Each of us is unique. We all have our unique stories, our unique concerns, and our unique spiritual journeys. We are each called individually to God in a special way. This is a prayer practice that honors that. The companion knows that they are there to help the person be attentive to their prayer subject within Christ's loving presence. The companion does not provide advice or suggestions about the person's prayer issue. In fact, the companion usually doesn't even know what the person is praying about. The subject of the prayer is private, between God and the person praying. The companion knows from his or her own experience of the prayer that God's mercy and grace are found within the prayer issue as it is held in Christ's love and carried forward by the Holy Spirit into revelation, into God's mercy and grace. The companion knows that this is holy ground, that this graced felt movement from within cannot be made to happen by anything that the companion or the person praying does. It simply comes as gift; a gift beyond any thought of advice or suggestion from the companion. A gift from God.

Our Companioned Prayer Journey

As we pray this prayer, we find that over time we are drawn into an intimacy with God. Our spiritual journey is enlivened from within, as we increasingly discover a personal relationship with him. We experience his healing touch, his care, his love, and his divine presence at first as discrete prayer occurrences, and then gradually more subtly and continuously. In all this we experience healing and wholeness integral to who we authentically are, and we discover that who we are includes being deeply loved by God. As we are drawn into his love we find our heart responding in ever deepening faith and love. We also discover our prayer experiences to be expressed throughout the scriptures, within our liturgy, sacraments and worship, and in the lives of our brother and sister saints. Within this experience born of prayer our appreciation for our Christian faith and formation becomes paramount, as does the value we give to the support and guidance of our Church or religious community in our ongoing spiritual development. Our personal Companioned Prayer journey becomes an exciting lifelong awakening to God's presence. We are continuously renewed in him by his gift of his love.

Learning the Prayer

When learning Companioned Prayer, this sense of gift, of God's presence within our concerns and within our daily lives, may not be obvious at first. For some people it is apparent after only a few experiences of the prayer. For others it is more gradual, kind of a dawning awareness, but very real and solid. Individual experiences vary. In the inner movement of symbols and graced understandings, some people's experiences frequently revolve around the themes of their faith; for example of Christ's presence in their life. For others, their graced inner movements and gifts may be obviously related to their faith only occasionally, with an understanding of how it all is a personal gift of faith coming at a later time. In any case, whether appreciated right away or later, a personal growing relationship with God and the sense of his miraculous love within our life is inevitable with regular practice of the prayer.

This book primarily focuses on how to practice Companioned Prayer rather than on what the experience is like. In fact, an understanding of this interactive prayer cannot come from reading about it. It can only come from experiencing it. However, as an illustration of the flow of the prayer's interior movements, a representative example of the prayer experience is presented in the following chapter. Chapter 3 identifies basic principles of the prayer. The actual form of the prayer is contained in chapter 4. Guidelines for the person praying are in chapter 5. Guidelines for the companion are in chapter 6.

As with any contemplative prayer, the best way to learn Companioned Prayer is with a prayer group or structured learning program sponsored by your church or religious community, which offers an ongoing experience of practice, fellowship and instruction over a period of months. If one is not available in your area, get together with some friends and start one using the material in chapter 12.

Lastly, to appreciate the grace and value of Companioned Prayer, you must go beyond reading about it. You must experience the prayer, with others, over an extended period of time. Prayer is not an intellectual understanding; it is a living, formative, contemplative experience.

What Happens When We Pray?

Now the boy Samuel was ministering to the Lord under Eli. The word of the Lord was rare in those days; visions were not widespread. At the time Eli, whose eyesight had begun to grow dim so that he could not see, was lying down in his room; the lamp of God had not yet gone out, and Samuel was lying down in the temple of the Lord, where the ark of God was. Then the Lord called, "Samuel! Samuel!" and he said, "Here I am!" and ran to Eli, and said, "Here I am, for you called me." But he said, "I did not call; lie down again." So he went and lay down. The Lord called again, "Samuel!" Samuel got up and went to Eli, and said, "Here I am, for you called me." But he said, "I did not call, my son; lie down again." Now Samuel did not yet know the Lord, and the word of the Lord had not yet been revealed to him. The Lord called Samuel again, a third time. And he got up and went to Eli, and said, "Here I am, for you called me." Then Eli perceived that the Lord was calling the boy. Therefore Eli said to Samuel, "Go, lie down; and if he calls you, you shall say, 'Speak, Lord, for your servant is listening.'" So Samuel went and lay down in his place.

1st Samuel, 3:1-9

A Prayer Experience

In Companioned Prayer, each time we pray the experience is different. The following is a representative example.

OPENING PRAYER

My prayer partner is sitting next to me. She will companion me in my prayer. She begins our prayer in the name of the Father, the Son and the Holy Spirit. I close my eyes. Next she says out loud her prayer to God. She is thanking him for this prayer time, asking him to help us both be open to his presence, asking Jesus to be with us as we pray. Her words feel right. I too want to let go into God's presence and trust in Jesus' love for me. She finishes and then invites me to say a prayer either silently or out loud.

I sit in silence for a few moments, asking for Jesus to help me be open to his presence. I ask him to companion us both as we pray together, to be present within our needs. I ask for help listening for God's quiet call, and for help in being open and receptive to him. I thank him for this prayer and for my prayer partner. Then I recall the present needs of myself and of others. I recognize my need in an area of faith. I ask for God's help with each of my four children. I recall an omission of personal trust in a relationship. I ask for God to help someone I know who is ill, and another person who is alone. I thank God for my work which provides for so many.

I feel focused in my faith and in God. I know that I am now ready to go on in the prayer. I say "Amen." I keep my eyes closed as we continue with the prayer.

AS WE ARE

My companion invites me to take a few minutes to come before God as I really am, noticing how I am physically feeling right now. She guides me to noticing the tension in my back and shoulders, how my head feels, my breathing, and other parts of my body. I take my time and let my attention be drawn into my body. I notice my breathing. I find my busy analytical mind naturally quieting down. I seem to be more in tune with how I am feeling at the moment. When I'm ready for us to continue I let my companion know.

ASKING GOD

My prayer partner invites me to stay with how I am feeling inside, and to be open to God's loving presence. I welcome the reminder to trust in God's love and in his presence to us. I feel more connected to him within my faith. My companion asks me to let her know if something comes when I ask myself, "Of everything going on in my life, what feels like God is calling me to listen to, inside me right now?"

I wait. I am aware of all the things going on in my life right now, of all my concerns, my challenges as well as my blessings. But I don't pick one. I try to let something stand out on its own, to somehow feel special. I try to be open to whatever comes, even if it isn't something that I would have picked for myself. I know that I have entered into this prayer in faith and trust, and I put myself in God's hands.

Finally something comes that seems to have a subtle presence to it, something that feels like it's the one. It's about my concern and sorrow for my very elderly mother and her difficulties with Alzheimer's and her recent fall and broken arm. But I don't let my prayer companion know what it is. I keep my eyes closed and say "Okay" when I feel we are ready to continue.

GOD'S LOVE AND ACCEPTANCE

My companion asks me to notice how all this feels inside and how I carry it. I take the time to notice how my sorrowful love for my mother and her condition is heavy in my heart. After a brief pause my companion invites me to be with this with tenderness and faith. She asks me to notice how it feels to take all this to the loving heart of Jesus, and to feel his gentle love and acceptance in all of this.

Staying with my feelings of my mother and how I carry all of that, I take it all to Jesus' loving and compassionate heart. I let myself be open to Jesus' loving presence, to his loving heart. In faith I wait, and after a while I begin to sense his tender love and acceptance with all that I am carrying. I know that Jesus is with me in this prayer. I take my time with this, and then let my companion know that we are ready to go on.

LETTING GO IN THE LOVING HEART OF JESUS

My companion asks me to notice how it feels in my body to be with my prayer subject in this gentle, faith-filled way. She invites me to allow my awareness to seep into my body, to settle in and sense how all this feels inside.

I do that, and I am aware that there is more here than I know of. There is a texture to all of this that seems more than my prayer issue, more than my body, more than my feelings. I am in the realm of holy mystery and faith, experiencing Jesus' gentle presence and his love and compassion within my sorrow. I let myself go into all of this.

After a short pause, my companion invites me to wait in openness and faith within the gentle loving heart of Jesus and to see if it feels like there is anything else that God might want me to notice in all of this. It might be a word, an image, a feeling or perhaps a memory. Something that somehow seems to fit or connect with the way this whole thing feels inside. She asks me to let her know if something comes.

BEING OPEN TO GOD'S SPIRIT

Although some thoughts come, my primary experience continues to be awareness of my mother's condition and how heavy in my heart it all is, even within Jesus' gentle presence. In faith and allowing myself to be open to Jesus' loving presence, I stay with how it all feels inside, how my prayer subject feels as I hold it gently in faith, in God's presence. I again let myself sink into letting go into trusting God's presence. Other thoughts and a few images come that seem quite ordinary. Eventually something comes that seems somehow different. It feels subtly connected with how I am feeling inside. It is an awareness of the specialness of my mother. This feels right, feels somehow connected with my sorrowful love and concern for her. I let my companion know that something has come by saying, "Okay".

She asks me if it feels right, inside, to journey with some more. It does, so I say "Yes".

She asks me to notice how all this now feels in my body. I pause and notice how all this is, and how I seem to carry it. It seems like this new awareness of my mother is somehow connected with my prayer subject, my love and sorrow for my mother. My companion then encourages me to be present to all this with gentleness and faith, and asks me to let go into how all this now feels inside, and to let her know if anything comes that fits the way this all feels.

I let go into all of that within Jesus' loving presence and I wait to see if anything else comes; for some movement or shift felt inside. After a short while I notice a new sense of the specialness of my mother, a more graced inner light of who she is. I stay with that and I realize that this is her essence, who she is created as, a light, an intelligence, a joy and a loving heart all in one essence as given by God. I am also still gently aware of my concern and sorrow for her.

I take a while to be aware of all of this and finally I let my companion know that something more has come by saying out loud the word "Light".

My companion repeats the word "Light". When I hear her repeat the word I shared, I seem to be more present to it. She then asks if it feels right inside to journey with some more. I know it feels okay to continue with it in prayer, so I say, "Yes."

Next she suggests that I ask myself, "How does all this feel in my body?" I pause to notice that. She continues by saying, "With gentleness and faith, let go into how all this feels inside; and let me know if anything comes that fits the way this all now feels."

In faith and trust in God, I let go into how all about this feels, and I wait to see if there may be anything else that God might share with me. I am still very present to this whole sense of my mother's inner light and of my quiet sorrow. After a little while, I sense Jesus' presence and then I see that his divine Light is with her, is joined to her light. I know that he is with her and will always be with her. I feel a deep sense God's divine love and care for us all. I am aware that all this has come as Jesus' loving gift, a knowing beyond any knowing that I could create for myself. I am in awe of this sense of God's personal gift and mercy. I feel a letting go, a relief and gladness. I am grateful and sense that my prayer has been answered and that this is a good place to stop, at least for now.

Keeping my eyes closed, I let my prayer partner know that I'm ready to end this part of the prayer and to go on.

RESTING IN GOD'S PRESENCE

My companion suggests that we nurture this special place that I've come to inside. She invites me to pause here and to let go into God's presence within all of this, resting in the quiet tenderness of his Spirit for a while, and to then let her know when I feel we are ready to go on.

It feels good to spend more time with how all this feels inside, to really let go into it and to just rest and be in God's presence. I feel like I am home. I rest here letting it all penetrate me. I am not waiting for anything more, for any movement of the Holy Spirit or for any further gifts or insights. I am just here, open to God's Spirit, surrendering in his presence. I take my time and let myself abide in him, in his love. After a little while, I am ready to end the prayer. Still keeping my eyes closed, I let my companion know.

CLOSING PRAYER

She suggests that as I savor all of this, I let myself know that this is God's personal love and grace, experienced and felt inside me. I reflect on how right this feels. My prayer experience affirms that God's mercy and grace are awesome and personal, tender and loving. My companion invites me to stay with this sense of holy and precious gift. She suggests that I may wish to silently offer a prayer in response.

I silently thank God for his love for my mother and his presence with her; and I ask that he continue to help me trust in his goodness and mercy. I say, "Amen" and then slowly open my eyes.

My companion also says a brief prayer out loud, thanking God for this gift of grace-filled quiet time to be with him.

The prayer is over, but I feel like I've just been touched and held by God's loving presence. I thank my prayer partner for companionship in prayer. I feel very grateful and close to my prayer partner for accompanying me in my prayer journey. After a brief pause, I ask her if she would like me to companion her in the prayer.

A Companion's Experience

Companioned Prayer is usually practiced with two people. Below is the companion's side of the preceding prayer experience.

OPENING PRAYER

My prayer partner is sitting next to me. I will companion him in our prayer together. I say, "In the name of the Father, of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit, we open our hearts to you, O Lord. Amen." We close our eyes. I begin by saying out loud a prayer to God. I thank him for this prayer time, asking him to help us both be open to his presence, asking Jesus to be with us as we pray. I am ready to turn this prayer process over to him and to let him enter our hearts and our prayer. I say "Amen" and then invite my prayer partner to also say a personal prayer, either out loud or silently, and if silently to say "Amen" when we are ready to go on.

After a pause of a few moments, my prayer partner has privately said his prayer, and says "Amen" out loud. I am excited to know that we are embarking on our special prayer journey together.

AS WE ARE

I invite my prayer partner to take a few minutes to come before God as he actually is, noticing how he physically feels. I invite him to notice his back and shoulders, and other parts of his body in order to help him slow down, to get out of his head thinking, to be more in the moment, and more open to inner discernment. After a while I can tell he has slowed down, and he lets me know that he is now ready to continue.

ASKING GOD

I invite my prayer partner to stay with how he is feeling inside, and to also be open to God's loving presence. I know this prayer is predicated on our trust and surrender to God. I ask my prayer partner to let me know if something comes when he silently asks himself, "Of everything going on in my life, what feels like God is calling me to listen to, inside me right now?"

I wait. Sometimes when something is obvious or comes right away, my partner responds after only a few moments. Sometimes it takes a little while. I know it's a process of discernment, not an intellectual choice. After a while he says, "Okay." I know that something has come.

GOD'S LOVE AND ACCEPTANCE

I don't know what his prayer subject is, but I invite him to notice how it all feels inside, and how he carries it. After a short pause I ask him to be with it with tenderness and faith, and to notice how it feels to take his prayer subject to the loving heart of Jesus, and to feel his gentle love and acceptance. I ask him to take his time, and to let me know when he has done that and he is ready for us to continue.

I wait. I know he is with Jesus as he holds his prayer subject. After a while, he says "Okay" and I know we are ready to go on.

LETTING GO IN THE LOVING HEART OF JESUS

I ask my prayer partner to notice how it feels in his body to be with his prayer subject in this gentle, caring, faith-filled way. I invite him to allow his awareness to seep into his body, to settle in and sense how all this feels inside. I pause here to let him be aware that there is more to all this than what he might be thinking or aware of.

After a short pause, I invite my partner to continue within the gentle loving heart of Jesus and to wait in openness and faith to see if it feels like there is anything else that God might want him to notice in all of this. It might be a word, an image, a feeling or perhaps a memory. Something that somehow seems to fit or connect with the way this whole thing feels inside. I ask him to let me know if something comes.

BEING OPEN TO GOD'S SPIRIT

I wait, again with patience. I know that this is a prayer of contemplation and discernment, and taking the time to allow that to happen is part of the prayer process. After a while, my partner indicates that something has come by saying "Okay." I then ask him if this feels right inside to journey with some more.

After a brief pause, he quietly says "Yes." I can tell he is not focused on me even though he is providing some feedback.

I ask him to notice how all this feels in his body. I pause and then encourage him to be present to all this with gentleness and faith. I invite him to let go into how all this now feels inside, and to let me know if anything comes that fits the way this all feels.

I wait, letting him have time for letting go and discernment. After a while something else must have come that feels right, because he says the word "Light."

I do not know what his prayer subject is, and I do not need to know. His prayer is between him and God, and I do not need to understand any symbols or images that he might choose to share. So I simply repeat the symbol back to him by saying, "Light". I then ask him if this feels right, inside, to journey with some more. He checks inside and says, "Yes."

I again suggest that he ask himself, "How does all this "Light" now feel in my body?" I pause to give him time to notice that. I then continue by saying, "With gentleness and faith, let go into how all this feels inside; and let me know if anything comes that fits the way this all now feels."

Again, I do not know what his personal prayer is all about, but I know it is more than simply the word "Light". I know this is just a symbol of his unfolding prayer of trust and surrender. So I just wait, letting God do the work. Some time goes by. My partner remains quiet with his eyes closed. After a while I can see some outer changes. He is sitting more relaxed, he is very focused on what is happening inside him, in his prayer. Finally he shifts, and keeping his eyes closed, he quietly lets me know that he has come to a good place to stop at least for now.

RESTING IN GOD'S PRESENCE

I suggest that he nurture this special place that he has come to inside. I invite him to pause here and to let go into God's presence within all of this, resting in the quiet tenderness of God's Spirit for a while; and to then let me know when he feels we are ready to go on.

He takes his time. I know he is letting go into this, into God's gift of His presence. After a little while, he lets me know that we are ready to end the prayer.

CLOSING PRAYER

I suggest that as he savors all of this, that he let himself know that this is God's personal love and grace, experienced and felt inside him. I pause to give him time to do that. I then invite him to stay with this inner sense of holy and precious gift. I suggest that he may wish to silently offer a personal prayer to God in response, and then when he is ready, to just slowly open the eyes.

After a while he says, "Amen" and opens his eyes. Then I say a brief prayer out loud, thanking the Lord for this gift of his quiet grace, his presence made known.

I give him a little time to be with his experience. Finally he says "thank you" to me, but I feel like I should be thanking him. I am honored that he has trusted me in faith to companion him in his prayer with God. I feel a deep affinity and friendship secured in God's love for us.

After a brief pause, he asks me if I would like him to companion me in the prayer. I nod yes, I am ready.

Your Prayer Experience

Your experience in Companioned Prayer will always be personal to you. It will differ each time you pray or companion someone. But when entered into with humility and faith, and with trust in God's will, the result will be a sense of God's personal gift and mercy, received out of God's love for us. When practiced over time this sense of closeness and trust in God's living presence grows in our life, and we become more free and born anew in Him. And when practiced regularly with your prayer partner, a bond of God's intimate love is found between and within you, and Christ's presence is known.

Chapter 3

The Gift of God

The free gift of God is eternal life in Christ Jesus our Lord

Romans 6:23

A Relationship That Grows Over Time

Companioned Prayer takes patience and attentiveness while praying, and patience and regular practice over months, in order to learn the subtleties and depths of the prayer. It is not something to be tried just a few times with the idea that then you know what it is. But when practiced over time, God opens us to his abiding presence and we flower in him. This is our discovery that awaits us. The experience of God calling us personally into a new and intimate relationship with him, into revelation, and into his mercy and grace, felt and known inside us.

This is a gentle and gradual process. It cannot be hurried. But amazingly, we can give ourselves to it through Companioned Prayer. This prayer is not just something that we do; it is time we spend being open to, and nurturing of, our awareness of God as the prime mover and shaper of our lives. And when we do that consciously and regularly, we find that we are carried forward in his hands by his love, in ways beyond our knowing, that guides us and transforms our understanding of ourselves as children of him who loves us deeply.

So in faith we turn to God in prayer and give ourself to him over and over again. We allow ourselves the time to get to know the depths of his love over time; time we spend in Companioned Prayer over months and even years. While it is easy to learn the steps of Companioned Prayer with a friend or in a group, learning what the prayer experience truly offers is a process of growth. It does not occur in a month or two. It takes time because it is real; it happens within you as you grow in response to God's love.

Because the prayer experiences are subtle, it can be easy to initially dismiss their value and the value of the prayer. This seems to be true whether the experiences are profoundly personally meaningful or are of a more simple nature. The key to experiencing the personal growth of our formation in Christ that Companioned Prayer offers over time, is to understand that while individual prayer experiences gift us with God's intimate mercy, the greater gift is his real presence to us. This is a presence of being in a personal relationship with our Lord, a presence and relationship that unfolds and develops over time as our awareness of him is nurtured through our many Companioned Prayer experiences.

How does this happen? It happens because God is love and he loves us. When we give ourselves to this love in trust and humility, we open ourselves to a greater knowing of him, and of his gifts of mercy and grace. Companioned Prayer has steps or movements that help guide us through this encounter. Our prayer companion offers us these guided movements as we stay focused interiorly on our walk with God, as Jesus calls us into prayer, into a personally meaningful relationship with him.

A Contemplative Prayer Experience

Companioned Prayer is unique in a number of ways, not just in having a companion who helps us pray. For example, in order for us to be open to God and to experience the gift of his presence, we must learn to take our time at every step or movement in the prayer: to allow time for us to notice how we are as we come before God, to allow time for us to discern God calling us forward, to allow time to notice his love and acceptance, to allow time for us to notice the subtle movement of his Holy Spirit, to allow time to notice his mercy and grace, to allow time to nurture the experience of his silent presence and his gift to us, and to allow time to nurture our natural response of thankfulness or other awareness. This general attitude of waiting, noticing and nurturing – all in faith as we place ourself in God’s hands and heart – is the traditional contemplative aspect of prayer. Without this faithful waiting we would quickly and repeatedly jump to our own agenda in prayer, and not be open to our Lord’s will for us. This is why patience is needed when practicing the prayer; because otherwise we succumb to wanting to control the prayer, to control the experience, and to control our relationship with God. And then we would miss his very special gift of his grace felt and known within us. So we pray slowly and unhurried, without an agenda and without a desired outcome, except to be with our Lord.

A Blend of Contemplative and Personal Prayer

In most personal prayers, we pray to God about something. Something important to us: a personal challenge, a concern for a loved one, ...for something going on in our life. In Companioned Prayer we also pray about something going on in our life, something personal. But instead of us selecting what to pray about, we try to let God pick something for us to bring to him in prayer. We ask, of everything going on in my life, what does it feel like God is calling me to listen to in prayer? What does he want me to be aware of? This too is a contemplative approach. Knowing that God knows us completely, even better than we know ourself, and knowing that he loves us, as best we can we turn the selection over to him.

Open To God As We Are

In doing so, we must be open and honest with ourselves, and we must come to God in humility. Therefore when we enter into Companioned Prayer we come to God as we are, right then, here and now. We come to God with humility, acknowledging how we are, including our limitations, our hurts, our joys, even how we physically feel. We enter into the relationship from this humble authenticity and with our heart open to the mystery of the loving heart of God. It is in this mystery of God’s love that our spirit is moved by the gentle whispers and tugs of the Holy Spirit. Therefore once something comes that feels that God wants us to pray about, we consciously take it and ourself to the essence of God’s love: to Jesus’ loving heart.

Jesus Loves Us

Essentially this prayer is our surrender into the personal loving presence of our Lord, exemplified by his loving heart. This is the simple key to our prayer experience. Letting go into our prayer subject within our experience of the love of Jesus is the heart of the prayer.

Through our faith we let ourselves experience this tender divine compassion by taking our fragile and wounded selves into the mystery of this abiding love, and letting go into this very real and very present gift of Jesus' loving heart. In this way we simply are open to experiencing his tenderness and loving acceptance, felt inside us, not as a concept but only as an abiding and familiar experience. An experience that we allow and encourage by giving ourselves into and participating in his gift of tenderness and loving acceptance, felt inside us, in our wounds, in our prayer issue, as we take it to him in faith and abide in that love. In the reality of Jesus' presence we are open to the flowing presence of his love felt in the tenderness of our prayer issue, allowing us to be closer to and accepting of our prayer issue and its special gift to us, instead of handing it off or distancing ourselves from it. For it is within the tenderness of our brokenness that, with faith and humble acceptance, we experience God's mercy and grace.

Letting God Draw Us Forward Into Our Prayer Experience

It is God's love for us that draws us forward into our prayer experience. It is not our actions or thoughts, or anything that our companion does or says. Our companion simply helps us stay attentive to this inward pull from God. For "the Spirit helps us in our weakness, for we do not know how to pray as we ought, but that very Spirit intercedes with sighs too deep for words." God, who knows and searches our hearts, causes the Holy Spirit to stir within us at first even beyond our perceptions, beyond our knowing, "too deep for words", praying within us and calling us to him "according to the will of God." (Romans 8:26-27)

In faith we are attentive to this gentle quiet movement of the Holy Spirit within us, surrendering into what God calls us to listen to and notice, as our prayer subject is formed and as it changes, all within the tender embrace of Jesus' love, within his loving heart, as we let go into God the Father, the Son and the Holy Spirit praying within us.

In so doing we find that God reveals himself through his loving mercy and grace felt and known within; within the very tenderness of our prayer subject that he has called us to listen to and to bring to his loving heart. And we know that this happens simply because he loves us, individually and personally. Our prayer is answered in ways that are beyond our knowing, beyond our ability to create, and we are aware of Jesus' love for us and the blessing of his presence now and always. In this we rest, and then offer a prayer in response.

Transformed by God's Love

It is from many of these Companioned Prayer encounters with our Lord, over time, that we are gently formed by him according to his loving will. We find that we are more peaceful, more loving, more open to others. We begin to abide in God's constant presence and love, and we know that Jesus' love for us is complete, as we are enveloped and nurtured by the mystery of his love. Within all this, we recognize him in others, in service, in scripture, in worship and in the Eucharist, and in the Church, which all become increasingly valued to us than before. When practiced over time, Companioned Prayer offers us God's personal gift to us: himself.

Chapter 4

The Prayer Form

Come to me, all you that are weary and are carrying heavy burdens, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you, and learn from me; for I am gentle and humble in heart, and you will find rest for your souls. For my yoke is easy, and my burden is light.

Matthew 11:28-30

The Prayer's Movements

Reading the Companioned Prayer form in this chapter will not make much sense. It is provided here for the purpose of using it when actually practicing the prayer. There are number of stages or movements within the prayer, as follows.

- Opening Prayer – We begin with a personal prayer to God, establishing our Companioned Prayer within a personal relationship with our Lord.
- As We Are – Next we take time to come before God as we actually are, noticing how we physically feel.
- Asking God – Here we discern what God is calling us to pray about.
- God's Love and Acceptance – Here we take our prayer subject and ourself to the loving heart of Jesus, and notice his love and acceptance within all of it.
- Letting Go in the Loving Heart of Jesus – Here we let go into our prayer subject within God's love, waiting attentively within the gentle loving heart of Jesus, noticing anything else that God might want to make known.
- Being Open to God's Spirit – If something does come, we continue to notice and follow any interior movement from God, until it naturally feels that this part of the prayer is over.
- Resting in God's Presence – Then from within the special place that God has led us, we quietly rest within God's tender quiet presence.
- Closing Prayer – Here we acknowledge his gift of personal love and grace felt within us, and close with a personal prayer in response to our contemplative prayer experience.

Companioned Prayer is an interactive process that leads the companion and the person praying through specific movements of the prayer experience. Even though the prayer form is structured, the inner prayer experience is fluid and dynamic.

The Prayer's Format

When we read the words of a prayer, it is usually obvious that it is a prayer. The words typically define the relationship between God and the person praying, and then relate that to a person's situation. For example, it might proclaim God's authority and glory, and then ask for his guidance and intervention in our life.

The prayer format or wording of Companioned Prayer is different. Just looking at the words of the prayer, it may not be obvious that it is a prayer. The words themselves do not evoke the form or meaning typical of a traditional prayer. Therefore it may not be easy to recognize that Companioned Prayer is a prayer if you only read its words. There are at least two reasons for this.

First, Companioned Prayer presupposes the authority and immeasurable love of God, and a personal relationship between God and the person praying and their prayer companion. And second, it is a companioned or guided prayer that endeavors to keep the practitioner focused on their inner experience of God's presence within their prayer journey, rather than on scripted depictions or meanings of God and faith.

Thus, it is not the wording of the prayer that makes Companioned Prayer a prayer. It is the intention and faith of the person praying, and that of the companion, that makes this a prayer. And it is the reality and love of the Father, his Son, and the Holy Spirit, and the practitioner's willingness to surrender into the living and loving relationship with him, that creates the prayer experience. The wording and format of the prayer facilitate that experience, but are not the prayer itself.

In the New Testament, Jesus constantly calls us into an intimate and personal relationship with him. This is what Companioned Prayer responds to, and this is why it is a prayer.

The format for Companioned Prayer follows. The Italics text is instruction for the companion. The bold text is for the companion to say out loud. The instruction “[pause]” means that the companion should pause briefly and then continue without waiting for a response from the person praying. The instruction “[wait]” means that the companion should wait until the person praying has given a response before further instructions are offered.

The prayer form on the next page is the standard form for use in Ordinary Time. For other forms see chapters 9 and 11, and check for downloadable forms available from the Companioned Prayer Christian Fellowship at www.CompanionedPrayer.org on the “Resources” page.

The prayer format beginning on the next page does not communicate the graced interior reality of the prayer experience itself.

Companioned Prayer

For the season of Ordinary Time

BEGINNING GROUP PRAYER

The Companioned Prayer meeting time can begin with a shared daily office, service or devotional, or a prayer and reading such as the Lord's Prayer, the Angelus, the daily gospel or other reading.

OPENING PRAYER

*Begin by saying, In the name of the Father, of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit, we open our hearts to you, O Lord. Amen.

Then on behalf of the person you are praying with and yourself, say a personal prayer out loud, such as: asking for Christ to be our companion; for our trust in the Lord; for the guidance of the Holy Spirit; thankfulness for this time of quiet; asking Christ to be present within our needs, inside our very brokenness, inside our joy; to help us listen inside to God's quiet call; to be mindful of our sins, and of the grace and blessings received; or, to humbly journey inside with Christ.

Then invite the other person to also say a personal prayer of concerns, challenges, intercessions, devotion, or thanksgivings in their life for themselves or others, either silently or out loud, and if silently, to say "Amen" when they are ready to continue. [wait for the other person to respond]

AS WE ARE

*Then say: Coming before God as we are, take a few minutes to notice how you physically feel. [briefly pause, and then continue] For example, let your attention go to your back and notice what that feels like. [pause] Notice your shoulders [pause], your neck [pause], your head [pause], your arms [pause], your hands [pause], your feet [pause], your legs [pause], your stomach [pause], your heart [pause], and your breathing. [longer pause] Notice the body sense of how you feel right now [pause]; and then let me know when we are ready to go on. [wait for a response, and then go to ASKING GOD]

ASKING GOD

*When they are ready, say: Staying with how this feels inside, and being open to God's loving presence; let me know if something comes when you ask yourself, "Of everything going on in my life, what feels like God is calling me to listen to, inside me right now?" [wait for a response]

GOD'S LOVE AND ACCEPTANCE

Notice how all this repeat the symbol if shared feels inside, and how you carry it. [pause] With tenderness and faith, notice how it feels to take all this to the loving heart of Jesus, and to feel his gentle love and acceptance in all of this. Take your time, and then let me know when we are ready to go on. [wait]

LETTING GO IN THE LOVING HEART OF JESUS

When they are ready to go on: Notice how it feels in your body to be with this, in this gentle, caring, faith-filled way. Allow your awareness to seep into your body, to settle in, and sense how all this feels inside. [pause] Within the gentle loving heart of Jesus, wait in openness and faith to see if it feels like there is anything else that God might want you to notice, such as a word, image, feeling or memory that seems to somehow fit with the way this whole thing feels, and then let me know. [wait]

BEING OPEN TO GOD'S SPIRIT

- a. If something comes, reflect back the symbol if shared, pause, and then ask,
- b. Does this feel right, inside, to journey with some more? [wait for a response]
If "no" go to RESTING IN GOD'S PRESENCE.
- c. If "yes," say: Ask yourself, "How does all this repeat symbol if shared now feel in my body?" [pause] With gentleness and faith, let go into how all this feels inside; and let me know if anything comes that fits the way this all now feels. [wait]
If something comes, go back to a.

Repeat a, b, c as long as the person wants to continue, or as time allows.

When they are ready to stop, go to RESTING IN GOD'S PRESENCE.

RESTING IN GOD'S PRESENCE

When the person is ready to stop, or if the time has run out: Okay; let's nurture this special place you've come to inside. Pause here and let go into God's presence within all of this, resting in the quiet tenderness of his Spirit for a while. And then let me know when we are ready to go on. [wait]

CLOSING PRAYER

When they are ready to end, say: As you savor all of this, let yourself know that this is God's personal love and grace, experienced and felt inside us. [pause] Staying in this holy and precious gift, you may wish to silently offer a prayer in response; and then when you are ready, just slowly open the eyes.

The person praying may also end with an "Amen", the sign of the cross, the doxology, or other closing prayer said out loud or silently.

The companion may also say out loud a brief prayer of thanks.

CONCLUDING GROUP PRAYER

When the Companioned Prayer meeting time is over (everyone has had an opportunity for prayer, or the time has come to an end), the shared daily office, service or devotional may be concluded, or a concluding prayer and blessing may be said out loud by someone with the opportunity for others to also participate either out loud or silently if they so choose.

Guidelines for the Person Praying

But now thus says the Lord, he who created you,... Do not fear for I have redeemed you; I have called you by name, you are mine. When you pass through the waters, I will be with you; and through the rivers, they shall not overwhelm you; when you walk through fire you shall not be burned, and the flame shall not consume you.

Isaiah 43:1-2

Companioned Prayer is much simpler than the instructions. It is a fluid process that proceeds without depending upon all the instructions. It can be beneficial to know the instructions, or they might provide just the amount of understanding to better permit you to let go into the prayer process and trust the Lord. In fact, the prayer process as led by your companion is designed to include all the questions and reflections your companion will need to assist you through your prayer experience. The guidelines themselves are just supplemental, to help you gain an overall understanding of the process and your options within it.

Nevertheless, the information in this and the other chapters of this book can enrich your prayer experiences and your ongoing spiritual growth through an appreciation for how to pray this prayer within the Christian tradition. However, bear in mind that understanding the process, learning the “how to,” is very different from the actual experience of the prayer. It is like night and day.

General Guidelines

Before proceeding with Companioned Prayer, it is good to know some general guidelines associated with the practice:

1. The prayer is between the person praying and God. The content, the pace and the selection of what happens next is always made by the person praying, not by the companion. You should feel free to ask your companion to repeat phrases, to back up, to go faster or slower, or even to stop at any point. The companion follows and honors the desires of the person praying.
2. It often helps the companion to hear any symbols or images that come up during your prayer. This helps the companion have a sense for how the process is going. It also helps you when you hear your words or symbol spoken back to you. This is particularly true when learning the prayer or praying with a new companion. Sharing a symbol is not the same as sharing your prayer issue. However, if you feel that your symbol is too private you should never feel compelled to share it.

3. Always let your companion know when you have completed a step with an “okay” or similar statement. If you get confused, forget the instructions, or are just unsure of what to do next, just ask your companion. If you feel bored, frustrated or challenged, say so. If you want to stop, just say so. Your companion can help you to honor whatever you feel is the right thing to do.
4. Don’t worry if nothing happens. Your companion cannot make anything happen inside you. Neither can you. There is no way. You cannot “do” contemplative prayer. It is not a technique or a process of manipulation, of doing “A” and getting a result “B.” God has his own schedule for us, which must be honored. Have patience and faith. Forget any agendas that you may have come with. Turn the whole process over to God, and be open to his presence and grace.
5. Do not look for an experience. It is not your will, your desire, that you need to seek, but openness to God’s will in you. Therefore, simply let go into experiencing your prayer subject within the quiet loving heart of Jesus in trust and simplicity, and stay with that as you continue to listen within Jesus’ tender heart.
6. This is not a prayer of doing. You do not need to concentrate or force anything to happen. You do not need to quiet or still the mind, or stop it from thinking. Just let go within your faith, gently letting your attention be on your interior state, and how you sense or feel that in your body.
7. When you have your eyes closed, don’t worry about the time. Allow plenty of time; but if you have time constraints, let your companion know. If it gets too late, your companion can let you know.
8. Keep the eyes closed during the entire prayer, and stay focused on the inner experience, even when talking with your prayer companion.
9. Before the OPENING PRAYER (or before the BEGINNING GROUP PRAYER if the group is so small that it will not break into smaller companion groups), let your companion know of any special instructions or preferences such as difficulty hearing, time constraints, taking extra time in RESTING IN GOD’S PRESENCE (as explained in chapter 11), using an abbreviated form of the prayer and what level of abbreviation (see chapter 11), or using an alternative form such as the Intercessory form (see chapter 9). This is also a good time to ask any questions or to inquire whether your prayer partner has any special needs or desires, both as your companion and later when you are their companion.
10. The prayer is meant to be experienced within an environment of compassion, faith and community. Both the person praying and the companion need to endeavor to be present to each other with openness, gentleness, empathy and appreciation, all within a recognition of the special way that God can be present to us in the prayer.

As indicated in chapter 4, there are eight stages or movements within the prayer. While they are all equally important, the most essential parts of the prayer are each [pause] and each [wait]. It is during each one of these that we can open ourselves to the possibility of grace, and to notice that grace, before moving on to the next [pause] or [wait]. It is vital that we give ourselves sufficient time to allow that to happen. With each [pause] we must give ourselves time to stop and do what our companion is offering, and then to further wait in faith to see what it feels like to have done so. And for each [wait] we must do the same, but to also wait to allow time for the Holy Spirit to work within us, and time to notice that, and then time to notice how all that now feels as a result. It is within each [pause] and each [wait] that the transformative mystery of God's presence may be encountered. Do not pass over them quickly.

Guidelines for Each Part of the Prayer

The following sections correspond to the Companioned Prayer form. While these instructions may seem quite detailed and methodological, they are all passive, in that they do not cause anything to happen. These guidelines will not make much sense without practicing the accompanying prayer.

BEGINNING GROUP PRAYER

The Companioned Prayer meeting time can begin with a shared daily office, service or devotional, or a prayer and reading such as the Lord's Prayer, the Angelus, the daily gospel or other reading.

Starting a prayer ministry meeting or prayer session, whether with a group of people or only two people, with a general Beginning Group Prayer helps us enter our time set aside for Companioned Prayer within the full context of our faith. The Beginning Group Prayer need only be said once at the beginning of the meeting.

OPENING PRAYER

Begin by saying, In the name of the Father, of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit, we open our hearts to you, O Lord. Amen.

Then on behalf of the person you are praying with and yourself, say a personal prayer said out loud, such as: asking for Christ to be our companion; for our trust in the Lord; for the guidance of the Holy Spirit; thankfulness for this time of quiet; asking Christ to be present within our needs, inside our very brokenness, inside our joy; to help us listen inside to God's quiet call; to be mindful of our sins, and of the grace and blessings received; or, to humbly journey inside with Christ.

Then invite the other person to also say a personal prayer of concerns, challenges, intercessions, devotion, or thanksgivings in their life for themselves or others, either silently or out loud, and if silently, to say "Amen" when they are ready to continue. [wait for the other person to respond]

We begin each paired Companioned Prayer by opening our hearts to the Father, the Son and the Holy Spirit, and we also begin with personal prayers. This OPENING PRAYER is a very important part of the Companioned Prayer. It is not a prelude to Companioned Prayer; it is an integral part of it. The OPENING PRAYER establishes the experience of both the companion and the person praying within a personal relationship with God. It acknowledges our faith in God and declares our dependence upon him in this prayer. The content of the opening prayer should not be fixed, but should be left open to each person saying it according to their need or desire at the time. The opening prayer topics given in the prayer form are simply possible suggestions to assist us as we learn Companioned Prayer. If a more formal written prayer is desired, it should be said before this personal opening prayer time, during the BEGINNING GROUP PRAYER.

Notice that there are two parts to the OPENING PRAYER. The first part is a general prayer said out loud by the companion on behalf of both the companion and the person who will be praying the Companioned Prayer. Although the companion's prayer is usually offered in a general way, such as suggested by any of the examples given, it is helpful to also include personal prayers for the companion and for the person praying, naming the individual. The person who will be praying the Companioned Prayer can say their prayer out loud or silently. They can also say a general prayer, but they are encouraged to recall real needs, challenges, issues, people or thanksgivings in their life right now that they would like to bring before God's awareness. This more specific approach not only helps establish our Companioned Prayer within a very personal relationship with our Lord, it also acts as a prelude to prepare us for the ASKING GOD part of the prayer. They can also include their companion by name in their prayer. If the person has said this part of the prayer silently, then when they are finished they should say "Amen" out loud in order to let their companion know that they are ready to go on.

AS WE ARE

*Then say: Coming before God as we are, take a few minutes to notice how you physically feel. [briefly pause, and then continue] For example, let your attention go to your back and notice what that feels like. [pause] Notice your shoulders [pause], your neck [pause], your head [pause], your arms [pause], your hands [pause], your feet [pause], your legs [pause], your stomach [pause], your heart [pause], and your breathing. [longer pause] Notice the body sense of how you feel right now [pause]; and then let me know when we are ready to go on. [wait for a response, and then go to ASKING GOD]

In this prayer we come before God as we actually are; not how we wish to be. Taking time to develop an awareness of how we physically feel helps us to be humble in God's presence within the created relationship of how we really are right now. There are four primary effects from this, as well as from when we frequently allow our attention to go to how we feel in our body throughout the prayer.

First, it helps center us in who we are as a person created by God. Spending time being aware of our bodies helps us gain an appreciation for our total humanness. We are whole human beings with rational, emotional, spiritual and physical natures. God's presence is reflected within all of his creation and we are his created children. Awareness of our physical nature, for example our breathing, can be found in many prayer forms. This contemplative prayer endeavors to offer ourselves to God as we truly are: all of ourselves. This means that if we are tired, if we are sick, if we are tense, we acknowledge how we physically feel. We don't try to change it or mask it. We humbly acknowledge our human condition and relationship by simply being aware of our physical nature as it is at the time of our prayer.

Second, placing our awareness on how we physically feel helps us to remain centered in a frame of mind that is other than analytical. The essence of contemplative prayer is that we stop or slow down our analytical thinking mind's activity enough to just be receptive; to listen in our heart and be in God's presence, and to be open to his love and wisdom through his gift of the Holy Spirit. We want to allow ourselves to be drawn into his mystery and his love. But that doesn't readily happen if we are always talking, thinking, analyzing or judging. By initially and periodically letting our attention go to how we are physically feeling, we find we are less caught up in critical thinking and are more open to God's quiet movement felt within us.

Third, our body-awareness also helps us to not be caught into emotional feelings and processes in the same way that it helps us to not be so caught up in our analytical processes. This does not mean that in this prayer we are to avoid our feelings or those issues that are emotionally important to us. On the contrary, we offer ourselves to God in this prayer with our whole physical, mental and emotional selves as we actually are at the time. For example, if we are upset at the time of prayer or if we are carrying a heavy emotional issue, then that is how we are. We don't adopt an artificial attitude or mood. For example we don't try and adopt a peaceful or serene feeling, or an attitude of purity or sanctity. We pray acknowledging how we really are. But we need to pray in a manner that also promotes awareness and listening to God. Therefore, we often bring our awareness back to our bodies; for example how an issue or symbol feels in our bodies, how we seem to carry it. This allows us to be present to the issue or feeling without being caught up in the emotional content of it. This frees us to be present to our issue while simultaneously freeing us to be receptive to God's grace or presence that might come from within our very need or issue.

Fourth, awareness of our body helps us keep our prayer and our prayer subject in the present. Time spent with awareness of the body, even briefly, brings us back to the present moment. It takes us out of our future and out of our past, and grounds our experience in the here and now where God meets us.

At the beginning of this part of the prayer, the companion says to the person praying, "take a few minutes to notice how you physically feel" This means that one should not rush through this, but should be quietly attentive to how you are physically feeling, allowing your attention to be sequentially drawn to those parts of the body that might have some physical feeling, such as tenseness, soreness, etc. Here the person praying takes a quiet inventory of their body, moving along among different parts of their body and/or allowing themselves to be drawn forward, all the while noticing what their body feels like.

Often we will notice some physical sensation such as tenseness in our shoulders or stomach/solar plexus area that we would not have been aware of if we had not taken the quiet time for this intentional inventory. During the physical inventory, the companion is not looking to receive feedback, except that the person praying may wish to ask the companion to slow down or pause at various places.

Throughout this contemplative prayer we frequently bring our awareness back to the body, or back to how our prayer subject feels in our body. Yet when we do so, we retain a sense of mind-body balance. We are not abandoning the mind to attend to the body. Nor do we totally abandon what our body feels like when our attention is more mindful. We try to be fully present to the complete humanness of our prayer experience, which incorporates our created embodiedness, heart, mind, and spirit, as well as the personal gift of God's presence with us. Being present to our body helps us to be grounded in the physical reality of this complete gift.

Note that this part of the prayer ends with the companion asking you to let him or her know when you are ready for both of you to continue on together with the prayer. Simply say "okay" when you are ready to go on.

ASKING GOD

When they are ready, say: Staying with how this feels inside, and being open to God's loving presence; let me know if something comes when you ask yourself, "Of everything going on in my life, what feels like God is calling me to listen to, inside me right now?" [wait for a response]

This is the point in the prayer where we first identify what to pray about. Some forms of contemplative prayer repeat a faith-based word or phrase over and over and ask the practitioner to follow the sound or the meaning as it conveys one towards a closer experience of God's presence. Other forms of contemplation focus on understanding, letting the intellect reflect greater and greater insight into scripture or other devotional text in a personally meaningful way. However, in the Companioned Prayer form of contemplative prayer, the subject of our prayer may often be the same type of subject that is typical of our private "everyday" non-meditative prayers. For example we might pray about matters of personal concern or need, such as the health or wellbeing of a loved one, or we may pray about a past hurt, or about a challenge that we might be facing in our work, in our personal relationships, or perhaps even in our faith. Or equally we may find ourselves praying about something positive in our life, such as a new relationship or new personal opportunity, or thankfulness. But the important difference is that instead of us selecting what we pray about, in Companioned Prayer we are receptive to whatever God might identify for us as important to pray about at the time. We pause, and within our prayer and faith, we are open to God's inspiration, receptive to his will for us. We understand that he knows all of our concerns, our joys, our hurts and our challenges intimately and completely. We turn the selection over to him.

This does not mean that we ignore our concerns or issues and adopt an indifferent or detached attitude. On the contrary it is vitally important to allow ourselves to honestly acknowledge how we are, being real in our moment of prayer as we place ourselves in God's hands. But staying within our receptive mode, we let our attention turn inward and, aware of all we carry inside, we share our feelings and issues with Jesus, and we sense what feels like God is calling us to be with in prayer. In other words, of everything going on in our life, of all our personal burdens, challenges, hurts, joys and longings that we are carrying, what might God want us to spend some time with in prayer with him, in this moment?

This is not an intellectual exercise. Both the question and the selection or answer are decidedly neither analytically reasoned nor emotionally prioritized. Nor, in faith, do we imagine what God wants us to listen to and be with in prayer. It is not about how we believe we are supposed to feel or be. Instead it is about how we actually are right now, as we come before God. And it is in this truth that we are completely open to God's inspiration.

How? By being open to his loving presence. And in that loving presence we give ourselves over to God, in trust, and we wait in faith for what comes. Eventually a particular subject or item will seem to stand out, or will somehow seem to be different from our other thoughts or perceptions. Sometimes awareness of the prayer subject comes quickly and is obvious; and sometimes it is not. We can check our feeling in our body to help sense if the item feels right or on-target, and to sense if it feels okay to spend some time with it in our prayer. Often it is an item that we clearly recognize as important to us, but sometimes it is not. It might be something quite different than what we would have expected to pick for ourselves. Sometimes it is just a feeling, a sense, or even an image or memory.

Once we have something that seems to be right to pray with, we do not spend any time analyzing it. We do not try to figure it out, or try to clarify it or define it further, or try to explore its significance. Instead we purposefully accept it as it is, often with its own ambiguity of meaning or feeling. Once something feels right to journey with in prayer, we can simply say “Okay,” thereby letting our companion know that we have something and we are ready to go on.

If nothing seems to come, or if you feel bored or frustrated, it is important to let your companion know that. Or perhaps many things have come but nothing seems to stand out as special. Stay focused on your inner experience, keep your eyes closed, and just tell your companion what is going on and how you feel about it. Your companion can make suggestions that can help you determine what you might want to do next, including occasionally offering an alternative question.

GOD’S LOVE AND ACCEPTANCE

Notice how all this repeat symbol if shared feels inside, and how you carry it. [pause] With tenderness and faith, notice how it feels to take all this to the loving heart of Jesus, and to feel his gentle love and acceptance in all of this. Take your time, and then let me know when we are ready to go on. [wait]

Once we have an idea of what to pray about, the next step is to notice how it feels in our body, how we carry it; and then we notice how it feels to bring it the loving heart of Jesus, and to experience his tender love and acceptance. The prayer subject may feel positive, negative or neutral. It may be an issue of thankfulness or joy, or it may be an issue of concern or challenge, or it may be some other aspect of our life. In all cases we pause here to abide in God’s tenderness and acceptance within our involvement with our prayer issue. Sometimes our prayer subject might feel too sensitive or hurting for us to want to get close to it. But in faith we can. By allowing God to bring love, acceptance and tenderness to an issue, we will notice that we can then be more accepting and patient with the prayer issue ourselves.

In faith we silently take our prayer subject to Jesus’ sacred and loving heart. We do this with simple and devoted intention. And then we quietly wait, in faith, and abide in his flowing and very tender love. So silent and pure is his love that we may or may not notice it most of the time. But in faith we experience our prayer subject even deeper, more pronounced, within our Lord’s love, because he is with us.

Taking our prayer subject to Jesus’ loving heart is not a theological or intellectual action. Nor do we picture an image of his loving heart and focus or act within the image. This step of the prayer is not a devotion to the Sacred Heart of Jesus in the sense of a traditional devotion in which one meditates and adores Jesus and his loving grace. Instead, in this step we humbly bring our prayer subject and ourselves to Christ, to his sacred and divine heart, in simple intent, surrendering ourselves to him, allowing our self, our soul, to be open to him as our Lord. It is from God that love flows, and in this reality of his extraordinary love and mercy, we humbly surrender to him, placing ourselves in his good hands and heart. That is all we need to do in this step of the prayer. In faith we open ourselves to receive God’s love into who we are in our fragility, in our brokenness, in our needs, and in how we own and hold our prayer issue, knowing he is with us in our prayer. Knowing that Christ is our Companion in our prayer, that he journeys with us as we hold our tender or sensitive issues in his loving heart, helps us to also be his instrument of love here on earth in our relationships, and even to those issues inside us that need his healing love.

It is very important to note that the purpose of taking our prayer issue to Jesus and experiencing his gentle love and acceptance is not to nullify or neutralize the feeling of our prayer subject or issue. It is not a matter of making it or ourselves “feel better” or “feel good.” Nor should we replace or substitute our prayer issue with feelings, thoughts or images of faith, such as Jesus’ love or Mary’s compassion. We are not handing our prayer issue off to God, giving it to Jesus for him to take from us. The purpose of intentionally taking the time to abide in Jesus’ love at this point in the prayer is to more closely experience our prayer subject within his presence. We have received or identified our prayer issue with God’s help, and we want to acknowledge, accept and know it, and carry it forward into our prayer with him, and not abandon it.

In this contemplative prayer we will find God’s presence and grace gifted to us from within the very prayer issue we are carrying. In fact, often the grace or gift that we experience in our prayer is in proportion to the degree that we honestly acknowledge, with humility and faith, our actual prayer issue, and not avoid or replace it with a “good feeling”, “religious or devotional feeling”, or “good intention”. At the time of our prayer, our real prayer issue is our cross that we are called to carry, and that we willingly take up. It is essential to us and to our prayer. Being with it in Jesus’ love and acceptance allows us to be more accepting and patient with our issue; allows us to be closer to it within our faith relationship with God, rather than more distant from it. This is true for prayer issues that feel positive as well as those that feel negative. Perhaps we do not have the strength or patience to forgive or be accepting of an issue of pain or hurt in a way that will allow us to be closer to it and to carry it forward in our prayer. But in faith we know that with Jesus as our loving Companion, we can.

Sometimes in this contemplative prayer it is easy to feel Jesus’ compassion, love or tenderness with a prayer issue. Sometimes it is not so easy. So spend some time with it, and if it is not easy, let your companion know so that he or she may help you. Your companion can suggest different ways for you to be with your issue. Your companion may even suggest just taking a portion or piece of your issue and bringing that to Jesus’ gentle loving heart, and seeing if you can hold just that piece. In any case, if you would like help with this, just ask. And in doing so it is not necessary to share what your issue is if you do not wish to.

When we are with our prayer issue within God’s love and acceptance, it is important to notice how our prayer issue feels in our body. Often it is reflected physically in some way. Typically as a result of allowing it to feel some patience or gentleness, we might notice that the issue physically feels lighter or less heavy in our body. Or we may feel less tense, more relaxed. Sometimes when an issue seems to start off with a physically noticeable correlation, such as a tightness or pressure in some area of our body, we might even notice a specific change in that area. In any case, noticing how it feels in our body to be with our prayer issue in this gentle faith-filled way helps us to remain receptive to God and not caught up in the emotion or analysis of an issue. It also greatly helps us remain close to our prayer issue.

More information on this subject can be found in chapter 3’s Jesus Loves Us and chapter 11’s The Loving Heart of Jesus.

LETTING GO IN THE LOVING HEART OF JESUS

When they are ready to go on:* Notice how it feels in your body to be with this, in this gentle, caring, faith-filled way. Allow your awareness to seep into your body, to settle in, and sense how all this feels inside. [pause]

Once we begin to feel Jesus' loving presence it is important to pause, to stop, and to allow yourself to really notice how it feels to be with our prayer subject in this gentle, faith-filled way. Staying with how that feels in our body, we accept and let go into the overall experience of our prayer issue as we embrace it within the faith and love of Jesus.

We say "all this" because we recognize that there is much more here than just our feelings. Letting go into how all this feels inside is not about surrendering into our feelings. It is about surrendering into the sense of God's presence within how our prayer subject feels inside – into the sense of "something more"; that deep sense of the mystery of God that our faith calls us to be open to – as we abide or surrender into his loving presence, into his sacred heart. In humility and trust we pause to notice that, and to let go or surrender into all of this as a preparation for continuing with our prayer.

Continue with:* Within the gentle loving heart of Jesus, wait in openness and faith to see if it feels like there is anything else that God might want you to notice, such as a word, image, feeling or memory that seems to somehow fit with the way this whole thing feels, and then let me know. [wait]

In this part of the prayer we continue to be open to God's grace as we notice how it feels to be with our prayer subject within the gentle presence of our Lord, within the gentle sacred heart of Jesus. Abiding in him, we remain open to his love, knowing he continues to be personally with us and our prayer subject as we pray. Staying with how all this feels in our body, we let go into how all that feels inside. Again there is no analysis here. The letting go is not letting go into critical thinking or meditations on meaning. Likewise it is not letting go into emotional "what ifs" or emotional reactions. Instead it is a letting go into the overall experience of our prayer issue as we hold it in the faith and love of Jesus. And since we know that he knows us completely and is with us in our prayer experience, we let go into how all about it feels. We say "all" because we acknowledge that there can be more to our prayer issue and prayer experience than we are aware of. For "...we hope for what we do not see, we wait for it with patience. Likewise the Spirit helps us in our weakness; for we do not know how to pray as we ought, but that very Spirit intercedes with sighs too deep for words." (Romans 8:25-26) So we just trust in God and let go into it all.

Then we wait in faith, in God's presence. We wait without demands, without an agenda. We wait receptively, being open to the Holy Spirit, for some special movement, symbol or sense that somehow feels connected or related to our prayer subject; somehow connected to how we are all feeling inside. We wait to notice an image, or a word, or feeling, or memory that feels somehow different from our other thoughts and feelings. When it comes it may carry some personal meaning for us, or just as frequently there will be no clear meaning. The connection may not be obvious. It may not even make any sense. It just seems or feels connected. In any case, once we recognize the symbol we do not try to define its relevance. In some cases we may not even recognize what it is. We do not try to define it or try to explore its meaning. We just know that it is our symbol, and we let our companion know that something has come.

Sometimes we wait and it feels like nothing is coming. But we must allow time for symbols and subjects to form; to allow time to notice; and in due course to allow time to nurture. If we don't give ourselves enough time or if we have expectations, we might become bored or impatient. Or we might feel we are wasting our companion's time. Or we might be embarrassed that nothing is happening. When any of this happens, it is important to let our companion know the situation. Just keep the eyes closed and tell your companion what is going on. If you feel some frustration or performance anxiety about it, let your companion know about that too. Then he or she can make suggestions or ask you questions that might facilitate your prayer experience. You might be asked to go back to the body feeling of your prayer subject. Or you might be asked to just notice the body feeling of nothing happening. Even within that, God can call us forward.

Be assured that this contemplative prayer is not a performance-based exercise. Success is not measured by what comes. There is no right or wrong experience. Our companion knows that. Our companion has no expectations for us. It's a prayer of just being present and open within God's loving compassion, and being available should anything come. We are powerless to make anything happen. Our companion is also powerless to make anything happen. We can only place ourselves in an attitude of gentle faith in God's care, being honest within ourselves, and receptive to his word. That is the prayer. Beyond surrendering into that trust, we can do nothing.

Sometimes our prayer subject might feel particularly intense. This can be the case whether our prayer subject is positive or challenging. When it dominates our attention it is important to give ourselves plenty of time to be with it as we wait for anything else to possibly come. We may want to briefly notice how it feels in our body. It may take a while for the intensity of our prayer subject to subside enough for us to be able to begin to notice any new subtleties or symbols that might come forth. So in Jesus' loving heart we wait with gentleness, faith and patience, knowing that Jesus is with us, holding us in his love.

If something does come, when we recognize that a symbol is present, we can let our companion know that something has come by just saying, "Okay." Or if we want to, we can share something of our symbol. For example, we might very briefly state what it is. If we do share the symbol, we should share just that essence of it that most contains the feel of it. We don't need to give elaborate descriptions that capture all of it. For example, if the symbol is an image of a path by a stream leading up a mountain with boulders and forests, we might just say the word "path." Or if what comes is an issue which carries much emotion, we need not describe the issue or the emotion. We can just say a word or two about the feeling of the issue as it has come to us. Our companion doesn't need to know all about it. Likewise, there is no need for our companion to understand its personal significance. We want to stay with the sense or feel of the symbol, and talking about it or trying to describe it will constrain and take us away from our interior experience. Often what comes is so uniquely subtle or precious that it cannot be easily spoken in a word or two. In such cases, trying to clarify it or speak it may feel awkward and take us away from it. In that case, just stay with whatever came, and let your companion know that something has come by saying, "Okay."

BEING OPEN TO GOD'S SPIRIT

- a. If something comes, reflect back the symbol if shared, pause, and then ask,
- b. Does this feel right, inside, to journey with some more? [wait for a response]
If “no” go to RESTING IN GOD'S PRESENCE.
- c. If “yes” say: Ask yourself, “How does all this repeat symbol if shared now feel in my body?” [pause] With gentleness and faith, let go into how all this feels inside; and let me know if anything comes that fits the way this all now feels. [wait]
If something comes, go back to a.
- Repeat a, b, c as long as the person wants to continue, or as time allows.
- When they are ready to stop, go to RESTING IN GOD'S PRESENCE.

If we do elect to share something of the symbol, our companion will repeat it back to us. If we have shared a description, he or she will just pick out a word or short phrase that best captures the essence of what has been shared. When we hear our companion repeat the symbol, it seems to help us move from what was to what is; from our prayer issue to the symbol received. When we hear it we become more present to it.

Then our companion will continue by asking you if it feels right, inside, to journey with it some more. Again, this is not an intellectual or analytical question. Nor are we looking for a “good feeling”. This is not a self-selection process. Just briefly notice if it feels right to go on, to spend some more time being present to how this is now. It has shifted from our original prayer subject to some symbol that has come; some word or image, thought, memory or feeling. The question posed asks us to check inside to see if it feels okay to continue our prayer journey with this new symbol instead of the original subject or previous symbol.

If it is okay, just say “Yes.” If unsure, check how it seems to feel in your body. We rarely have a clear idea of how the prayer journey unfolds. Generally, unless it feels like the prayer has come to a natural stopping place, or unless it feels like we definitely don't feel right about proceeding, we favor continuing. Often there might be just some sense of something more or some sense of other possibilities. When we hear our symbol reflected back to us, we often find within it a subtle desirability to continue, in which we are further drawn into our prayer by the Holy Spirit.

However, if you are still unsure, let your companion know. If you have an idea of why you are unsure, let your companion know that too. Alternately you may feel that it would be right to continue but you have some hesitancy. Again, let your companion know. If what comes feels difficult or challenging, or if you are bored or frustrated, let your companion know. He or she can then ask you if it would feel right to pause within God's love and acceptance. Or you might initially recognize that abiding in Jesus' love and acceptance would be beneficial. If so, let your companion know. He or she can then assist you in doing that if you wish, by repeating the step, GOD'S LOVE AND ACCEPTANCE.

When you indicate to your companion that you wish to continue your prayer journey with what came, then your companion will ask you to notice how all this now feels in your body. Or if you have shared your symbol, he or she will ask you to notice how it feels in your body. And then you will be asked to let go into how all about it feels, to let go into all of it and to wait in faith to see if there is anything else that God might want you to notice within all of it. Again you wait to see if something comes, like a word, image, feeling or memory, that seems to somehow fit or connect with the way the whole thing feels. And then, as before, let your companion know that something has come.

When you let your companion know that something has come, you will again be asked if it feels right to continue on your prayer journey with it a little more. You can proceed in cycling through this pattern of “a”, “b” and “c” for as long as it feels right inside to proceed, or until any pre-allotted time has run out. At each stage you are the one who determines whether or not to continue.

When you are ready to stop, just let your companion know. Usually you will continue until there is a sense that the prayer has gone as far as it should for now, and that you’ve come to a natural stopping place. Sometimes when you are ready to stop there is a feeling of resolution and understanding. Sometimes there might also be a feeling of unfinishedness. If there is a feeling of unfinishedness, you might let your companion know that you wish to stop but that there is some sense of unfinishedness with all of it. Your companion might suggest that you pause and ask God how he might want you to be with all of it until you can be with it in prayer again.

That is the format of the central part of the prayer. But it does not convey what happens inside as you do it. What happens inside is very personal and special. What happens inside often feels like a gift from God. Through faith and by God’s loving grace we are drawn from our beginning prayer subject to symbols that may or may not contain meaning, to some understanding and grace given to us by God. This understanding usually relates to our original prayer subject. We intuitively know that such an understanding is not arrived at by our own making. We have not logically developed it, and frequently we know that it is an understanding that is beyond our capacity to generate logically on our own. Along with this understanding is a greater sense of peace and love, as shared by God. There can also be a sense of resolution or relief; a sense of received mercy that we can physically feel in our body. We feel that what we have received has been a gift, not from any sense of deserving, but just out of God’s love for us.

We also know that we didn’t make any of this happen, and neither did our companion. The movement of all this within the prayer is the movement of the Holy Spirit. It is God’s gift to us. And yet it is personal and loving, as Jesus so wondrously provides. We find ourselves in a sense of awe and reverence. We know that we are not alone, that God cares for us and is present in our life. Each time we pray, we take that with us after the prayer is over.

Of course when we pray we do not expect to receive resolution of our prayer issue. It would be presumptuous to expect any result. Some of our prayer-needs go very deep and need to be brought to God in prayer many times before some sense of graced movement may be perceived. In fact looking for a result, expecting a resolution, can block our relationship with Christ and our prayer experience because true prayer is simply surrender to God with openness, humility and honesty. Just taking the time to be with our prayer issue in faith and asking God to be with us, is in itself a healing and trusting gift of surrender. We can be grateful just for that.

RESTING IN GOD'S PRESENCE

When the person is ready to stop, or if the time has run out: Okay; let's nurture this special place you've come to inside. Pause here and let go into God's presence within all of this, resting in the quiet tenderness of his Spirit for a while. And then let me know when we are ready to go on. [wait]

When we are ready to end our prayer, we just let our companion know that we are ready to stop. However, stopping is not an abrupt process. It too is a guided process. Continue to keep your eyes closed, and your companion will suggest that you pause and rest within this special place you have come to inside. Just rest here, not expecting any further movement. Just let go into the quiet tenderness of God's Spirit for as long as you like, being within God's silent presence. Resting here, we are no longer concerned about our prayer issue. We are no longer anticipating any movement of the Holy Spirit. We find that these things are not of immediate importance. What is important is letting go into and being close to God.

This prayer movement is not simply an ending appended to Companioned Prayer; it is a very important and integral part of the prayer experience. We give it time to allow ourselves to be exposed to God's silent presence in our heart. For more information on this see "Resting in God's Presence" in chapter 11.

When you are ready to end your Companioned Prayer, again let your companion know that you are ready for you both to proceed to the closing prayer.

CLOSING PRAYER

When they are ready to end, say: As you savor all of this, let yourself know that this is God's personal love and grace, experienced and felt inside us. [pause] Staying in this holy and precious gift, you may wish to silently offer a prayer in response; and then when you are ready, just slowly open the eyes.

The person praying may also end with an "Amen", the sign of the cross, the doxology or other closing prayer said out loud or silently.

The companion may also say out loud a brief prayer of thanks.

In closing, our companion reminds us that what we have experienced is God's personal love and grace, experienced and felt inside us. This is an opportunity for us to inwardly know and acknowledge the reality of our experience; that it is God's presence and grace given as gift out of his love for us. This confirmation also helps us know this reality after our prayer is over.

Our companion suggests that we stay within this sense of holy gift and silently offer a personal prayer in response to our inner contemplative experience. This silent responsive prayer should be the natural outcome of our contemplative experience. We should be open to praying in whatever way feels right at the time and not presume in advance that a specific prayer or prayer type is best. For example, we might find that we wish to thank the Lord. Or we might find that we wish to ask him to help us keep safe any new understanding we may have received and to help us to use it in faith and trust. Or perhaps we might find that we want to ask God for help in going forward with the issue we have come to know more about through our prayer journey. There can be any number of appropriate prayer responses, so the best approach is to remain open to God's movement within us, knowing with humility and love that we are communing with God, and then to devote ourselves fully in that communion.

Then when we are ready, say "Amen" or a similar prayer ending, and just slowly open the eyes. Our companion may also say a brief closing prayer out loud.

CONCLUDING GROUP PRAYER

When the Companioned Prayer meeting time is over (everyone has had an opportunity for prayer, or the time has come to an end), the shared daily office, service or devotional may be concluded, or a concluding prayer and blessing may be said out loud by someone with the opportunity for others to also participate either out loud or silently if they so choose.

The concluding group prayer is an opportunity for a prayer and blessing to be said at the end of the prayer meeting. This shared prayer experience furthers our recognition that we are one body in Christ, and that we share our Christian experience and journey in him.

Guidelines for the Companion

Jesus... got up from the table, took off his outer robe, and tied a towel around himself. Then he poured water into a basin and began to wash the disciples' feet and to wipe them with the towel that was tied around him. He came to Simon Peter, who said to him, "Lord, are you going to wash my feet?" Jesus answered, "You do not know now what I am doing, but later you will understand." ... If I, your Lord and Teacher, have washed your feet, you also ought to wash one another's feet. For I have set you an example, that you also should do as I have done to you."

John 13:4-7, 14-15

The Role of the Companion

The role of the companion is to assist the person who is praying surrender to God in faith and trust within their prayer experience, within the loving heart of Jesus. The companion's role is to honor the person's spiritual journey and their relationship with God by accompanying the person in their prayer. In this sense, the companion does not set the pace or dictate what to do next. The companion follows the desires of the person praying, who is in turn open to the Holy Spirit. The companion makes suggestions and invites the person praying to give feedback. But the instructions given by the companion are in response to what the person praying elects to say or do.

The companion knows from their own experiences in Companioned Prayer that Christ is present and known from within their prayer experiences. They honor the sacred relationship between the person praying and God, and know that they accompany the person in their prayer journey by their invitation. As such, the role of the companion is very limited to just providing some outside structure or format to the interior dynamic prayer experience. Thus, the companion knows that they are powerless to make anything happen within that experience. They cannot manipulate or cause any inner experiences. They can only help create a prayer setting in which the person praying can find a humble and genuine faith-centered perspective of trust and surrender within their faith, as appropriate to the stage of the prayer that the person is in. If the companion tries to step beyond that role by inserting their will or their judgment into the person's prayer experience, they will block or hinder the prayer.

Therefore, the companion must be non-intrusive. Respect the person's privacy. Do not present an expectation of sharing or of being involved in what the person is praying about or journeying with. Keep the instructions as brief as possible. Say what you have to say and get out of the way. What is important is not what is going on between the companion and the person praying. What is important is what is going on between the person praying and God.

When companioning someone in their prayer, be mindful of your role. Be present from within your own faith; from within that part of you where you know grace and gift are felt. Companion from the presence of Christ within you. If you have just finished the prayer yourself, stay in that holy grace and give of yourself from there. Use a tone of voice and quality of presence that demonstrates your respect for what they are doing. Know that the person may be spending time with sensitive issues or challenges. Having a faith-centered quality of presence that is respectful, attentive, caring and patient is the most important thing that you can do. It is even more important than getting the words of the prayer just right. It is our gift of this caring presence to each other that can help the person open the doors of faith inside their prayer.

General Guidelines

Before companioning someone in Companioned Prayer, it is good to know some general guidelines associated with the companioning process.

If your prayer partner has not already informed you of any special instructions or preferences, inquire if they have any. For example, time constraints, alternative prayer formats, or any hearing difficulties, and compensate as necessary. It is best to sit close together, usually beside or slightly askew rather than directly facing the person.

As stated in chapter 5, the most essential parts of the prayer are during each [pause] and each [wait]. It is vital that you give your prayer partner sufficient time to not only do what you are offering, but to also allow them to notice anything that may be happening within themselves. Therefore do not rush through the [pauses]. Also allow plenty of time at each [wait]. It is within the time that we give for each [pause] and each [wait] that God quietly reaches out to us. So do not pass over them quickly.

Throughout this process, if you have given an instruction and are waiting for a response, and you have waited what you think is a sufficient time and no response is forthcoming, have patience, wait longer. You cannot assume that nothing is going on inside the person, or that they have forgotten what to do. If you have waited well beyond a reasonable time and you are concerned that they may just be sitting there waiting for you, you may repeat the question or directly ask if they are ready to go on. Sometimes the mind wanders, and the companion's presence and words can help the person praying to stay focused on their inner journey with God.

If at any point in the process they have responded and you do not remember where in the prayer process you are at, simply ask them. This prayer process includes give-and-take between the companion and the person praying. Sometimes a person will respond to your request for feedback by saying, "I don't know" or "Nothing is happening." Often when this happens, they just need a little more time to sit with it. Many people are used to quick answers from their mind, and are not used to waiting for a more intuitive body-felt knowing to emerge. In such cases, simply ask, "Would it feel right to just sit and wait in faith, being open to whatever might come, just paying attention to how it feels in your body?"

The person praying leads the process according to their inner experience. The companion simply facilitates their prayer by following the desires of the person praying. If at any point the person praying wishes to stop before the complete Companioned Prayer is over, then stop. However, you might ask them if it would be okay to stop with some quiet reflection, and if they say “yes”, then lead them through the concluding parts. If at any time during the prayer process they open their eyes and act as if they have finished, e.g., they just sit there without speaking, or begin talking about their experience as if the prayer session were over, ask them if they would like to continue with the prayer or if they are finished. If they aren’t sure, ask them if it would be okay to close the eyes, and just sit quietly for a few moments, noticing how it all feels inside. Wait a while and then ask them again if they would like to continue in the prayer.

Remember to keep all instructions invitational and not a direction or demand, and always include a phrase that lets them know how to respond to you when they are ready to go on. Do not engage in significant dialog until their contemplative prayer has been concluded. Do not offer advice about the issues they are praying about. If they ask for advice, indicate that you can discuss it with them some time after the Companioned Prayer session is over; and if possible wait until you are in a different setting. The companion knows from their own prayer experience and faith that the answers to the person’s issues, and the grace to allow the person to receive them, will come from God from within the prayer experience. The companion trusts in God’s relationship with the person praying, and does not provide advice or suggestions germane to what the person is journeying with in their prayer, no matter how helpful that advice might otherwise seem.

The companion should be with the person in prayer with respect, empathy, compassion and faith. The companion offers a loving compassionate presence of openness, gentleness and faith.

Guidelines for Each Part of the Prayer

BEGINNING GROUP PRAYER

The Companioned Prayer meeting time can begin with a shared daily office, service or devotional, or a prayer and reading such as the Lord’s Prayer, the Angelus, the daily gospel or other reading.

The Beginning Group Prayer should allow everyone in the group an opportunity to participate in this part of the prayer meeting, either silently or out loud. Then break into groups of two or three to continue with Companioned Prayer. See chapter 7 for more information on possible group meeting formats.

OPENING PRAYER

Begin by saying, In the name of the Father, of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit, we open our hearts to you, O Lord. Amen.

Then on behalf of the person you are praying with and yourself, say a personal prayer said out loud, such as: asking for Christ to be our companion; for our trust in the Lord; for the guidance of the Holy Spirit; thankfulness for this time of quiet; asking Christ to be present within our needs, inside our very brokenness, inside our joy; to help us listen inside to God’s quiet call; to be mindful of our sins, and of the grace and blessings received; or, to humbly journey inside with Christ.

Then invite the other person to also say a personal prayer of concerns, challenges, intercessions, devotion, or thanksgivings in their life for themselves or others, either silently or out loud, and if silently, to say “Amen” when they are ready to continue. [wait for the other person to respond]

The companion begins the paired Companioned Prayer with a personal prayer said out loud, starting with acknowledgement that we are praying in the name of the Father, Son and Holy Spirit. The personal prayer should not ask for specific results of the shared contemplative prayer experience. Instead a prayer for God to be present, for help in being open to his love and guidance, is more appropriate. Some sample suggestions are provided in the OPENING PRAYER guidelines above. In this opening prayer the companion is encouraged to include the other person by name if it feels appropriate to do so. After your prayer, invite the person about to enter into contemplative prayer to also say a personal prayer. It is important that when stating this invitation that the person be told that they may say their prayer silently if they wish.

The person about to enter into the contemplative prayer should not feel any pressure to say their opening prayer out loud, or to spend any “significant” time in their opening prayer. The person should feel that their contemplative prayer experience is between them and God, and not between them and their companion. The companion should be transparent and non-intrusive to the person’s interior prayer process. The companion should not be judgmental in any way, nor should they want the person praying to “get it right” or to have certain preconceived experiences or outcomes. The companion’s opening prayer should set the tone for a non-manipulative prayerful experience, without expectations or demands. Set the example for total reliance upon faith, upon God, surrendering into God through our contemplative prayer experience.

AS WE ARE

*Then say: Coming before God as we are, take a few minutes to notice how you physically feel. [briefly pause, and then continue] For example, let your attention go to your back and notice what that feels like. [pause] Notice your shoulders [pause], your neck [pause], your head [pause], your arms [pause], your hands [pause], your feet [pause], your legs [pause], your stomach [pause], your heart [pause], and your breathing. [longer pause] Notice the body sense of how you feel right now [pause]; and then let me know when we are ready to go on. [wait for a response, and then go to ASKING GOD]

This physical inventory should be done slowly, giving the person time to pause and notice what their body feels like. Do not rush through thinking that this is just a preparation before getting to the “real prayer.” This physical inventory is an important part of noticing ourselves as God’s physically created creatures, and that we are purposefully embodied and part of God’s creation. Our physical nature is part of our humanness, an integral part of who we are as created by God, and therefore part of our prayer relationship with God. Noticing this also helps us be aware of knowing this relationship outside of just our mind or intellect, and helps us retain this “other knowing” throughout the contemplative prayer experience.

The purpose of the inventory is not to achieve a state of quiet or peace, although this often is an outcome. If a person is tense or upset, then we want to encourage the person to notice how that feels in their body. Therefore, do not say words that encourage the person to become calm or peaceful or relaxed. That is not the focus of this step. Instead, encourage the person to notice how they are really feeling physically right now in their current state. This is the state they are in, the state that their prayer begins in. This contemplative prayer begins in the reality of who they are right now, not in who they might think they should be. We come to God in our real state, which includes our physical condition, whether that be broken, or in joy, or in doubt, or in any other way; even in our tiredness or tenseness.

When leading the person through various parts of their body, do this slowly. If they express any discomfort with doing this, stop and ask them if they would like to proceed with it or if they would like to skip it at least for now. If they would like to stop, ask them if it would feel okay to just sit with a general awareness of their overall body-feel in a gentle way. If they say yes, invite them to just notice how their body is and then invite them to give that feeling some gentleness, some tenderness. Invite them to do that for a while and to then let you know when they are ready to go on.

Sometimes when leading a person through this physical inventory, they may let you know specific things that they are feeling. Or perhaps they might tell you prior to the prayer. For example they might say they have a headache, tense neck or sore back. Or they might indicate an overall physical feeling like tiredness. If they identify a physical condition, give them more time in that area when leading them through the inventory. If they've identified an overall condition or physical feeling, include it in the list of physical things for them to notice. When leading a person through this inventory, avoid terms or areas that might be associated with sexuality.

As the person goes through their physical inventory, they may also express out loud some issues or feelings that may come up. This is not, however, the time for the person to spend time with these except to notice them. If they have shared an issue or feeling at a specific point in the inventory, then just allow a little more time while they are with that physical area. If, as indicated by their shared expressions, they seem to be following the issue instead of being with their body, just invite them to notice how their issue feels in their body, in order to get them back to the body feeling.

Some people come into the prayer experience so wrapped up in their head-thinking that they are unable to feel their body. (Note that this may indicate an avoidance of physical or emotional stress or trauma. See chapter 11 for more information on this subject.) When a person cannot feel their body, you might ask them to do some simple stretching and breathing, and then do the physical inventory again. Or invite them to notice any general background feelings of how they are physically feeling. If they respond with a simple, "I feel fine," ask them to notice how that "fine" feels in their body. Once they pick up on any sense of their body, continue slowly with the inventory.

ASKING GOD

When they are ready, say: Staying with how this feels inside, and being open to God's loving presence; let me know if something comes when you ask yourself, "Of everything going on in my life, what feels like God is calling me to listen to, inside me right now?" [wait for a response]
--

When the person praying has indicated that they are ready to continue, invite them into God's loving presence to ask God what feels right for them to listen to, inside. Use the words contained in the prayer format for this. Notice that the words invite the person to ask himself or herself instead of asking God. This is because if they are instructed to ask God directly it usually takes the person out of their body feeling and puts them in their intellect. From there it is difficult to be open to further movement in this prayer. It is in our heart, not our intellect, that we find Jesus' will for us. So we move our attention away from our intellect, and in humble faith we await his will for us in the mysteries of our heart. The instructions ask the person to notice "what feels like God is calling me to listen to, inside me right now." Because the question is asking the person to be open to an intuitive type of received feeling, sense or awakened issue, people new to the prayer experience may ask that the question be repeated. Or they may be unsure of identifying such an issue when it presents itself. Or they might just sit quietly waiting for a long time. If a seemingly long time has passed (particularly when the person is new to the prayer) it is okay to interrupt the person and ask, "Did something come?" They may say "yes," "no," "I don't know" or may indicate that a number of things came. If they say "yes" proceed with the next step, GOD'S LOVE AND ACCEPTANCE.

If nothing came, invite them to go back to their body-feeling, noticing how their body feels and noticing any physical sensations, for example, using an abbreviated form of AS WE ARE, such as:

Let your attention go to different parts of your body, pausing to notice any physical sensations and any issues or feelings that might surface as you do this. Take your time, and then let me know when you've done that and we are ready to go on. [wait for a response]

Be sure to include asking them to let you know when they have done that and are ready to go on. When ready to go on, repeat the instructions for ASKING GOD. If this again results in nothing coming, ask them if it would be okay to sit with how all that feels inside. It is amazing how God can use this feeling of being stuck or nothing coming as a doorway for his Spirit. Then proceed with the next step, GOD'S LOVE AND ACCEPTANCE.

Sometimes a person may simply say that they would like some help with this. If that is all they say, you will need some additional feedback in order to give them the most useful suggestions. You may simply ask if anything came.

If the person indicates that they aren't sure if something came or if they indicate that a number of things came, they are letting you know that some things came but they are unclear on discerning if this is something that God is calling them to listen to. When learning this prayer it is common for people to wonder, "How do I know if it is something that God is calling me to listen to?" The answer is that we really don't know for sure. In this contemplative prayer of faith we are opening ourselves up to God's presence and his will for us as best we can. We are simply allowing ourselves to be receptive to his direction. How do we do that? By being centered in our faith and trust in God, and simultaneously just noticing when thoughts or feelings or images or memories come that seem to somehow stand out. Perhaps they have slightly more energy, or carry a subtle feeling with them that they are to be noticed. Perhaps we find ourselves going back to them repeatedly. If the person praying is having difficulty discerning what God might be calling them to be with in prayer, it is the role of the companion to assist them to do so. The simplest way is to ask them to notice what has come, notice how it all feels in their body, how they carry it. After a brief pause, ask them to notice if something that came might have slightly more energy or carries a subtle feeling that it should be noticed, and then to let you know what they find.

Sometimes when a person identifies their prayer issue, they may say it (or something about it) out loud. If they do, simply repeat it out loud to them in the same tone as they stated it, where the instructions state “repeat symbol if shared” in the next step, GOD’S LOVE AND ACCEPTANCE. There is no preference, however, for them to say it out loud.

GOD’S LOVE AND ACCEPTANCE

Notice how all this repeat symbol if shared feels inside, and how you carry it. [pause] With tenderness and faith, notice how it feels to take all this to the loving heart of Jesus, and to feel his gentle love and acceptance in all of this. Take your time, and then let me know when we are ready to go on. [wait]

The companion is present to the person praying from within their own faith. The companion understands that Christ is present within the shared companioned prayer experience, and that He is present within the prayer experience of the person praying. In faith, the companion invites the person praying to pause here and bring his prayer issue to Jesus, and to wait and notice Jesus’ gentle loving compassion. The purpose of this step is not to sooth away the person’s prayer issue, but rather to allow God’s love and tenderness into the issue so that the person may be closer to it or more accepting of it, so that they can carry it forward in prayer.

If the person indicates that they are having difficulty taking it to our Lord’s love, or if they say they would like some help with this, there are a number of ways that you might assist them. You might say something like either of the following:

Take a few moments to ask Jesus to tenderly enfold you and embrace you, as you gently hold your prayer issue, noticing what this feels like. Then let me know when we are ready to go on, or if you would like more help with this.

Knowing that Christ is present with us, take a moment to ask him to give you his love so that it might flow through you into your prayer issue. [pause] Gently hold your prayer issue in your arms and let Jesus’ tender love and acceptance be present to all of this. Take your time noticing what this feels like, and let me know if you are able to do this or not.

If they would like more help with doing this you can suggest other ways that will bring their awareness of God’s gentle love to their issue. For example you might suggest that the person recall a Bible passage where Jesus gives compassion and acceptance to someone in need, and to see if they can imagine what it would feel like, while holding their issue, to receive such love and acceptance, and to let you know if they are able to do that or not. If they can, ask them to notice how that feels in their body. You can also let them know that it is okay for them to place a caring hand on where they might feel it in their body.

These alternatives should not be used in lieu of the wording of GOD’S LOVE AND ACCEPTANCE, and should not be used routinely.

If the person is having difficulty being with their prayer subject with compassion and gentleness, ask them to check inside and see what feels like the right thing to do. Always honor the wishes of the person praying. If they want to stop, help them do so. If they want to set this issue aside and ask if there might be some other issue that would feel okay to journey with, help them do that. If they say they are feeling challenged with an emotional issues but want to continue, you might ask them to check inside to see if there might be just a piece of the whole thing that they could be with. If they say yes, then see if they can take just this piece to Jesus' loving heart, and sense some gentle tenderness and acceptance. For more possible instructions see "God's Love and Acceptance" in chapter 11.

Work with the person in faith and with gentleness in your voice and manner. Help the person feel in their body both their issue and God's love, in order to help them get out of their head thinking about it and out of their emotional response to it. Respect the person's privacy and do not ask about the nature of their prayer issue. Their prayer is between them and God, not between you and them. Be sure not to project an attitude that being able to experience their issue within God's compassion is necessary for success. Such a viewpoint would be completely erroneous since there is no "success" with this prayer. We are simply being in God's presence with our prayer issue. The person praying should never be encouraged to stay with an issue that doesn't feel right inside themselves to be with. The fact that the person has identified an issue that they feel God is calling them to be with, is in itself an amazing thing that can open spiritual possibilities and grace.

LETTING GO IN THE LOVING HEART OF JESUS

When they are ready to go on: Notice how it feels in your body to be with this, in this gentle, caring, faith-filled way. Allow your awareness to seep into your body, to settle in, and sense how all this feels inside. [pause] Within the gentle loving heart of Jesus, wait in openness and faith to see if it feels like there is anything else that God might want you to notice, such as a word, image, feeling or memory that seems to somehow fit with the way this whole thing feels, and then let me know. [wait]

After saying the first two sentences, pause awhile to give the person praying time to do this, usually about ten seconds. Then continue. You do not need to wait for the person to say "okay" or for them to provide some other response before proceeding. In this case, requiring them to respond will take them out of their inner experience of settling into how it all feels inside.

After giving the continued instructions in this step, we wait for the person to let us know that something has come. As before in ASKING GOD, the person might have a variety of responses. Other than something coming, the most common response is that nothing is happening. Often people who are new to the prayer simply don't know to be patient in the prayer. If that happens you can ask them if it would feel okay to just sit a little longer with how they are, just letting go into all of that. Let them know that it is okay to take their time, and then to just let you know if something comes. In this way the companion can let the person know that you don't have time-driven performance expectations of them.

Sometimes when a person says that nothing is happening, there is an edge of frustration, boredom or impatience in their voice, or they may state these feelings plainly. When that happens, you might ask the person if it would be okay to be with how all that feels. If they say okay, then repeat the initial instructions in this step.

Sometimes a person will sit with their prayer subject awhile and then lose it. Their attention will wander and at some point they will let you know that it is gone. When this happens, ask them to check inside and see what would feel like the right thing to do, and then to let you know what they find. You can suggest that they might want to take a few moments to see if it comes back, recalling how it felt in the body; or they may want to go back and ask if there might be something else to listen and journey with; or they may want to just sit with the feeling of having lost it and see if anything comes from that.

BEING OPEN TO GOD'S SPIRIT

- a. If something comes, reflect back the symbol if shared, pause, and then ask,
- b. Does this feel right, inside, to journey with some more? [wait for a response]
If “no” go to RESTING IN GOD'S PRESENCE.
- c. If “yes” say: Ask yourself, “How does all this repeat symbol if shared now feel in my body?” [pause] With gentleness and faith, let go into how all this feels inside; and let me know if anything comes that fits the way this all now feels. [wait]
If something comes, go back to a.
- Repeat a, b, c as long as the person wants to continue, or as time allows.*
- When they are ready to stop, go to RESTING IN GOD'S PRESENCE.*

When something does come, the person may either say something to indicate that something has come, like “okay” “yes” or “something has come”. Then go to “b” asking, “Does this feel right, inside, to journey with some more?”

Or the person may share something of what came, such as a word, image, feeling or memory. If the person has shared a word or symbol of what came, repeat it back to them exactly as they said it. For example if they said the word “path” repeat “path” back to them with the same tone as it was said. If the person praying said a phrase or whole sentences, just pick out a word or two of theirs that might best capture the whole feeling of what they have shared, and repeat it with the tone given.

If you are not sure what they said, do not repeat the word with a questioning voice. Instead briefly ask them to repeat it so you can hear it correctly, saying something like, “Please repeat that.” Remember that you do not need to know anything about the meaning or significance of their prayer subject or shared symbol. It does not need to make sense to you.

When repeating a shared word or symbol, do not place an article or modifier in front of it. For example, if the symbol shared is “path” do not say “the path” or “a path.” Just say the word “path.” After repeating the symbol, go on to “b” asking, “Does this feel right, inside, to journey with some more?”

Responses to “b”, “Does this feel right, inside, to journey with some more?” can be varied. If they say “yes” or “I think so”, go on to “c”. If they say “no” honor their desire to stop at least for now, by going on to RESTING IN GOD'S PRESENCE. If they are not sure, ask if they would like to just sit with it for a little while, letting it feel some of God's love and acceptance, and then to let you know if it feels okay to journey with some more. If they say okay, use the instructions for GOD'S LOVE AND ACCEPTANCE or something similar. After they have done that go to "b". If they want to stop, go to RESTING IN GOD'S PRESENCE.

If you are not certain if their response to "b" indicates whether they wish to stop at least for now, or if they wish to continue journeying with their prayer subject within this movement of the prayer, you can simply ask them for clarification. This situation is common when, in response to "a" they have been saying "Yes" but then you come to a point where they say, "We can go on" or "We can continue." In this situation, you can simply ask, "Do you wish to continue to journey with your prayer subject, or do you wish to stop at least for now?"

Responses to "b" may also be "yes, but..." They may have added a qualifier or something else that tells you more about their situation. For example, they may say, "yes I think so but it is a very big step for me" or "Yes, but it's kind of intimidating." Whenever you sense that their prayer issue or symbol is personally challenging, you can ask them if it would feel right to pause and be with it within Jesus' gentle tenderness and acceptance. This might also be the case when they share their symbol. For example the shared symbol itself or the tone of voice or other expression (like tears) may indicate a possible challenge or special sensitivity. It is usually best to ask rather than going directly into God's love and acceptance. If they say yes, work with them empathetically and in faith to help them feel God's love within their issue. Your role in this is to help them stay with their prayer subject or symbol, if that is what they want to do.

As long as the person wants to continue, and as long as time allows, continue cycling through "a" "b" and "c." Remember that you are assisting the person in their personal prayer with God, helping them to be open to the movement of his Holy Spirit felt within them. You are not directing them; they are directing you in response to what they are experiencing within themselves.

Sometimes a person will silently cycle through a number of symbols before they choose to let you know that one came. That is okay. They may even silently continue staying with the inner movement of the Holy Spirit until they are ready to stop. Therefore, if someone is sitting in silence for a long time, do not assume that nothing is happening within them. If nothing is happening, it is their responsibility to let you know. You should not break into their prayer unless you are running out of available time. If you are running out of time, just gently say something like, "We are running out of time. Please let me know when you are at an appropriate place to stop, at least for now." If the time constraint was only from their side, you might say, "We are running out of time. Please let me know if you wish to continue; or let me know when you are at an appropriate place to stop, at least for now." Be sure to allow enough time to finish with the remaining prayer steps.

RESTING IN GOD'S PRESENCE

When the person is ready to stop, or if the time has run out: Okay; let's nurture this special place you've come to inside. Pause here and let go into God's presence within all of this, resting in the quiet tenderness of his Spirit for a while. And then let me know when we are ready to go on. [wait]

In this step the companion's role is to encourage the person praying to rest in God's care without any thought or expectation of inner movement. Here the person is practicing just being in God's presence; letting go into God's Spirit for a while. Then the person will let you know when they are ready to end.

Unless they are taking more time as discussed in chapter 11, the person will usually pause here only for a few minutes before indicating they are ready to go on with an "okay" or short statement like "I'm ready." However, sometimes something specific will come as a result of this resting in God's presence. A person might have thought they were finished, but then within this silence, they understand that they are to listen and journey some more at this time. Or they may understand some other closing aspect of their walk with God. Therefore, do not be surprised if they say that something has come that they would like to spend some time with. If they do, go back to step "c" in BEING OPEN TO GOD'S SPIRIT.

Sometimes when the person praying has stated that they wish to stop, they may also have a feeling that their walk with God with their issue is not over. They may feel that it is appropriate to stop at least for now, but overall, they know that their journey with their issue will continue. As a companion, we should recognize this and not be surprised if we hear the person express some feeling of unfinishedness. However even if that is the case, you should invite them to rest in God's presence, within their feeling of unfinishedness as well as with any feelings of forward movement or grace. They should be invited to rest within God's tender presence as they may find it within, however they may be. Also see chapter 11's section titled Stopping with Feelings of Unfinishedness.

CLOSING PRAYER

When they are ready to end, say: As you savor all of this, let yourself know that this is God's personal love and grace, experienced and felt inside us. [pause] Staying in this holy and precious gift, you may wish to silently offer a prayer in response; and then when you are ready, just slowly open the eyes.

The person praying may also end with an "Amen", the sign of the cross, the doxology, or other closing prayer said out loud or silently.

The companion may also say out loud a brief prayer of thanks.

In this part of the prayer, the companion affirms God's love for the person praying, as a directly felt and understood experience. When the person praying hears this, it helps to solidify their appreciation for this love and for God's active presence in their life, both here at this closing time of the prayer, as well as afterwards when the person goes out into their activities. After a pause to let the person hear and reflect on this, the companion invites the person to say a silent personal prayer in response to God's love and grace, felt and known within themselves.

CONCLUDING GROUP PRAYER

When the Companioned Prayer meeting time is over (everyone has had an opportunity for prayer, or the time has come to an end), the shared daily office, service or devotional may be concluded, or a concluding prayer and blessing may be said out loud by someone with the opportunity for others to also participate either out loud or silently if they so choose.

The Concluding Group Prayer is said at the end of the prayer meeting after everyone has had an opportunity for Companioned Prayer. For example, it may be the conclusion of a daily office such as Morning Prayer or Evening Prayer that was begun with the Beginning Group Prayer. Prior to the Concluding Group Prayer the ministry meeting may also have had additional sharing and discussion. See the next chapter for a discussion of Companioned Prayer group ministry meetings.

The Companion Experience

Although this chapter focuses on how to be a prayer companion to the person who is praying, it is also useful to consider other aspects of the companion's experience. While the person praying is directing their attention to their inner experience within Christ's presence, the companion is also open to Christ's presence and to the gift of his Holy Spirit. Often while companionship the other person, and while waiting for feedback, you may notice that your own thoughts, reflections and feelings may become more prayerfully meditative or contemplative. Or you may wish to pray for the person you are companionship, walking together with him or her in our shared spirit in Christ.

Within this time of humble, quiet waiting and prayerful surrender, perhaps some aspect of personal importance may surface that you may want to take to Jesus in Companioned Prayer. You can close your eyes to notice it further, and to briefly see if there is any body feel associated with it. You may want to briefly ask Jesus to be with you with this when you have an opportunity to be with him more fully in prayer at a later time. You may also want to jot it down in a journal to help you keep it fresh for later. If you do find yourself drawn to some potential prayer subject, be sure to also keep your attention available for the person whom you are companionship.

In any case, it is common to find the time of companionship to be a quiet, reflective and prayerful time in which we feel a greater openness to God's loving presence and grace. That in itself is worth taking the time to especially notice and cherish.

Chapter 7

Prayer Partners and Groups

Where two or three are gathered in my name, I am there among them.

Fellowships in Faith

Prayer partners are wonderful. Your appreciation for your partner will grow and deepen appreciably over time. You will find yourselves on an extraordinary journey together that neither of you had imagined. You will be sharing your spiritual gifts and challenges in intimacy and trust, held in God's love.

Therefore, do not underestimate the value or gift of a prayer partner or prayer group; or for that matter, of being a prayer companion for your partner. In addition it is easier to learn and continue the practice with another person, or by taking turns in a small group. Most people find it easier to let go into their prayer experience if they are not trying to figure out where they are at within the prayer format. People often ask if they couldn't just make an audio recording of the prayer steps and play them back with a start and stop button. I always answer that it is not the same; a recorder is not a suitable substitute for a live companion. There is no substitute for a compassionate person who supports you in your faith journey (and as you support them), and who can respond sensitively and appropriately to the surprising twists and turns that can happen in your prayer. Knowing that such a person is present with you in and of itself greatly facilitates your ability to surrender to God within your prayer experience.

In addition, there seems to be something else going on when you pray with a companion. Even though your companion usually will not know the content or meaning of your prayer as it is unfolding, he or she is nevertheless very present to and a part of your prayer experience. When your companion is, through their own faith and prayer experiences, engaged with you and supporting your prayer journey, we usually find that there is a sense of God's presence. God's presence is sensed within the experience of the person praying, within the experience of the companion, and also within the experience that they are sharing. It is felt in the dynamic of the prayer as it is relayed between them when it is occurring. Jesus said that when two or more are gathered in his name, he will be present. That is the experience of Companioned Prayer. He is present within us as our Companion when we pray the prayer, and he is present when we come together to companion each other in the prayer.

Besides being a richer experience when we are companioning one another, having a companion often means that you have set up regular times to get together for prayer. Having a set routine will greatly facilitate a regular prayer practice. Even when we have a prescribed time assigned for prayer, we will be far more likely to stay to it if we know that another person is counting on our presence. Thus it is highly recommended to have established times, whether it is with another person or with a small group or with both. For example you might have a routine where you pray with a friend or your spouse once a week, meet with a small group once a week, and perhaps pray another time by yourself during the week. Additional times can be established for prayer with other family members such as children or parents (see chapter 9), and for prayer outreach (see chapter 10.)

Also when we meet regularly with another person or in a small group, we become friends, sharing of ourselves and being changed by each other. We discover how we are each on our spiritual journey and how it is unfolding in our everyday lives. We become a small Christian community, nurturing each other through love, faith and fellowship. We discover a bond of God's intimate love is found between and within us, and Christ's presence is known.

Whether with an individual or a small group, we should have a common understanding that we meet and pray together to support our own and each other's personal faith journeys. With this common understanding and appreciation, everyone will be sensitive to the very special supportive role that each person gives to one another. Each person is there to support and honor the other person's unique spiritual growth and experience, understanding that each person's path may be different while it is unfolding before and within them, yet leading to God in the best possible way. Thus we know that one person's experiences of God and grace may not necessarily be what is appropriate for another person. God calls us each in our own unique way, and as companions to one another in prayer, we know and honor that in each other.

Sharing and Discussion

Yet, one of the natural outcomes of praying together, either with one other person or within a small group, is some expression of sharing. When we share something of our contemplative prayer experiences we learn not only how we each experience God's love and mercy in ways that are unique to us, but we also discover that we are a faith community growing together in our awareness of God's presence. We find God active in us individually and within us as a group, calling us all to a greater sense of being, loving and giving from within our faith experience. However, when sharing, everyone must understand some basic rules.

First, sharing and discussion should never be the main activity of the prayer group. The primary purpose of the group is to pray. Talking about it and sharing our experiences must remain very much secondary.

Second, no one should feel compelled or obliged to share anything at all. There should not be even the slightest hint of any pressure or expectation by any individual or by the group for anyone to share. For example, in a group it would be inappropriate to take turns going around in a circle with each person in turn sharing. No one should ever be put in the position that if they do not wish to share, they have to actively decline to do so. For many of us, retaining the privacy of our prayer most often feels right. As Christ said, we are to go to our inner room and pray in secret (Matthew 6:5-8). Companioned Prayer honors that. We turn inward and our prayer is silent within us and God. We should not feel compelled to reveal our sacred, private prayer experiences unless called upon by the Holy Spirit for a good known by God.

Third, if someone does share, unless that person says otherwise, it should never be spoken of outside of the group, not even to a spouse or priest. Everything shared must remain completely confidential and not shared, even in confidence. The person who had the prayer experience is the only one who may decide whom to share it with.

Fourth, when sharing it is important that no one engage in advice or critical comment with respect to specific experiences, issues or challenges that a person may be dealing with. In order to provide the necessary continuity of the prayer environment, we must never feel like we will be analyzed or judged in any way. The group cannot become an advice or encounter group. Advice, if sought or given, should be clearly outside of the time set aside for the Companioned Prayer gathering. If someone asks for help with an issue they are dealing with, someone else should say that they will speak with them about it afterwards when they can devote time together without taking up the time of the group. However, if someone asks for advice on using the prayer format, either as companion or as the person praying, discussion is encouraged.

Likewise, Companioned Prayer groups should avoid discussions that may include the feeling of imposed values or judgments, including discussions of theology or theological issues if they are presented or discussed in the sense of what is correct or right for everyone. The purpose of the group is to nurture the personal inner experience of grace and faith without any pressure of adhering to or acceptance of a set of beliefs. No one in the group should use the group format, group experiences or individual experiences to develop or advance any particular doctrinal creed or interpretation for others in the group. To do so is not only manipulative, but it shows a lack of spiritual maturity in that the person lacks the faith and understanding that in the Companioned Prayer experience God calls us each to new understandings individually and uniquely in the best possible way. Therefore we avoid discussions of any type that impose judgments or values on others. We assume the role of a companion and participate in the group in a way that honors and supports each person's personal prayer journey. We are not there to convert or "save" anyone. Likewise we are not there to publicly define and defend our own views and beliefs. Anyone feeling a need to engage in theological debate as a result of a prayer experience should do so outside of the group or companioning setting. (See chapter 14 for a discussion of the Church and Companioned Prayer, and the relationship of the prayer experience with theology.)

This is not meant in any way to discourage an individual from sharing his or her interpretation or understanding of their own prayer experience, or of their own personal spiritual journey. On the contrary, they are encouraged to do so to the degree that an individual feels moved to do so by the Holy Spirit within our immediate Christian community, and as acceptable within the group's agreed upon functional format. However, if someone does share their experience and does so within a theological or faith based perspective, the others in the group should be supportive of the person and their experience without reinterpretation or debate. There is a marked difference between open supportive discussions of one's own personal faith journey and others' reflections on such shared personal inner experiences and understandings, compared to the defining, defending or imposing of specific theological ideas or perspectives of faith as the "correct" interpretation.

Even though theological discussions based on shared experiences can be enriching, if any participants of the group have difficulty distinguishing between dogmatic dialog (or a need to be right) and open supportive faith based sharing, then it is best to set aside other times to do anything more than to simply be supportive. For example, the group may wish to periodically have a Companioned Prayer retreat in which some time is set aside for discussions of theological interpretation. But even in that setting, such dialog must be understood by everyone to be “invitational” in nature and not in any way felt as a prerequisite for acceptance into a “faith club.” The group should be careful to keep its focus on supporting each other’s prayer experience in a faith based, open and non-judgmental way. It is our loving presence to each other in such a safe and supporting manner that is truly the real essence of spiritual dialog.

Healthy Prayer Groups

Prayer groups should be faith environments of compassion and community. Additionally all participants should understand that:

- We should not have to do the prayer “perfectly” nor expect anyone else to do it “perfectly” either.
- We should not have a need to impose our own definition or interpretation of theological, personal or social values on others in the group.
- The primary purpose of the group is to support each other in prayer; to actually pray. Talking about it and sharing our experiences and faith journeys must not displace the time of our prayer experience.
- No one should feel compelled or obliged to share anything at all.
- If someone does share, unless that person says otherwise, everything shared must remain completely confidential and not shared outside the group, even in confidence.
- When sharing it is important that no one engage in advice or critical comment with respect to specific experiences, issues or challenges that a person may be dealing with.
- If advice is sought, unless it is about the prayer process itself, it should be sought or provided outside of the time set aside for the contemplative prayer gathering.
- Discussions of any type that impose judgments or values on others should be avoided, including discussions of theology or theological issues. Such discussions should be outside of the routine prayer group experience.
- All participants have a responsibility to foster a faith environment of compassion, openness and gentleness, honoring the unique spiritual and personal journeys of each other.
- Although someone might volunteer to coordinate communication, planning or follow-up, no one should dominate the group. The group should not have a hierarchical structure.

It is important that the prayer group and those supporting it recognize that its focus is to support a faith-based prayer experience. Companioned Prayer partners and groups are not a substitute for professional therapy or medical treatment if that is what is needed.

This does not mean that it is inappropriate for participants to deal with significant personal issues or challenges within their prayer. But these issues and challenges are between them and God, not between them and their prayer group or prayer partner. It is the role of the prayer group or partner to help create a loving and supportive environment that, within the context of faith, nurtures each person's personal faith journey and prayer experience. For example, during a prayer inner feelings and issues can often shift and express themselves in many surprising ways, sometimes in laughter, sometimes in tears. The prayer companion may help the person to gently be with those feelings, to hold them, and to invite Jesus' tender love into them if that is what the person wants to do. When the person praying gets in touch with sensitive issues or when tears come, he or she may sometimes feel that there may be something within those tears that God is gently calling them to listen to and understand. The person praying and the companion understand that within the context of faith, mercy and grace can often be gifted by God from within the very personal pain or issues that are challenging us.

Group Meeting Formats

Each Companioned Prayer group should establish its own meeting format according to the desires of its participants. In addition to time set aside for Companioned Prayer, the meeting may also include a brief time for sharing of experiences, time for planning, and/or time for sharing of readings. Before companionship each other, groups typically begin with a time of silence before the Blessed Sacrament, a prayer said out loud on behalf of the group, or a short reading of scripture or of the works of a saint. Alternatively, the Companioned Prayer session can be incorporated within another regular prayer, meeting, or liturgy, such as within Morning Prayer or Evening Prayer of the Liturgy of the Hours.

When it is time to companion one another in Companioned Prayer, depending upon the size of the group, its participants will likely want to temporarily break up into smaller groups of two or three people, with everyone taking turns having an opportunity to both companion and pray. In a group of three the person who has just finished praying sits out while the other two people engage in the practice. For example, in a group of three: A companions (→) B, C→A, and B→C. In a group of four: A→B, C→D, B→C, and D→A. While sitting out, some people may prefer to remain with the small group and silently follow along, while others may wish to go off to a place of quiet, such as a sanctuary or chapel if available, for personal prayer or reflection. Often people find it rewarding to keep a journal, and may use the quiet time immediately after their prayer to write in their journal notebook.

Sharing of experiences may occur within the small groups or within the larger group or both. Sometimes it will feel right to share immediately after a prayer experience, and sometimes it won't. Be open to what feels right to do at the moment, honoring how you feel while also honoring the parameters accepted by your prayer partner or group. For example, sometimes you will feel that you need to share, while at other times it will feel right to honor your more quiet reflective silence. Often a pause of a minute or two between prayers will be just enough space to invite the person to begin to share if they want to without any stated invitation. Therefore, do not force a particular pattern, but be open to how the Holy Spirit moves you. Sometimes when you share before the next person prays, their prayer experience is affected by your sharing. This is a continuance of the Holy Spirit active through your faith as community. We find ourselves linked through faith and love in our journey to God and spiritual wholeness. Nevertheless, the priority about sharing should be on what feels right immediately after praying, honoring how we are inside, how the Holy Spirit has left us, without manipulation. The best of all possible outcomes for ourselves and for our prayer partner or group comes when we fully trust God to lead us.

At some point when the group is all together someone may wish to share something inspirational related to their contemplative prayer experience. For example, someone might bring a poem, a reading from scripture, the words of a saint or other spiritual leader, a short passage from a book or article being read, etcetera. Or perhaps the group might want to have this type of sharing and reflection after the time set aside for contemplative prayer. Or perhaps instead, the group might want to discuss plans for Companioned Prayer ministry or outreach activities or other related functions. In any case, the group format should follow the wishes of the group and be open to change as desired. At the end of the meeting the group may wish to conclude with a prayer said out loud, with an opportunity for others to also offer a prayer if they wish.

Faith, Fellowship and Our Journey Together in Christ

It is important to note that the atmosphere of faith, trust and friendship is critical for prayer partners and groups to work. What should be occurring is more than simply being a companion to each other's prayers. Participants should also allow the others in the group to get to know them. This requires that each person be open to one another, to share in friendship and fellowship. Learn to see from the other person's perspective, to feel their pain and challenges, and their joys and gifts received. Allow yourself to be changed by your prayer partner and group participants. Let the Holy Spirit work through all of you together as well as individually. And then companion each other in prayer from that level of intimacy and love for each other.

This does not happen overnight, and should not be forced. But it can be nurtured. If the group understands in the beginning, or as new people join it, that such relationships are anticipated to form, participants will feel freer to risk being both vulnerable and friendly. Even get-togethers outside of the contemplative prayer time can help nurture our relationships within the group. When we have that quality of presence where we can give and receive the caring respect and support for each other without the interior walls that we usually put up, then we will truly feel free to trust and surrender to the Lord in our prayer. And the experience will be much more than just leading another person through a prayer format. We will know the living presence of Christ within our midst, calling us forward into faith, and enlivening us in the Holy Spirit.

Congregations may wish to have a number of Companioned Prayer groups to maximize the opportunity for people to participate. The size of a prayer group should not be so large as to discourage intimacy, trust, sharing and friendship. An average of around eight to ten people showing up is about maximum, or they may be larger if they also incorporate this smaller group size for trust and sharing. In addition, some groups may form that focus on a particular ministry, outreach or shared experience. Or other groups may be oriented to a particular age group, such as teens. However in all cases, the primary emphasis within all Companioned Prayer groups should be the time set aside for the prayer experience itself, rather than talking about it, sharing, planning or other discussion. As much as talking about it might be stimulating, it is the actual inner prayer experience of God's personal mercy and grace that is transforming and motivating.

This is not to negate the importance of understanding how our personal experiences and our personal spiritual development are a part of the larger tradition of the Christian personal journey. In fact, as one begins to experience the inner awakening of God's presence within us from Companioned Prayer, and as we continue to experience and be transformed by God's grace through regular prayer practice, our understanding of our personal faith formation within the context of the Church's teachings and the personal experiences and transformative journeys of the saints becomes critical. When we find ourselves walking in a new path for us, it is good to know that this path has been followed by countless other devoted Christians, and to know something of their experiences and directions for us. Thus we might want to participate in personal spiritual direction offered by those suitably experienced and trained by the Church, as well as participate in further faith formation development. Some people from your Church's Companioned Prayer ministry groups, or perhaps your entire group, may wish to form a lay prayer and formation support group under the direction and with the support of your Church's priest or other ministers. This group can provide the venue, confidentiality, trust and openness where discussions and sharing within the love and prompting of God can continue outside of the Companioned Prayer ministry group experience. In this additional support group of committed Christians we can share books, discussions, our experiences, discoveries, retreats, activities, fellowship, prayer, scripture and Church teachings, together in community all exploring the further and ongoing inner experience of God's silent transformation of us from within our selves, in our heart and soul.

Finally, perhaps the most effective form of Companioned Prayer group ministry is to combine three vital aspects of this ministry within the same group: the basic ministry of companionship each other in prayer, the spiritual formation described immediately above, and Companioned Prayer service outreach to people in need as described in chapter 10. Even teaching and learning the prayer can be most effectively accomplished from this integrative dynamic approach.

Your Companioned Prayer ministry group should be an integral part of your church or religious community's activities and purpose. Your Companioned Prayer ministry group should build up the entire church and religious community of which it is a part, supporting the mission to bring the grace of Christ fully into the hearts and minds of all people.

A Model of an Integrative Approach

A suggested model of the above integrated approach for a Companioned Prayer ministry group is offered below. As a way to learn the prayer, this approach is also offered as an alternative to the structured teaching approach of chapter 12.

Ministry Overview

The focus of the Companioned Prayer group ministry is to create a small group environment of caring, fellowship and prayer, which supports our shared growth in our relationship with Christ. The ministry will focus on developing an intimate community in which we are called to open our hearts to each other and to the Holy Spirit in the living of our lives and in our faith, and to experience Christ in each other and in ourselves.

This ministry provides for informal learning of Companioned Prayer within the ongoing Companioned Prayer group ministry, primarily from practice, sharing and mentoring. This form of learning is in lieu of formal classroom type of training, although it is suggested that it is supplemented by occasional Companioned Prayer retreats and similar venues.

Group Activities

A Companioned Prayer group should meet at least twice a month for activities in the following areas:

1. Spiritual Companionship: Share and listen to our personal stories, become friends, and discover God's loving presence among us.
2. Spiritual Formation: Provide spiritual inquiry and/or guidance through brief discussions, readings or group prayer.
3. Companioned Prayer: Practice Companioned Prayer together in groups of two, three or four.
4. Welcoming and Mentoring: Welcome new people to Companioned Prayer and match people who have some experience with Companioned Prayer with people who are new to the prayer.
5. Coordinating and Sharing Service Outreach: At a suitable time, determine how and where to offer Companioned Prayer in service outreach, and to share some aspects of the outreach.
6. Planning Complementary Activities: Occasional activities outside the group, which support the group's purpose, can be planned.

These six activities will help foster communities of compassion and faith in which God's presence is experienced. These six activities are discussed below.

Spiritual Companionship

An essential function of the group is for participants to get to know and support each other personally. The group is not a place to simply do something (such as pray or study) without sharing of ourselves and listening to another person's journey. Participants are encouraged to create a supportive faith-filled environment where we can share and listen to our personal stories and challenges, and their effect on our spiritual life, faith and faith practices. Simple group exercises can facilitate our discoveries of our common humanity and Christian spirituality. When shared, listened to, and accepted within the caring embrace of God's love, all participants will come to know Christ's sacred presence in ourselves, in each other, and in community. And in listening to others with openness and compassion, we allow them to listen to how God is present within themselves.

This Spiritual Companionship is fellowship in the Holy Spirit. It is not simply friendship and shared activities. It is God's Holy Spirit and Christ's presence calling us into himself through each other. In this sense we also discover how our community continues to nurture this awareness over time.

Spiritual Formation

Part of the meeting time can include some time for an experience and discussion of a topic of Christian spiritual formation. This should be a process that invites inquiry as well as facilitated discussion and sharing. This could be a facilitated group experience of Lectio divina with sharing and discussion. Or an individual may want to share their understanding or some readings from a favorite saint or doctor of the Church or of scripture, and relate it to a personal experience or challenge they or others in the group are experiencing. Another example would be for someone to facilitate a discussion of how an aspect of prayer (e.g., Companioned Prayer) relates to a basic tenet of Christian faith or our relationship with God (Father, Son and Holy Spirit). At each meeting a volunteer can be requested to lead a Lectio divina session or a short discussion of their choice at a later meeting.

This aspect of the meeting is one of facilitated prayer or discussion based on Christian tradition and wisdom. It will encourage everyone to understand how Christians in the past and present have struggled to be formed in Christ, how Christ calls us, and how such understandings support our prayer practices and prayer experiences. It will also help us appreciate how our Companioned Prayer experiences nurture our openness to God's presence in our liturgy and sacraments. A key element of this will be a common understanding that personal spiritual experiences are not the goal; they are only our starting points, as they awaken and spur us to develop a closer relationship with God during our entire lifetime through our worship, prayer and service. We will also discover the importance of community to this understanding and growth.

Companioned Prayer

A significant period of meeting time must be set aside for Companioned Prayer, a contemplative prayer of interior listening and quiet. In this portion of the meeting participants break into small groups of two, three or four people to individually companion each other.

Deep interior prayer is the time when we open ourselves to the inner discovery of God's quiet presence within our person and within our personal challenges, story and journey. Discussion cannot replace this sacred interior encounter. Prayer of this type enlivens and transforms us from within by God's grace and helps form our Christian journey. It must have the highest priority within the meeting time.

Welcoming and Mentoring

A basic function of the group meeting is to welcome people who have had no training or exposure to Companioned Prayer. However rather than use the meeting time to teach the prayer method, new people are simply invited to participate in the group to the extent that they wish, including being companioned in prayer and companionship others. A formal course or program of learning the prayer is not a prerequisite or necessarily expected. People will be responsible for learning and continuing to practice Companioned Prayer to the extent that they are interested and moved by God to do so. A half-hour of instruction prior to the group meetings is also an option – see chapter 12’s An Integrative Teaching Approach.

Instead of a formal course, each person that desires to learn the prayer beyond simply experiencing it in the group, can be paired up with another person in the group who has more experience and knowledge of the prayer. The more experienced person would then serve as the new person’s “Prayer Partner” or sponsor. The Prayer Partner and the new person should be encouraged to meet outside of the group meeting time to get to know each other, and to practice Companioned Prayer together. In doing so the Prayer Partner will also be encouraged to provide some basic instruction in Companioned Prayer in response to the needs or questions of the person who is new to the prayer. The new person will also be encouraged to study on their own the material available at the www.CompanionedPrayer.org website (which is also in this book). During the mentoring process, the new person will also be encouraged to regularly and fully participate in the group Companioned Prayer meetings.

This mentoring process should be explained and offered to any new participants at the meeting, or in any personal discussions prior to the person’s first attendance. A person may elect to initially engage in the mentoring process or may wait until they feel ready. However, new people who want to continue with the prayer group will be encouraged to accept a Prayer Partner if only to have someone available to answer questions outside of the group, to gain an appreciation that relationships and support are part of the Companioned Prayer group dynamics, and to ensure that the Companioned Prayer group does not become a closed-knit personal club that is not welcoming to everyone.

This approach calls upon the leaders to be emotionally free within themselves to be okay with people only participating to the degree they feel called to do so, even if that means only one meeting. We must let God inspire each person in the best manner for that person, and we must trust that God is doing so, regardless of the degree of any individual’s participation in the group. However, experience has shown that unless people practice the prayer over time, and especially if augmented by a structured learning program such as contained in chapter 12, most people will not learn to appreciate the value of continued practice. Therefore it is important to always offer such programs and to encourage people who have not participated in such a program to do so, even as they continue to participate in ongoing Companioned Prayer ministry meetings.

Coordinating and Sharing Service Outreach

After some months of initial maturing in the practice and art Companioned Prayer, in the group experience (sharing, trust, etc), and in mentoring, a group will be encouraged to consider discerning the potential for inclusion of Companioned Prayer in service outreach. The group, or those who are interested, could select what service they would like to engage in, how to do it, and how to bring Companioned Prayer into the service offering. For example, consideration might be given for service to the homebound, to people in hospitals, to homeless, teens at risk, prisoners, and so on. Participants who elect to engage in service outreach should discuss their service plans with the group’s Pastor before engaging in outreach. Companioned Prayer outreach services may, with the Pastor’s oversight, be coordinated within other parish service ministries, and may require additional training in both the outreach service and in Companioned Prayer ministry.

Service outreach should have three intended outcomes: 1) It should provide a depth of prayer experience within the person who is being served; 2) The experience of getting to know and companion a person in need should challenge the companion to grow in their faith and appreciation of other people and their personal situation; and 3) It should provide valuable feedback regarding how to best share Companioned Prayer with people in need, and should provide mutual support to those who are engaged in this outreach service. Mutual support can include sharing within the Spiritual Companionship component of the Companioned Prayer Ministry group meetings, as long as anonymity of the individuals who are served is maintained.

This service aspect of Companioned Prayer ministry should be more than simply companionship of other people in prayer. It should include getting to know others and letting them get to know us. The ministry includes openness and transformation of the minister. See chapter 10 of this book for more about using Companioned Prayer in service ministry, including confidentiality, ministry support and feedback, and so on.

Planning Complementary Activities

Group meetings can also be supplemented with complementary activities that occur outside of the group meeting. A small part of the group meeting can be used to plan these activities, with additional planning and preparation occurring outside of the meetings as needed. The types of activities and their frequency can be determined by the group. Activities may include people from more than one Companioned Prayer ministry group.

Sample types of complementary group activities outside of regular meetings include:

- Social get-togethers (e.g., potlucks) at church or at parishioners' homes, e.g., quarterly
- Short run Companioned Prayer training (e.g., an afternoon) focusing on requested areas for improvement or more in-depth training in a specific subject area. Just a few examples are:
 - Companioned Prayer with kids
 - Extended time within the Resting in God's Presence portion of the prayer
 - How to open oneself to God's love in prayer
 - Challenges of using the prayer within a specific service ministry
- Off-site annual or periodic retreats that can combine prayer, instruction, worship, sharing, fellowship, reflection, private time, and discussion
- Support or planning meetings for using Companioned Prayer in a service outreach ministry.
- Group experiences of other traditional forms of contemplative prayer (such as Lectio divina, Taize prayer, Labyrinth prayer, the Examen and others) to better appreciate how our Companioned Prayer experiences are also found within these forms of interior prayer.
- Presentations by Companioned Prayer ministry participants to other ministry groups or parishioners to let them know about the Companioned Prayer program.

Group Meeting Format

It will always be a challenge to incorporate the above activities into the available meeting time. A suggested meeting time could be one-and-a-half to two hours, potentially allocated as follows, or as the group decides:

- Spiritual Companionship – 15 minutes
- Spiritual Formation – 15 minutes
- Companioned Prayer – 50 to 80 minutes
- Welcoming and Mentoring – 5 minutes
- Planning for Service Outreach or Complementary Activities – 5 minutes

The length of time for Companioned Prayer will depend upon the number of people who companion each other: either two, three or four. 80 minutes is suggested for three people plus some sharing within the larger group. Times may vary depending upon the individuals praying.

Meetings should be regularly scheduled and multiple groups in the same parish can meet at different times. All regular meetings should be at the group's church (unless a meeting venue is specific to a service ministry), and each group should meet in a location that does not change from meeting to meeting. All groups should have a designated coordinator/facilitator who can ensure that all participants have an equal opportunity to participate and that no single individual dominates the group.

Praying by Oneself

The body is meant... for the Lord, and the Lord for the body. ...Do you not know that your bodies are members of Christ? Do you not know that your body is a temple of the Holy Spirit within you, which you have from God, and that you are not your own? For you were bought with a price; therefore glorify God in your body.

1st Corinthians 6:13b, 15a, 19-20

I Am With You Always

Although there are many advantages to having someone guide you through the prayer process, sometimes it is not possible to have another person with you when you wish to pray. For such times, a revised format of the prayer in chapter 4 is presented below. Even when another person is not available, Christ will still be your Companion with you when you pray. Know that he is present to you. His personal love, grace and mercy are available throughout your prayer experience, including within the depths of those very issues that you might find yourself being called to be with. He knows you personally, knows your personal challenges and pains completely, and loves you with a personal and sustaining love beyond measure. It is within this faith that you will be companioned even when you pray “by yourself.”

Usually people discover that it is easier to do Companioned Prayer by yourself after you have had some experience of the prayer with others. Even so, most people do not consider practicing Companioned Prayer by themselves as a substitute for practicing it with a companion, but rather as an additional opportunity for prayer. Experiencing Companioned Prayer with a prayer partner or group should be an established routine practice before adding the experience of praying by oneself. This is not only because the prayer is easier to do with another person, but also because we grow in faith in community. The very real nurturing of spirit, faith and understanding provided by others within the partner and group prayer experience cannot be provided any other way. Therefore, while praying by oneself is an essential supplement to the group or partner experience, it is not a substitute for it.

Nonetheless, there are times when the complete privacy and lack of concern of any time constraints afforded by praying by oneself may allow you to let go further into your prayer experience and to stay with it longer than you might in a group or partner setting. For example you may want to take more time within the RESTING IN GOD’S SPIRIT part of the prayer as described in that section in chapter 11. Therefore, do not put off praying whenever you feel the need, or whenever a partner is not available.

The Basic Prayer Form When Praying by Yourself

When engaged in Companioned Prayer by yourself, you may want to keep a list of just the headings or a simple outline of the form nearby so that you can glance at it if necessary to remind yourself where you are in the process. You may also want to include the prayer within a daily office such as Morning Prayer, Evening Prayer or other similar reading or devotional. An example of a simple Companioned Prayer outline is illustrated below.

Opening Prayer – Begin with a personal prayer to God.

As We Are – Take time to come before God as we actually are, noticing how you physically feel right now.

Asking God – Ask what feels like God is calling you to spend some time with, in prayer.

God's Love and Acceptance – Notice how this all feels inside, and take your prayer subject to Jesus' loving heart, and feel his gentle love and acceptance.

Letting Go in the Loving Heart of Jesus – Let go into all of this with gentleness, caring, and faith; and wait attentively within Jesus' love to see if anything else comes.

Being Open to God's Spirit – Notice and follow any interior movement from God.

Resting in God's Presence – Quietly rest within God's tender presence.

Closing Prayer – Silently conclude with a personal prayer.

OPENING PRAYER

Begin the Companioned Prayer by saying, In the name of the Father, of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit, I open my heart to you, O Lord. Then say a personal prayer, such as: asking for Christ to be our companion; for our trust in the Lord; for the guidance of the Holy Spirit; thankfulness for this time of quiet; asking Christ to be present within our needs, inside our very brokenness, inside our joy; to help us listen inside to God's quiet call; to be mindful of our sins, and of the grace and blessings received; or to humbly journey inside with Christ; etc.

AS WE ARE

Coming before God as we are, take a few minutes to notice how you physically feel. [briefly pause, and then continue] For example, let your attention go to your back and notice what that feels like. [pause] Notice your shoulders [pause], your neck [pause], your head [pause], your arms [pause], your hands [pause], your feet [pause], your legs [pause], your stomach [pause], your heart [pause], and your breathing. [longer pause] Notice the body sense of how you feel right now. [pause] When you are ready to go on, go to ASKING GOD.

ASKING GOD

When you are ready, stay with how this feels inside, and being open to God's loving presence; be aware if something comes when you silently ask yourself, "Of everything going on in my life, what feels like God is calling me to listen to, inside me right now?" [wait for a response]

GOD'S LOVE AND ACCEPTANCE

Now with tenderness and faith, notice how it feels to take all this repeat symbol if desired to the loving heart of Jesus, and to feel his gentle love and acceptance in all of this. Take your time, allowing yourself to feel God's tender love within all this.

LETTING GO IN THE LOVING HEART OF JESUS

When you are ready to go on: Notice how it feels in your body to be with this, in this gentle, caring, faith-filled way. Allow your awareness to seep into your body, to settle in, and sense how all this feels inside. [pause] Within the gentle loving heart of Jesus, wait in openness and faith to see if it feels like there is anything else that God might want you to notice, such as a word, image, feeling or memory that seems to somehow fit with the way this whole thing feels. [wait for a response]

BEING OPEN TO GOD'S SPIRIT

- a. If something comes, notice the symbol, pause, and then silently ask yourself, “Does this repeat symbol feel right, inside, to journey with some more?” [wait for a response]
- b. If “no” go to RESTING IN GOD'S PRESENCE.
- c. If “yes,” with gentleness and faith, let go into how all this feels inside; and wait to see if anything comes that fits the way this all now feels. [wait for a response]

Repeat a, b, c as long as you want to continue, or as time allows.

RESTING IN GOD'S PRESENCE

When you are ready to stop, or if the time has run out, nurture this special place you've come to inside. Pause here and let go into God's presence within all of this, resting in the quiet tenderness of his Spirit for a while. [wait]

CLOSING PRAYER

When you are ready to end: As you savor all of this, let yourself know that this is God's personal love and grace, experienced and felt inside you. [pause] Staying in this holy and precious gift, you may wish to silently offer a prayer in response; and then when you are ready, just slowly open the eyes. You may also close with an “Amen” or similar ending, if you wish.

Do not worry if your mind wanders. That is only natural, and common when you are praying by yourself. Just return to the body-feel of where you left off; and then continue.

Companioned Prayer in the Moment

Often it feels like it might be a good time or moment for Companioned Prayer but it is not practical to sit and devote the necessary time. Perhaps there is no readily quiet place to sit. Or perhaps something has just happened that has caused you to recollect or feel something special, and you don't want to wait or distance yourself from it before you listen for God's grace within it. There are many moments in our lives when we sense that there is something special within our experience of the moment. In those times it can feel like there is a quiet special tug associated with the moment. Classic examples can be when we are caught up in a sunset or sunrise, when we are reunited with loved ones, and when we feel God's presence in worship. Or perhaps something might trigger an important memory that we had forgotten or had neglected for so long, such as memories of childhood, special people, or special places. Various things in our lives can carry a subtle yet powerful sense that they are somehow especially connected with us and with our personal journey as a human being as offered to us by God. When we feel them, they usually come to us spontaneously and they usually also pass on rather quickly. Often there is not any specific message associated with them as much as just a sense of being briefly enriched by the connection.

Yet these special moments can also be wonderful doorways to God's spirit through Companioned Prayer. If we have time to sit down in a quiet spot and spend some contemplative time within such moments that is great. And even better still if another person is there who can be our companion in the prayer. But more often, these moments catch us when we are busy or have commitments that we must keep. We don't have much time, there is no practiced companion available, and we may not even have a quiet place to sit. In such times what is needed is a way to be present to the moment and to see if there is anything more within it that God is calling you to notice. You can do this by just following the basics of Companioned Prayer when by yourself.

When you recognize that a special moment comes, if you can, close your eyes, and staying within the body-feel throughout:

- 1) Say a brief prayer to ask God to help you appreciate this moment of gift and for Jesus to be your companion as you spend a little time with it.
- 2) Notice how the moment feels in your body.
- 3) Allow yourself to hold it gently within the loving heart of Jesus.
- 4) Notice how it feels to be with it in this tender faith filled way.
- 5) Let go into all of it within the gentle loving heart of Jesus, and wait in openness and faith to see if it feels like there is anything more in it that God may be calling you to be aware of.
- 6) If a symbol comes (a word, image, thought or feeling), notice how that now feels inside, and let go into that, with tenderness and faith.
- 7) Continue noticing and letting go in faith into whatever comes as long as it feels right.
- 8) When ready to stop, pause and rest in the gift of God's gentle presence for a while.
- 9) End with a brief prayer in response.

Even if you can't close your eyes or sit down, deliberately pause what you are doing long enough to spend a little time with the special feeling of the moment. Don't just ignore it or push it away in order to get on with your busy schedule. Stop and allow your attention to really go into it, and with gentleness and faith allow yourself to be open to what may come as a gift from God's spirit. Just allowing yourself to spend a little while with it in this way is in itself a gift.

An even briefer way of letting go into a moment, a kind of touch and go, is as follows:

- 1) When you notice a special feeling, pause to ask God to help you feel his tender love within it, and then pause to feel Jesus' loving presence in it, letting go into how all that feels.
- 2) Notice what that feels like in your body, and wait in openness and faith within his gentle love to see if it feels like there is anything more in it that God may be calling you to be aware of.
- 3) If a symbol comes (a word, image, memory, thought or feeling), notice how that now feels inside, and let go into that with tenderness and faith.
- 4) Continue noticing and letting go in faith into whatever comes, as long as it feels right.
- 5) When ready to stop, discern the gift of God's gentle presence in all this, and then end with a brief prayer in response.

Many times even if we do not have time to sit down with these moments and to open ourselves up to God's possibilities within them, just spending a little time with them will plant them into the richness of our life. And when we do sit down with a companion for contemplative prayer we may find that they then again come up as something special that God is calling us to listen to.

Of course, God speaks to us through many other situations, not just these positive special moments. We all find ourselves challenged at various times by frustration, fear, anger, resentment, confusion, busyness, boredom, and etcetera. Consider if at such times we listened within, would we find that perhaps God might ask us to learn something special from those moments? Something not necessarily logically or emotionally derived, but some graced understanding gifted to us? These challenging moments are also doorways into God's love for us as he calls us into our spiritual and human wholeness in him.

So when you find yourself in these very human moments of trial, close your eyes and:

- 1) Ask for God's presence and mercy within your issue or feelings.
- 2) With Christ as your companion, let go into the sense of your feeling of trial and of the need for God's love, noticing how that all feels in your body.
- 3) Take all of it to the loving and compassionate heart of Jesus, and pause there within his tender love and acceptance.
- 4) Then, being open to the possibility of his gift, wait in faith to see if there might be something, some symbol (a word, image, memory or feeling) or understanding that he might be quietly calling you to notice.
- 5) If something comes, notice how that now feels inside, and let go into that with tenderness and faith.
- 6) Continue noticing and letting go in faith into whatever comes as long as it feels right.
- 7) When ready to stop, discern the gift of God's gentle presence in all this, and then end with a brief prayer in response.

Whether in moments of special positive awareness or in moments of trial, pause and ask God for his grace and mercy to be found in humble surrender to God, as he might choose to reveal the gift of his spirit from within the very unique moment you find yourself in. If within these moments of prayer you do have an opportunity to sit and close the eyes to more attentively follow the petition of Christ, and by all means do so.

Pray Within Other Activities

In addition to responding to special moments of gift and moments of challenge, some people find it is also possible to incorporate the practice into routine activities that lend themselves to quiet inner reflection. For example, you might incorporate it into walking, gardening, doing the dishes, or other similar activities. Reorient the activity or some time within it to be a prayer time, a special time to spend with God.

- 1) Begin with a quiet prayer for the time of the activity.
- 2) Then while engaged in the activity/prayer time be open to noticing anything special.
- 3) You may even ask yourself, “Is there anything about all of this [moment, activity, or subject that you find yourself in] that God might be calling me to listen to or notice?”
- 4) Pause to be in Jesus’ loving heart with all this.
- 5) Let go into how it all feels inside and how you carry it in your body.
- 6) Wait in humble faith in Christ’s gentle presence. Notice anything that comes.
- 7) Again let go into how that feels, being open to anything else that feels right to notice.
- 8) Continue noticing and letting go in faith into whatever comes as long as it feels right.
- 9) Then rest in God’s presence with thanksgiving, offering a prayer in response when ending.

During an activity be open to following a changing itinerary as it were. Be flexible and “go with the flow.” And always be open to stopping the activity at any point during the prayer, closing the eyes, and more attentively following the prayer in faith and devotion. While praying within an activity can be helpful, like all forms of Companioned Prayer by yourself, it should not be a substitute for regular Companioned Prayer with a prayer partner or group within your faith community.

The Gift of Regular Practice

If you regularly practice Companioned Prayer, even in its abbreviated forms when special moments come or during routine activities, you will naturally learn to be more attentive to moments of potential grace in your life. And you will realize that they are occurring all the time. You begin to realize that life is presenting you with endless possibilities to experience and respond to divine love. We find ourselves more and more in a state of being aware that we are blessed and are one with Christ. All of life is a living relationship with the Creator and giver. Being open to such possibilities should not however become an adopted mood. Life is meant to be lived naturally, spontaneously and authentically in the present. Being attentive to recognizing special moments and being open to God's presence within them must not be a mood-making exercise. It is just more of a habit of noticing, questioning, recognizing and appreciating – within the context of faith.

We need a way to make our lives always more open to God's spirit. We need to imbue his love and caring into our relationships and into our everyday world. Such prayerful attentiveness will help to transform our lives and those around us into opportunities of gifted grace.

Chapter 9

Intercessory and Other Forms of the Prayer

*I lift my eyes to the hills; – from where will my help come?
My help comes from the Lord, who made heaven and earth.*

Psalm 121:1-2

Intercessory Companioned Prayer

Other forms of Companioned Prayer are possible. For example, below is a form when praying for others. Unlike most forms of intercessory prayer that are petitions, this form asks God whom we should be praying for and then leads us into whatever we should be aware of concerning this person or the issue that they represent. In other words, instead of petitioning God for His specific actions or graces on behalf of someone else in need, we let God tell us what we need to hear concerning the person in need. The primary focus of this intercessory prayer is to bring another person to our awareness in a manner that invites us to know and share something about their situation that we would not be aware of in any other way. In the end, we may become aware of something that will allow us to be with the suffering person with more ease and love, or perhaps we will be aware of specific actions we can take to help the person, or perhaps there may be some other outcome of the prayer that is personal to us or to our relationship with the person. Like regular Companioned Prayer, at the end of this intercessory form (in the CLOSING PRAYER movement) we may find ourselves praying a traditional prayer of petition for the person, i.e., intersession, or some other prayer that is appropriate to our Companioned Prayer experience.

You will see that this Intercessory Companioned Prayer includes much of the same open receptive language as in the standard Companioned Prayer form. Its difference is subtle but significant. This intercessory prayer form is also designed to be prayed with a companion. Use the suggestions and instructions in chapters 5, 6 and 11 as applicable.

The format for Intercessory Companioned Prayer follows. The Italics text is instruction for the companion. The bold text is for the companion to say out loud. The instruction “[pause]” means that the companion should pause briefly and then continue without waiting for a response from the person praying. The instruction “[wait]” means that the companion should wait until the person praying has given a response before further instructions are offered.

Intercessory Companioned Prayer

BEGINNING GROUP PRAYER

The Companioned Prayer meeting time can begin with a shared intercessory group prayer such as general intercessions, prayers of the faithful, the great litany, or other daily office, service or devotional, or a prayer and reading such as the Lord's Prayer, the Angelus, the daily gospel or other reading.

OPENING PRAYER

*Begin by saying, In the name of the Father, of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit, we open our hearts to you, O Lord. Amen.

Then on behalf of the person you are praying with and yourself, say a personal prayer out loud, such as: asking for Christ to be our companion; for our trust in the Lord; for the guidance of the Holy Spirit; thankfulness for this time of quiet; asking Christ to be present within our needs, inside our very brokenness, inside our joy; to help us listen inside to God's quiet call; to be mindful of our sins, and of the grace and blessings received; or, to humbly journey inside with Christ.

Then invite the other person to also say a personal prayer of concerns, challenges, intercessions, devotion, or thanksgivings in their life for themselves and especially for others, either silently or out loud, and if silently, to say "Amen" when they are ready to continue. [wait for the other person to respond]

AS WE ARE

Then say, Coming before God as we are, take a few minutes to notice how you physically feel. [briefly pause, and then continue] For example, let your attention go to your back and notice what that feels like. [pause] Notice your shoulders [pause], your neck [pause], your head [pause], your arms [pause], your hands [pause], your feet [pause], your legs [pause], your stomach [pause], your heart [pause], and your breathing. [longer pause] Notice the body sense of how you feel right now [pause]; and then let me know when we are ready to go on. [wait for a response, and then go to ASKING GOD]

ASKING GOD

When they are ready, say: Staying with how this feels inside, and being open to God's loving presence; let me know if something comes when you ask yourself, "Who does it feel like, inside me right now, needs God's love and care?" [wait for a response]

GOD'S LOVE AND COMPASSION

Notice how all this repeat name, relationship or symbol if shared feels inside, and how you carry it. [pause] With tenderness and faith, notice how it feels to take all this to the loving heart of Jesus, and to feel his gentle love and compassion in all of this. Take your time, and then let me know when we are ready to go on. [wait]

LETTING GO IN THE LOVING HEART OF JESUS

When they are ready to go on: Notice how it feels in your body to be with this, in this gentle, caring, faith-filled way. Allow your awareness to seep into your body, to settle in, and sense how all this feels inside. [pause] Within the gentle loving heart of Jesus, wait in openness and faith to see if it feels like there is anything else that God might want you to notice, such as a word, image, feeling or memory that seems to somehow fit with the way this whole thing feels, and then let me know. [wait]

BEING OPEN TO GOD'S SPIRIT

- a. If something comes, reflect back the symbol if shared, pause, and then ask,
- b. Does this feel right, inside, to journey with some more? [wait for a response]
If "no" go to RESTING IN GOD'S PRESENCE.
- c. If "yes," say: Ask yourself, "How does all this repeat symbol if shared now feel in my body?" [pause] With gentleness and faith, let go into how all this feels inside; and let me know if anything comes that fits the way this all now feels. [wait]
If something comes, go back to a.

Repeat a, b, c as long as the person wants to continue, or as time allows.

RESTING IN GOD'S PRESENCE

When the person is ready to stop, or if the time has run out: Okay; let's nurture this special place you've come to inside. Pause here and let go into God's presence within all of this, resting in the quiet tenderness of his Spirit for a while. And then let me know when we are ready to go on. [wait]

CLOSING PRAYER

When they are ready to end, say: As you savor all of this, let yourself know that this is God's personal love and grace, experienced and felt inside us. [pause] Staying in this holy and precious gift, you may wish to silently offer a prayer in response; and then when you are ready, just slowly open the eyes.

The person praying may also end with an "Amen", the sign of the cross, the doxology, or other closing prayer out loud or silently.

CONCLUDING GROUP PRAYER

When the Companioned Prayer meeting time is over (everyone has had an opportunity for prayer, or the time has come to an end), the shared daily office, service or devotional may be concluded, or a concluding prayer and blessing may be said out loud by someone with the opportunity for others to also participate either out loud or silently if they so choose.

Specific Guidelines for Intercessory Companioned Prayer

Some notes pertaining to the above form of intercessory prayer are offered below. Also use the guidelines provided in chapters 5, 6 and 11 as applicable.

BEGINNING GROUP PRAYER

If possible use an intercessory group prayer format (General Intercessions, Prayers of the Faithful, the Great Litany, etc.)

OPENING PRAYER

In this Opening Prayer include personal prayers of petition and intercession for the individuals you are concerned about.

AS WE ARE

See the guidelines in chapters 5, 6 and 11 pertaining to this prayer movement.

ASKING GOD

Be open to finding out that the person whom God's wants you to be aware of at this time might be someone other than the person you had in mind. Be open to the possibility that the person who may need God's love and care is yourself. Or, what comes may include your relationship with someone. Or it might even be someone who has passed on. If one of these happens, do not put that message aside, thinking that it shouldn't be someone other than whom you had in mind, shouldn't be you or involve you, or shouldn't be someone who has died. God may be calling you to listen to something very special in his own way. Have trust in him. A symbol or subject that may initially come may not even be a person; but if followed, it may lead to an awareness of someone in need. Following how God calls us may lead to the person you were concerned about with insight and compassion that might not be possible any other way. If the person you had in mind does not end up being included in your prayer, you can always pray the Intercessory Companioned Prayer again later.

GOD'S LOVE AND COMPASSION

Here we take our prayer subject to Jesus' loving heart and allow ourselves to feel how the whole issue feels inside us, in faith. As in regular Companioned Prayer, we notice how this feels in our body, how we are carrying all of this. This is not a step where we ask God to love the person or situation that we are praying about, outside of how we are feeling about the person or situation within ourselves. Nor are we handing the person off to God for him to fix or take care of as his responsibility. In other words, we are not creating a mental picture of someone and then giving that God's love, nor are we simply mentally or emotionally petitioning God for his love for them. Instead we continue to be aware of how God has revealed that the person or the situation feels within us, how we are carrying it; and that is what we bring to Jesus' loving Heart. Then we allow our self to feel his flowing love and compassion in all of that. In this prayer we are not the intercessor praying for another person. Christ is our intercessor for all of us. In faith in his saving intercessory love for us all, we humbly place our self and our prayer subject in his loving Sacred Heart, while in faith we personally accept his tender compassion with our prayer subject as we are now one with it as it is further revealed to us, as we hold and carry it in our prayer.

*LETTING GO IN THE LOVING HEART OF GOD
BEING OPEN TO GOD'S SPIRIT
RESTING IN GOD'S PRESENCE*

See the guidelines in chapters 5, 6 and 11 pertaining to these prayer movements.

CLOSING PRAYER

As in regular Companioned Prayer, allow yourself a closing prayer that is appropriate to the Intercessory Companioned Prayer experience that you have just had so far. In doing so you may find yourself praying in thankfulness or worship, or praying a traditional prayer of petition or intercession, or for strength of a new understanding within your relationship with the person you were praying about, or perhaps for strength and faith to carry out specific helping actions on behalf of the person. Any variety of responses may be appropriate.

CONCLUDING GROUP PRAYER

See the guidelines in chapters 5 and 6.

Intercessory Companioned Prayer When by Yourself

Another form of Intercessory Companioned Prayer that can be used when you are by yourself is provided below. Note that it has some slight variances from the other form. Also see chapter 8 with regards to praying by yourself.

OPENING PRAYER

Begin the Intercessory Companioned Prayer by saying, In the name of the Father, of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit, I open my heart to you, O Lord. Then say a personal prayer, such as: asking for Christ to be our companion; for our trust in the Lord; for the guidance of the Holy Spirit; to help us be aware of others' needs; asking Christ to be present within all our needs, inside our very brokenness; or to help us listen inside to God's quiet call, etc. Include intercessory petitions for the needs of specific individuals.

AS WE ARE

Coming before God as we are, take a few minutes to notice how you physically feel. [briefly pause, and then continue] For example, let your attention go to your back and notice what that feels like. [pause] Notice your shoulders [pause], your neck [pause], your head [pause], your arms [pause], your hands [pause], your feet [pause], your legs [pause], your stomach [pause], your heart [pause], and your breathing. [longer pause] Notice the body sense of how you feel right now. [pause] When you are ready to go on, go to ASKING GOD.

ASKING GOD

When you are ready, stay with how this feels inside, and being open to God's loving presence; be aware if something comes when you ask yourself, "Who does it feel like, inside me right now, needs God's love and care?" [wait for a response]

GOD'S LOVE AND COMPASSION

Notice how all this repeat name, relationship or symbol, if desired feels inside, and how you carry it. With tenderness and faith, notice how it feels to take this to the loving heart of Jesus, and to feel his gentle love and care. Take your time, allowing yourself to feel God's tender love within all this.

LETTING GO IN THE LOVING HEART OF JESUS

When you are ready to go on: Notice how it feels in your body to be with this in this gentle, caring, faith-filled way. Allow your awareness to seep into your body, to settle in, and sense how all this feels inside. [pause] Within the gentle loving heart of Jesus, wait in openness and faith to see if it feels like there is anything else that God might want you to notice, such as a word, image, feeling or memory that seems to somehow fit with the way this whole thing feels. [wait for a response]

BEING OPEN TO GOD'S SPIRIT

- a. If something comes, notice the symbol, pause, and then silently ask yourself, "Does this repeat symbol feel right, inside, to journey with some more?" [wait for a response]
- b. If "no" go to RESTING IN GOD'S PRESENCE.
- c. If "yes," with gentleness and faith, let go into how all this feels inside; and wait to see if anything comes that fits the way this all now feels. [wait for a response]

Repeat a, b, c as long as you want to continue, or as time allows.

RESTING IN GOD'S PRESENCE

When you are ready to stop, or if the time has run out, nurture this special place you've come to inside. Pause here and let go into God's presence within all of this, resting in the quiet tenderness of his Spirit for a while. [wait]

CLOSING PRAYER

When you are ready to end: As you savor all of this, let yourself know that this is God's personal love and grace, experienced and felt inside you. [pause] Staying in this holy and precious gift, you may wish to silently offer a prayer in response; and then when you are ready, just slowly open the eyes. You may also close with an "Amen" or similar ending, if you wish.

Forms for all of the Church Seasons

Each of the Church seasons and times can have its own Companioned Prayer form, as offered below for the Roman Catholic calendar year or its equivalent in other denominations:

Advent

Use the Ordinary Form but replace the question within ASKING GOD with, “What feels like my heart longs for, inside me right now?”

Christmas Season

Use the Ordinary Form but replace the question within ASKING GOD with, “What feels like I am thankful for, inside me right now?”

Ordinary Time

For Ordinary Time between the Christmas and Lent seasons, and again between the Easter and Advent seasons, use the Ordinary Form.

The Lenten Season

During Lent the form in the following section of this chapter is suggested.

The Easter Triduum

From the Holy Thursday evening Mass of the Lord’s Supper to Vespers (evening prayer) on Easter Sunday use the Lenten Form but replace the question within ASKING GOD with, “What feels like God is asking of me, inside me right now?”

Easter Season

Use the Ordinary Form but replace the question within ASKING GOD with, “How does it feel God is calling me, inside me right now?”

The above standard forms and their abbreviated versions can be downloaded from the “Resources” page of the Companioned Prayer Christian Fellowship’s website at www.CompanionedPrayer.org.

A Lenten Prayer Form

A Companioned Prayer format suitable for use during Lent is provided below.

Companioned Prayer
For the season of Lent

BEGINNING GROUP PRAYER

The Companioned Prayer meeting time can begin with a shared daily office, service, devotional, or examination of conscience appropriate to the season, or a prayer and reading such as the Lord's Prayer, the Confiteor and Kyrie, the Angelus, the daily gospel or other reading.

OPENING PRAYER

Begin by saying, In the name of the Father, of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit, we open our hearts to you, O Lord. Amen.

Then on behalf of the person you are praying with and yourself, say a personal prayer out loud, such as: asking for Christ to be our companion; for our trust in the Lord; for the guidance of the Holy Spirit; thankfulness for this time of quiet; asking Christ to be present within our needs, inside our very brokenness; to help us listen inside to God's quiet call; to be mindful of our sins, and of the grace and blessings received; for God's mercy; or, to humbly journey inside with Christ.

Then invite the other person to pause for a few moments of silent introspection and with a contrite and open heart, to silently recall their sins, weaknesses, concerns and challenges; and then to say a personal prayer either silently or out loud, and if silently, to say "Amen" when they are finished. [wait]

AS WE ARE

*Then say, Coming before God as we are, take a few minutes to notice how you physically feel. [briefly pause, and then continue] For example, let your attention go to your back and notice what that feels like. [pause] Notice your shoulders [pause], your neck [pause], your head [pause], your arms [pause], your hands [pause], your feet [pause], your legs [pause], your stomach [pause], your heart [pause], and your breathing. [longer pause] Notice the body sense of how you feel right now [pause]; and then let me know when we are ready to go on. [wait for a response, and then go to ASKING GOD]

ASKING GOD

*When they are ready, say: Staying with how this feels inside, and being open to God's loving presence; let me know if something comes when you ask yourself, "Does it feel like there is anything in my life right now, keeping me from God?" [wait for a response]

GOD'S LOVE AND ACCEPTANCE

Notice how all this repeat symbol if shared feels inside, and how you carry it. [pause] With tenderness and faith, notice how it feels to take all this to the loving heart of Jesus, and to feel his gentle love and acceptance in all of this. Take your time, and then let me know when we are ready to go on. [wait]

LETTING GO IN THE LOVING HEART OF JESUS

When they are ready to go on: Notice how it feels in your body to be with this, in this gentle, caring, faith-filled way. Allow your awareness to seep into your body, to settle in, and sense how all this feels inside. [pause] Within the gentle loving heart of Jesus, wait in openness and faith to see if it feels like there is anything else that God might want you to notice, such as a word, image, feeling or memory that seems to somehow fit with the way this whole thing feels, and then let me know. [wait]

BEING OPEN TO GOD'S SPIRIT

- a. If something comes, reflect back the symbol if shared, pause, and then ask,
- b. Does this feel right, inside, to journey with some more? [wait for a response]
If "no" go to RESTING IN GOD'S PRESENCE.
- c. If "yes," say: Ask yourself, "How does all this repeat symbol if shared now feel in my body?" [pause] With gentleness and faith, let go into how all this feels inside; and let me know if anything comes that fits the way this all now feels. [wait]
If something comes, go back to a.

Repeat a, b, c as long as the person wants to continue, or as time allows.

When they are ready to stop, go to RESTING IN GOD'S PRESENCE.

RESTING IN GOD'S PRESENCE

When the person is ready to stop, or if the time has run out: Okay; let's nurture this special place you've come to inside. Pause here and let go into God's presence within all of this, resting in the quiet tenderness of his Spirit for a while. And then let me know when we are ready to go on. [wait]

CLOSING PRAYER

When they are ready to end, say: As you savor all of this, let yourself know that this is God's personal love and grace, experienced and felt inside us. [pause] Staying in this holy and precious gift, you may wish to silently offer a prayer in response; and then when you are ready, just slowly open the eyes.

The person praying may also end with an "Amen", the sign of the cross, the doxology, or other closing prayer said out loud or silently.

CONCLUDING GROUP PRAYER

When the Companioned Prayer meeting time is over (everyone has had an opportunity for prayer, or the time has come to an end), the shared daily office, service, devotional or examen may be concluded, or a concluding prayer and blessing may be said out loud by someone with the opportunity for others to also participate either out loud or silently if they so choose.

An Abbreviated Format without the Feedback Lines

If you have been practicing Companioned Prayer with a regular prayer companion for some time and you both are tuned to each other's prayer style (tempo, responses, etc.) you may wish to use the prayer in a more abbreviated format, and without the instructional text said out loud that asks for feedback. In other words, without the lines such as, "let me know when we are ready to go on", "let me know what you find", etcetera. Without these instructional feedback lines, it is incumbent upon the person praying to let their companion know the status of their prayer at the points where the feedback instruction would have occurred. This only works when the person praying and their companion know the prayer format and process thoroughly and are in tune with each other's prayer styles.

This abbreviated version should not be used to shorten the prayer experience or to facilitate hurrying through the prayer. The abbreviated format below is provided to minimize the companion's spoken intrusion into a person's inner prayer experience; not to shorten the experience. Therefore when using this format it is vital to continue to take as much time within each movement as necessary to allow yourself to truly slow down and notice the subtleties of your unfolding prayer experience as you journey within with Christ.

It is common for people who are deeply experienced with the prayer and who practice it regularly with a prayer partner, to not prefer this altered prayer style. Nevertheless it is offered below for those who might prefer it. This format can be even further abbreviated by eliminating the text in bold italics. However, reduction beyond this should be cautiously resisted, as all of the basic components of the prayer are usually necessary to allow for a complete companioned faith experience. The Abbreviated Form should only be used by those already familiar with the nuances of the complete prayer.

Companioned Prayer Abbreviated form for the season of Ordinary Time

*For use by prayer partners familiar with each other's prayer style.
The bold italics text may be skipped if desired*

BEGINNING GROUP PRAYER

The Companioned Prayer meeting time can begin with a shared daily office, service or devotional, or a prayer and reading such as the Lord's Prayer, the Angelus, the daily gospel or other reading.

OPENING PRAYER

*Begin by saying, In the name of the Father, of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit, we open our hearts to you, O Lord. Amen.

Then say a personal prayer out loud, and then invite the other person to also say a personal prayer either silently or out loud. [wait]

AS WE ARE

*Then say, Coming before God as we are, take a few minutes to notice how you physically feel. [briefly pause] Let your attention go to different parts of your body, pausing to notice any physical sensations and any issues or feelings that might surface as you do this. [wait]*

ASKING GOD

When they are ready, say: Staying with how this feels inside, and being open to God's loving presence; ask yourself, "Of everything going on in my life, what feels like God is calling me to listen to, inside me right now?" [wait]

GOD'S LOVE AND ACCEPTANCE

Notice how all this (repeat symbol if shared) feels inside, and how you carry it. [pause] With tenderness and faith, notice how it feels to take all this to the loving heart of Jesus, and to feel his gentle love and acceptance in all of this. [wait]

LETTING GO IN THE LOVING HEART OF JESUS

When they are ready to go on: Notice how it feels in your body to be with this, in this gentle, caring, faith-filled way. Allow your awareness to seep into your body, to settle in, and sense how all this feels inside. [pause] Within the gentle loving heart of Jesus, wait in openness and faith to see if it feels like there is anything else that God might want you to notice that seems to somehow fit with the way this whole thing feels. [wait]

BEING OPEN TO GOD'S SPIRIT

- a. If something comes, reflect back the symbol if shared, pause, and then ask,
- b. Does this feel right, inside, to journey with some more? [wait for a response]
If "no" go to RESTING IN GOD'S PRESENCE.
- c. If "yes," say: Ask yourself, "How does all this repeat symbol if shared now feel in my body?" [pause] With gentleness and faith, let go into how all this feels inside.
[wait]
If something comes, go back to a.

Repeat a, b, c as long as the person wants to continue, or as time allows.

When they are ready to stop, go to RESTING IN GOD'S PRESENCE.

RESTING IN GOD'S PRESENCE

When the person is ready to stop, or if the time has run out: Okay; let's nurture this special place you've come to inside. Pause here and let go into God's presence within all of this, resting in the quiet tenderness of his Spirit for a while. [wait]

CLOSING PRAYER

When they are ready to end, say: As you savor all of this, let yourself know that this is God's personal love and grace, experienced and felt inside us. [pause] Staying in this holy and precious gift, you may wish to silently offer a prayer in response.

The person praying may also close with an "Amen", the sign of the cross, the doxology, or other closing prayer said out loud or silently.

The companion may also say out loud a brief prayer of thanks.

CONCLUDING GROUP PRAYER

When the Companioned Prayer meeting time is over (everyone has had an opportunity for prayer, or the time has come to an end), the shared daily office, service or devotional may be concluded, or a concluding prayer and blessing may be said.

An Abbreviated Format for Praying by Oneself

In addition to the shortened formats offered in chapter 8, Praying by Oneself, there are times when you may feel it is appropriate to pray a very abbreviated Companioned Prayer when you are praying without a prayer partner or companion. The abbreviated format offered below should only be used after many months of regular experience with the prayer, and only if you feel inwardly called to do so. This abbreviated prayer is not a more advanced form of the prayer, but it is vital that you have enough experience of the full Companioned Prayer to ensure that your experience using the abbreviated format retains the thorough scope of the full prayer, even if it is not stated, and even though some of the movements of this abbreviated format ostensibly appear directed more to God than toward your inner experience. This abbreviated format should not be used exclusively; the other forms of the prayer presented in chapters 4, 8, 9 and 11 should be used as well.

Throughout keep the balance of awareness of body, mind/emotion and spirit as a prayer of interior trust and surrender to the Lord. Always bring in portions of the full Companioned Prayer as appropriate for any particular situation in the prayer.

The basic movements of this very abbreviated Companioned Prayer format when praying by oneself are briefly as follows:

1. Say a short invitational prayer or offer a period of reflective silence with the Lord.
2. Notice the general sense of how your body is feeling.
3. Say, God, what do you want me to listen to?
4. *When something comes say, In this, and in your compassionate loving heart, I wait Lord.
5. *When something comes say, Within all this, in you Lord, I listen.
6. Wait, and repeat 4 and 5 as led by the Holy Spirit.
7. *When ready to stop, say, I rest in you, Lord, and pause.
8. *When ready to end, say, Thank you for loving me.
9. Follow with a personal closing prayer.

Always use any part of the full Companioned Prayer whenever you feel it is appropriate.

For an equivalent abbreviated format for intercessory prayer, instead of saying, “God, what do you want me to listen to?” say, “God, who needs your love and care right now?”

When using the above abbreviated format for praying by yourself, keep your experience grounded in the body-feel of your prayer subject and in God’s grace received. Do not replace your authentic felt experience or graced awareness with theological or elevated concepts of God.

Companioned Prayer with Children

Children find that they can quite easily practice Companioned Prayer; in fact, often easier than adults! Their familiarity with play with its ready movement of awareness, naturally lend themselves to the inner movements of the prayer. Children are able to easily enter the prayer with their full attention, without looking for structured explanations or intellectual justifications. The prayer form provided in chapter 4 is also very suitable for children. However, sometimes a more spontaneous or simpler approach is beneficial. These simplified formats can be similar to the movements described in chapter 8 under “Companioned Prayer in the Moment” except modified to include a companion. They can be used in a “formal” sit-down session. Or they can be used “in the moment” as previously described.

For example, if a child comes in from school with a heavy heart or challenge from some incident, you might ask the child if you could be their prayer companion. When a child is particularly upset, it is beneficial to spend time helping them notice how they carry their feeling in their body (AS WE ARE). You do not need to know the cause of the child’s distress in order to companion them in this manner. For example, one evening my youngest son, who was ten at the time, arrived at my bedside extremely upset. He had severe allergies and was all stuffed up, was having trouble breathing, and could not calm down to go to sleep. He was crying hysterically and I could not make much sense of what he was trying to say. I invited him to pray while he was standing next to the bed. After nodding his assent among the sobs, the first challenge was to get him to calm down enough to begin the inner listening. I knew that he needed to refocus his attention on his body.

So I asked him to hop up and down on one foot, and then the other, noticing what his legs felt like while he was doing it. Then I asked him to close his eyes and swing his arms one by one, noticing how they felt. Next he rolled his head and neck, felt his sides and stomach, etcetera. Throughout this process I continually invited him to notice how his body felt. I could see him calming down. The tears stopped, the attention was inward. I asked him to notice if there was any place in his body where he could physically feel how upset he was. He nodded yes, and I ask him to put his hand there and to feel Jesus’ gentle comfort. He placed his hand on his stomach and felt God’s gentleness. I asked him to continue with gentleness and wait to see if there was anything that God might be calling him to notice in all of that. After a few cycles of noticing, he smiled and said that God had told him that it was okay that his dad had died. (His father had died of cancer when he was four.) His response was a great surprise to me, but I just invited him to spend some time with how all that felt inside and to let me know if it felt right to continue. Staying with his inner awareness, he said that this was the right place to stop. I encouraged him to pause and notice how all that felt, and to say a prayer in response. When he opened his eyes he knew he had received a special gift of God’s healing love and understanding. His breathing had also cleared, he was calm and was at peace. I told him that he had just been kissed by God, and he happily went off to bed.

In another example, my oldest son who was eleven at the time, had been gladly participating in instruction for about five weeks in preparation for being baptized at the Easter vigil service. He knew it was very important; a defining decision and moment in his life. As the evening service approached, he became quite nervous about the decision. I didn’t ask him what his specific issues were, but instead after dinner I asked him if it would feel okay to spend some time with it in prayer. He agreed, so we sat next to each other on the sofa, and I began to companion him. He immediately sensed his overarching baptismal issue, and journeyed with it, with faith, compassion and gentleness. I could see by his changing face and body language that he was following a process of inner revelation and grace. At the end, he had a very peaceful look, and when he opened his eyes, I asked him if he was ready to be baptized. He turned to me with clear eyes and conviction, and said, “Oh yes, I am ready.”

This approach to childhood’s challenges can help our children to be open to receiving God’s grace in their time of need without any judgments or explanations from us. After the prayer experience you can ask if they would like to share anything about their prayer experience, and provide parental support as appropriate. If they do share, it is important not to enter into criticism or judgment, as they will then consider this to be part of their prayer experience, diminishing their trust and willingness to enter into prayer the next time. If you must address the child’s situation, try to wait a little while, or at least move to another location or activity in order to establish a clear break with their prayer experience.

Such an approach will let children learn that God’s love and graceful understandings can be received in the midst of trial. Of course, the offer to be their prayer companion need not be limited to times of trial. Times of either challenge or grace can be an appropriate moment. For example on a hike, or while camping or sailing, you might offer to pause and be their companion. In all cases it is important that the child always be invited and not told to practice the prayer. The child must enter the prayer of his or her own freewill.

This process of inviting the child to seek comfort and understanding from within also teaches the parent to trust in God’s closeness and the gift of his inner wisdom. The parent can learn that they do not have to fix, correct or teach every aspect of their child’s life when the child has the inner gifted resources right at hand. This can change the parent-child relationship, freeing the parent from much worry and the perceived need for constant control. The parent will also find that a spiritual awareness and appreciation of the mystery of God will naturally blossom with the child’s growth.

Once the child learns to be companioned in prayer, they can also lean to companion others. In fact they may, on their own, recognize situations in others that would be a natural opportunity for prayer. Children can teach other children how to hold a hurt or special moment in the body feeling of Jesus’ tender love, and to attentively let go into that, waiting for movement and grace. Because children can so easily follow Companioned Prayer’s inner movements, it is quite simple for them to spontaneously share this gift with others, without the need of a formal format.

Children can also offer the prayer to adults, especially family members they love. This can include parents and grandparents, when those adults demonstrate a willingness to be vulnerable and non-controlling to the child, and who understand that a child’s offer to companion them is in itself a special gift of love and grace.

When our children practice this prayer, both during regular sit-down times, and during “in the moment” times, they will grow into a maturity and spiritual freedom never before experienced. A new generation will be created by God: free, open, loving, secure and safe in God’s love, without the need to control or hurt others. They will grow in spirituality and grace, and the world will be changed.

Lectio–Companioned Prayer

An example of another form of Companioned Prayer is a combination of Lectio divina and Companioned Prayer. A suggested form can be found in chapter 11 under Lectio Divina in the section titled “The Effects of Companioned Prayer on Other Prayer Experiences”.

Other Forms of Companioned Prayer

The prayer and its instruction may continue to develop and open new pathways of awareness and grace beyond our current understanding as we continue to mature by God’s grace and inspiration from our prayer relationship with him. While keeping the prayer practice, its discussions and teaching open to continual inspiration and development, some basic tenants should always be followed:

- Always keep the prayer faith-centered as a personal prayer to God. This is a prayer of communion with God. It is specific to a personal prayer relationship with God, being open to the Father through Christ and the gift of the Holy Spirit. It is meant to be practiced and experienced within that faith relationship. Never secularize or generalize the prayer in order to make it “more accessible” to more people or to a specific group. It is not a technique. It is only by surrendering to God in faith and trust within the prayer experience, while praying and also while companionship others in the prayer, that the full meaning and gift of the prayer is received and understood. Anything less than that will severely limit the experience.
- Trust in the living presence of the Lord as experienced in the prayer. Keep the practice and the teaching of it open to this living presence. Do not intellectualize it or explain it to the point where the explanation or theories about it become the answers. The answers are ever changing and personal, and must remain so. Do not worship the explanations, theories, theologies or answers; nor constrain God’s gift to a personal or group interpretation. Our encounter with God is meant to be mystery beyond full understanding. God’s reality and mystery is not supposed to be limited to our human understanding and appreciation. We are called to a process of trust and surrender, not to a fixed idea or understanding.
- The sole outcome of this prayer should be love. God’s love for us is freely returned in our love of God, our love of others, and our love of creation. This prayer practice should foster this love in these relationships and its outpouring in worship, community and service. Jesus modeled this for us, and this prayer calls us to that reality.

Special Companioned Prayer forms might possibly be considered for people who are physically sick, who are dealing with addiction or trauma, or who have other special needs. However, in any form it is important to always acknowledge God as the source of grace and inspiration, and to whom the prayer is directed. Companioned Prayer is a prayer and not a therapy, and must not endeavor to replace professional help. Also it is very important to never develop or use alternative forms of the prayer in order to promote a specific point of view or a specific desired experience or outcome. Likewise in this Companioned Prayer and its various versions we should not ask God for a specific outcome or understanding. In this contemplative prayer we must trust that God will provide what we or others need, when and how we need it according to God's purpose, not ours.

This is not meant in any way to deprecate other forms of prayer, in which such specific requests may be very fitting. In fact some of the listening skills learned by practicing Companioned Prayer can be applied to other forms of prayer. For example when engaged in a prayer of petition, after each request you might purposefully pause, take a breath (being aware of your body), and see if it feels like there is anything that God might be calling you to notice, such as a word, image, feeling or memory, that seems to somehow fit with the way your petition feels inside, and then to be open to following that in a contemplative way. Or when preparing for the Sacrament of Reconciliation, you may wish to replace the question within ASKING GOD with, "...what feels like God wants me to be with, in Confession, right now?" These types of Companioned Prayer approaches to prayer can be used for personal prayers of adoration, thanksgiving, confession, and intercession, as well as petition.

When using a Companioned Prayer practice with others, manipulative techniques are never justified no matter how righteous the cause. For example, when leading a Bible study, you may invite the participants to quietly ask themselves (in a contemplative prayer way) to notice if in their response to the reading they find anything that God might be calling them to notice or to listen to, and then invite them to be with that in a Companioned Prayer way. Such a question and invitation are open and do not presuppose a specific outcome. It demonstrates faith that God is fully capable of inspiring and calling us in ways that are personal and unique to each individual, without presuming any "correct" answer or "best" outcome. Nor should such a question even presuppose that there is something within the reading that God is in fact calling the person to notice at this time.

From a Companioned Prayer perspective, exactly how such questions are framed is very important. Questions and prayer formats must remain open ended and completely invitational. Nuances do make a difference. For example it would be inappropriate to invite the participants of a Bible study to quietly ask themselves (in a contemplative prayer way) to notice which of two interpretations or meanings feels that God would deem correct, and then to be with that in a contemplative Companioned Prayer way. Such an invitation places God and the participant in a box where only two outcomes are permitted. This imposes the constraints of the interpretation or the prejudice of the person doing the inviting into the relationship between the person praying and God. Such uses are manipulative and wrong.

Likewise, religious prayer questions that imply a "right" (or righteous) response or which are designed to elicit a specific personal vulnerability should never be used, regardless of their "saving" purpose. For example, questions such as "Who is my savior?" "What is my greatest sin?" and "Am I going to hell?" are all psychologically and religiously manipulative. They assert a specific outcome, or presume a type of outcome, over the gentle freedom of being open to however God may desire us to approach him. One should never try to force grace.

When developing changes to the Companioned Prayer forms or when developing new forms, the principles listed below should be followed. Additional principles can be derived from the material in other chapters, particularly chapters 5 and 6.

- Always keep it a prayer between the person praying and God.
- Keep the person praying focused on their inner experience and not on the companion.
- Keep the instructions brief and get out of the way. Sometimes brevity is better than clarity.
- When providing instructions always include words that let the person praying know when they should provide feedback. For example “let me know...” etcetera.
- Never ask the person praying to disclose or share what they are experiencing. Honor the private sanctity between the person praying and God.
- Do not use words or phrases that take the person to their intellect to try and define what is going on or what something means. Use words that are broad in meaning that let the person who is praying be comfortable in their own definitions.
- Keep the awareness of the body in the prayer.
- Do not create instructions that sooth away or replace feelings of hurt or brokenness with images or feelings of God. Instead, use faith to help the person let go into the sense of their personal needs as they place themselves in God’s loving heart.
- Do not add adjectives or other words that would characterize the person’s interior prayer experience. Let the person have their experience as it actually is, without placing modifiers, expectations or constraints. Do not use adjectives within the question in ASKING GOD, such as “most”, “number one”, et cetera.
- Always begin and end with an opportunity for a personal prayer as indicated in the Opening Prayer and Closing Prayer.

Always try out every proposed change with others multiple times. Some of the best intellectual or theological ideas fall flat when put to practice. If it seems to work, withhold judgment until it has been tried by a number of people over time. Likewise if you are translating a form into another language, be sure that you first have a thorough sense of the prayer from plenty of experience praying it, and then take your time, carefully selecting the words, trying out various word alternatives in prayer practice with others, and getting their feedback over a period of weeks and months. Before making any changes to the prayer or translating it, the people involved should regularly practice Companioned Prayer as offered in this book for a number of years, and should thoroughly understand its many nuances, including the gifts of the mercies of God, both experientially and intellectually.

Companioned Prayer is all about trust in God, being authentic, surrender, and being open. It is not a technique; it is a prayer. No set of instructions, no matter how perfectly crafted, can make anything happen. It is all a personal matter of the heart, and the gift of God’s loving presence given in his own time and in his own way.

Companioned Prayer in Service Outreach

This is my commandment: love one another, as I have loved you. There is no greater love than this, that someone should lay down his life for his friends.

John 15:12-13

The Challenge to Love

It seems that part of the human condition is suffering. Everyone at various times in life either has or will suffer deeply. It happens. Friends and spouses die. Children, sisters and brothers die. We all get sick. People lose their jobs. Marriages fail and end. Children lose their families. Some people are deeply wounded by violence. Others suffer hunger or oppression. Some people lose their physical health, others lose their mental health. Some lose their mobility and their connection with others. Some lose their faith. Many people are in great pain, some obviously, and many very silently. This deep suffering happens at some time or other in just about everyone we know.

Jesus commands us to love one another. But most of us are pretty much self-focused. Primarily, we do what rewards us and feels easy and safe. We are loving to those immediately around us, our family and friends when they are near. However, most people do not go out of their way to call on those in need, to be a friend or to help someone in a time of personal trial. In part it is because we feel we don't know what to do. We might feel awkward reaching out to someone in need. It may expose our vulnerability. It feels risky. In addition we are so busy with our regular life that we feel we do not have time to take on a burden. That is how it seems. We perceive others' problems or situations as burdens. We feel that if we were to get involved only a little it might quickly become a lot. After all, it is difficult to fix our own problems; how much more time and effort it would take to fix someone else's problems. Many problems are so personal, and our inner resources feel so limited. So we think, "Yes it would be good to be more helpful, and someday when I have more time, I'm sure I will." So we just don't. And Jesus waits in sadness.

But Christ calls us to love one another. We can start with acceptance, with friendship, with kindness, with compassion. We can begin by just being with someone, present to them to the extent that we can; perhaps without burdening ourselves by thinking it's our job to make their pain go away, or to heal them, or to fix them emotionally, physically or spiritually. In the beatitudes Jesus said that those in need and time of trial are blessed, that God's kingdom awaits them. That's not something you can easily convince someone of, especially someone who is suffering. The truth of the beatitudes must be experienced; and from that, understanding can come. Each of our trials offers us an opportunity to receive and grow in God's love. But it must happen personally, within us. We must each walk the path of the cross; find ourselves totally vulnerable; and letting go into that, within our faith, surrender our control over to God; and then discover ourselves to be open to God's divine grace, to his personal love. But this can be done with the help of others.

Offering the Prayer to Those in Need

Companioned Prayer offers us a way to be with someone in need in a way that facilitates that walk with God, a walk that is personal to each person, yet open to the gift of God's grace felt within their very trial. Through our personal outreach and caring presence, Jesus' loving presence can be our shared reality, given by him and received deeply within. Whether we are responding to someone in need as part of an organized program such as a caring ministry of our church, or as part of some other outreach service, or whether we are just responding individually, Companioned Prayer can be offered directly to those in need. The person being visited or ministered to need not have any understanding of the prayer in order to do it. Simply ask them if they would like you to guide them through a private prayer of listening for God's grace. You might let them know how you have found the prayer to have helped you, and how special you believe the prayer is. Be ready to respond to any questions they may have, sharing from your own experience with the prayer.

If they are uncertain about whether or not to proceed, ask if it would be okay just to pray for God's gentle love and blessing felt within them, within their cares and concerns. If that is okay, let them know that you will lead them in a guided prayer that includes noticing how their cares and concerns feel inside, in their body, and that you will then invite them to feel God's gentle love and tenderness. You might then use the following format (note that this format can be adapted for a large group for use during an introductory meeting – see chapter 12).

Dear Lord, we ask for your love and blessings today, especially for [the person's name] and for [his or her] cares and concerns (especially for _____ [insert cares you know or they have shared, such as their health, their loved ones, and so on].) [short pause]

Now I invite you to silently be aware of any special care or concern that at this time you would like Jesus to know about. Take your time, and let me know when you have the right thing in mind and you are ready to go on. [wait for a response]

When they are ready, continue with: Notice how this care or concern feels in your body, and how you have been carrying it. [pause]

Now with tenderness and in faith, notice what it feels like to take all of this to the loving heart of Jesus, and to feel his gentle love and acceptance. [pause] Take your time, and then let me know if you can feel His gentle love and tenderness within all of this. [wait]

If they can feel some of God's gentle love, continue with: Okay, let go into how all this feels inside, into God's tender love within you, within how you are holding all of this, and rest within it all, being open to God's tender grace and gift for a while. Take your time, being open to anything else that may come, and noticing what that may feel like inside. [pause for a few minutes]

After a few minutes, continue with: Continue to rest in God's quiet tenderness until you are ready to stop at least for now, and then let me know. [wait]

When they are ready to stop, conclude with: Lord God, we thank you for the blessings of your love and care for us, and ask that you strengthen our trust and faith in you. Help us to always be in your gentle care, even in our times of trial.
In Jesus' name we pray, Amen.

When using the above format in an intimate small group, such as a family, use each person's name in the opening prayer, and wait for each person to respond out loud before going on to the next part of the prayer. Before praying, be sure to provide very simple and clear instructions for them to let you know when they are ready to go on in response to what comes.

Besides being a gentle prayer in itself, the above format will acquaint the person with how God's love can be felt inside them, and will give them a feel for how verbal instructions and feedback can be part of a companioned prayer with God. Afterward, invite them to share what that was like. Make sure they know that they shouldn't feel compelled to share if they don't want to. After some sharing and encouragement, you can then again invite them to pray the full Companioned Prayer with you, either then or perhaps later on subsequent visits.

When they say they would like to pray the Companioned Prayer with you, let them know what the two of you will be doing before you begin. For example, let them know that although their prayer is with God, because it is a guided or companioned prayer, the two of you will be able to briefly talk back and forth during the prayer. Also let them know that you will be asking them to notice what their body feels like in order to help them be more open to God and not caught up in thinking and emotion so much. If they are in physical pain, let them know that you will not expect them to dwell in their pain, but that they might notice how their overall body feels like. Also let them know that if they wish, they can keep their prayer completely private.

When you are ready to start, tell them that you are going to start with a prayer said out loud and then you will invite them to also say a prayer out loud, if they wish to. Then simply use the prayer as written in chapter 4, providing additional instructions as you go along, as needed. For example, if the person is in significant physical discomfort, you may wish to insert an additional GOD'S LOVE AND ACCEPTANCE immediately after the physical inventory of AS WE ARE. Encourage them to take some time with being gentle with their body, help them invite Jesus' compassion into their overall physical state, help them pause to notice what his compassion feels like in their body as they continue to be close to and own how they are physically feeling, and get their feedback that it is okay to continue before proceeding with the next prayer movement.

You should also read chapter 6 again and the special instructions of chapter 11 before you companion someone in need or someone who has not been through a formal instruction in the prayer. If you can, it is a good idea to have memorized the prayer so that you can companion them without having to refer to a printed piece of paper. Do not be upset if you don't get the words perfectly. Just do the best you can, knowing the sequential movements of the prayer, what the process feels like from the inside, and that Jesus will be a companion to both of you. The caring, faith-full quality of your presence of companioning is more important than the exact words used. But in any case, don't wait until you have the prayer form memorized before companioning someone, either in service outreach or in a prayer group or companion setting. Just use the printed form, and learn it when you can.

Do not presume that because this is a prayer of faith that you can only companion someone of your faith. As long as you present the prayer as a prayer with God, and as long as you have faith that Christ is present to both of you, you can invite the person to pray. God has never asked that we adopt a particular dogma before we can pray to him. Nor is he constrained by our paltry ability to surrender in faith to him in order for him to be able to reveal himself or to give us his gifts of mercy and love. Jesus knows our every tear, our brokenness, and our pains. He knows the crosses we bear. He is with us with compassion. It is in the simple act of praying that he often makes himself freely known. Therefore, Companioned Prayer is a wonderful way to offer the experience of a fresh new living faith to people that perhaps may only have a glimmer of some unrealized stirring within them. Trust in God's power, ability and love, and do not hesitate to offer the prayer to anyone in need or trouble.

But remember that you are not there to cure or to convert anyone. In fact if you have an attitude that you are there with the answers, the experience will likely not be one of spiritual gift and grace. You need to be there in humility, knowing that whatever you offer, it is given by God, not you. You are there on the same level as the person you are visiting. You are brothers and sisters in your journey with Christ, both infants of God. You are with the other person to also learn and be renewed from their presence to you. Therefore be open, loving and vulnerable with them. You must be willing to have their perspective, and to be open to learning and growing from it, letting their experience change you. Know you are powerless and let yourself be open to the Holy Spirit working through both of you as you serve each other. It is in your relationship of humble faith in God that you will find yourself and the person you are with, open to receive God's gifts of mercy and love.

Companioned Prayer can be the precious heart, the heart of Jesus' love, within any caring visit to another person. That does not diminish the importance of the other usual aspects of such visits: friendship, listening, comfort, reflection, and responding with specific help. All of these, together with Companioned Prayer, should be a part of reaching out to another person in love.

After a visit or two in which you have companioned the person in prayer, you may wish to share an introductory brochure or introductory instructions with them. You can leave it with them before you leave so they can have an opportunity to read it before you come back. Be sure to offer it in large print or other suitable media if the person has trouble with their sight.

At some point, the person may offer to companion you in prayer. This is an important part of the ministry, and should be accepted gratefully. If you do not have time, set a time when you can come back and receive their offer. If you have been companioning them a few times and they have not offered to companion you, ask them if they would like to companion you in prayer. Often unless you ask, it will not occur to them that they can be your prayer companion. Carry a printed copy of the prayer with you for them to use, and help them out as you pray if needed. But don't treat the first few times as learning sessions with frequent corrections and critical feedback. Just gracefully accept their companioning in the spirit it is offered. Such mutual engagement allows them to be involved and helpful to another person, in a special faith-caring way. It can be a special treat for them as well as for you.

Many of the topics addressed in chapter 13 under "Christ Centered" and "Faith" also apply to when and how to use Companioned Prayer in service outreach. If you feel called by God in some special way to offer this prayer to others in need, then just do it. Consider yourself fortunate. Use the gift God has given you to share. If you are unsure how, see if there are others in your prayer group that would also like to be involved in ministering to others through the prayer. You do not need to wait until your church has an official outreach program to use the prayer in this way. Not all churches will initially step up to the opportunity. Some churches may be too self-focused and not ready. Don't let that stop you. If no one is with you and you are not sure how to proceed, just call on those in need, letting them know that you have a special companioned prayer you would like to share. Explain that you aren't sure how to share it and that you need their help in doing so. Always be honest and open with the people you are calling on, and always give them the opportunity to decline. Never try to sneak the prayer in, or disguise it, or use it without their knowledge.

Prayer Outreach Ministry Teams

If you have found others in your prayer group or your church's ministry groups who would like to participate, establish a devoted service outreach program or team. Plan to get together regularly to share ideas and to support each other. For example, you can relate how different situations of need can most effectively use different guidance and sensitivity. In all cases, however, everyone involved should be very clear that confidentiality of the person visited is imperative. Without the person's own authorization, you cannot share their personal information or experiences with anyone, including with others in the group. But you can share your own experiences of being the companion for others. For guidelines on how to deal with this, there are many good books available on the operation of care-giving ministry groups within the church. Also refer to the guidelines in chapter 7 pertaining to being a prayer partner to others.

Having a Companioned Prayer ministry outreach team can also allow those involved to get together between outreach visits to practice Intercessory Companioned Prayer. As you call on someone and get to know them, ministry team members can companion each other with the intercessory prayer contained in chapter 9. This will give the outreach companion inner guidance and assurance as he or she accompanies the person called on in their walk with God.

At some point, if the person being called on becomes physically able, invite them to join your regular Companioned Prayer group, and eventually to join your Companioned Prayer outreach ministry team.

When deciding whom to call on, also consider offering the prayer to the person's immediate caregivers: concerned family and friends who are most involved in providing nurture and care. Let them know that you are willing to teach them how to companion their loved one in prayer. If there is an interest, set up a special learning time in which they, the person in need, and you can all be available together. Make sure to include any special considerations that might pertain to using the prayer with the specific needs being ministered to.

In addition to offering the Companioned Prayer to a person's immediate caregivers, you (and/or your ministry team) can also offer the prayer to other caregiver organizations outside of your church. For example, helping organizations that serve the homeless, those with AIDS, people struggling with addiction, battered women, teen runaways, prisoners and families of prisoners, etcetera. Let them know that you have a prayer practice that you believe is exceedingly helpful and healing to those in need. Also let them know that the practice is private and non-intrusive, and it is not used to proselytize. If possible approach these groups from a personal invitation or testimony of someone in the organization, or better yet by someone served by the organization who has been companioned in the prayer.

Personal adoption of Companioned Prayer as a practice usually only occurs after regularly experiencing the prayer for some time. Therefore, ministry teams should be encouraged to not view their ministry as simply providing a Companioned Prayer experience one or two times, but should take the longer view, taking the time to form personal relationships with the people they call on, and to provide regular Companioned Prayer experiences at least over a number of months. God's full response in prayer to people in need is something that occurs over time, and a person's recognition of the sustained value of the prayer usually occurs as one appreciates God's full response given over time, his time.

Ministries of Compassion and Community

In whatever way we share the gifts of Companioned Prayer, it is vital that our Companioned Prayer Ministry be one of both compassion and community; a ministry in which we learn to deeply appreciate each other. Compassion is caring, kindness and appreciation for another. Community is being open to letting yourself receive compassion from others. So the entire group is equal; everyone is valued as a child of God. This is not the usual care-giver/care-receiver top-down model. It is a model where we are all open to each other, and to the trust, faith and grace experienced within the friendship and caring for each other.

To facilitate this we can consciously help create a compassionate environment. First by experiencing how God loves us unreservedly, even with all of our frailties and faults. With this realization born of direct experience within Companioned Prayer, we are freer to open our self to others, including strangers. We are touched directly by God's loving grace, even within our brokenness and personal challenges. This allows us to be empathetic to others who are in times of personal trial, because we know how precious that trial is, and how God's presence within each of us affirms the incalculable treasure that each person is.

Our experiences of Companioned Prayer also lets us realize that we do not need to fix or change other people. It is not our job to "make them right" or to control their beliefs, emotions or experiences. We can simply be present to them; listening with compassion and appreciation of them and the journey they are undertaking. We can be open to allowing them to affect us, in growing friendship and oneness. Trusting God, in humility we empty our self (our ego) interiorly to make room for them, we open our hearts to them, and likewise we allow ourselves and our story to be shared equally with them, so that their hearts can likewise be expanded, and so that a community of compassion can be born.

In this way, compassion and community are experienced and grow within actual relationships. It is not a theological or theoretical understanding that takes place; it is actually experiencing the gift of each other. In this the Kingdom of God is born. And it is nurtured by the caring presence that we provide to each other when we companion one another in prayer. In this mutual fellowship of trust, faith and love, we can then be open to letting go into our prayer issues within Jesus' tender presence; and we can be open to continuing to experience being beckoned forward into faith, healing and revelation. This is the gift of a ministry of compassion and community.

This environment of faith, compassion, trust, and community – a letting go, an acceptance, an appreciation of what is, and an embracing; all within the loving heart of Jesus – is vital for any Companioned Prayer ministry. It is critical that we establish a ministry environment of loving care and trust, where everyone can feel and trust the loving heart of Jesus, the compassion of Mary, the gentle tenderness of God's Holy Spirit, and our love for one another. Within all this we can offer the prayer, and we can companion one another. Without first establishing this environment, people will not surrender into their prayer's personal faith story and will not know Mercy.

Responding to the Need for Faith Formation

The awakened personal awareness of God's presence within the individual will create a personal need for understanding and appreciation of all that the Church offers. Therefore, the Companioned Prayer experiences should be accompanied by accessible faith formation. Access and engagement with this formation may need to be tailored to the groups, families and individuals in need. It can be provided by the Church and its other ministries, or the Companioned Prayer ministry may wish to personally facilitate access and participation in the Church's activities. Therefore we can discuss faith in relation to a person's prayer experiences and their spiritual needs as they have expressed them; and we can inform them of the services offered at their local church, such as worship times, bible studies, Sunday school, childcare, reconciliation, RCIA, and other programs. We can offer to accompany them to church or, with the person's approval, we may coordinate their engagement with people from other church ministries. When an individual's experiences in Companioned Prayer are reflected in their experiences and understandings gained through participating in Church worship and formation, then the personal appreciation of the riches of faith and the treasure and mercy of God is sure to grow.

A New Paradigm for Service Ministry

In addition to companioning individuals in need, Companioned Prayer outreach ministry groups should also evolve their outreach to facilitate the individuals and communities of need to adopt Companioned Prayer within themselves and acquire the skills to companion each other in faith. In this paradigm, the shift is from a compassionate, faith-filled, caregiver-to-recipient ministry approach to an empowered-community-ministry, in which with compassion and faith its own members can companion each other. The Companioned Prayer outreach ministry can plan for and facilitate the development of this new empowered-community-ministry. In this evolved peer-to-peer approach to ministry, the community realizes the experience of God's grace through its members directly and collectively, through their own faith and the working of the Holy Spirit. This empowerment of the human spirit by the Holy Spirit, with faith, understanding and compassion, will dynamically transform the entire community of need, into a community of ministry, God's grace and gift.

Key Program Elements for Service Ministry

After participating in a ten-week or similar introductory structured course as depicted in chapter 12, some people may feel inspired to use Companioned Prayer in their service ministries. Program elements which support that goal are offered below. Such a program should allow participants to design a Companioned Prayer program within their ministry, to introduce it, to support its continuance, to provide feedback and improvements, and to ensure that the Companioned Prayer ministers receive ongoing support from each other. Some people will want to focus on using Companioned Prayer directly with the people that are served by the ministry, while others may wish to focus on introducing and training other people in the ministry to learn and use Companioned Prayer in their outreach. When the focus is on teaching Companioned Prayer to people who are already active in a ministry, those people should be encouraged to participate in a regular ten-week course or a ten-week program oriented to learn Companioned Prayer and how to apply it within a ministry. Refer to the "resources" page of the Companioned Prayer Christian Fellowship's website at www.CompanionedPrayer.org/Resources for ideas.

It should be recognized that expecting people who are provided with the Companioned Prayer experience through a service ministry to continue the practice on their own is not realistic, unless they are supported through participating in a regular course of instruction or an ongoing Companioned Prayer group. Nevertheless, depending upon the purpose of the ministry, Companioned Prayer experiences, even if not long-term, can be a blessing for those in need.

Involve the ministers in the planning

Service ministers who will be using Companioned Prayer in outreach service should be involved in the planning and development of the Companioned Prayer service ministry program. This facilitates their own ability to discern how God is calling them and what they might do to respond to that call. Programs might focus on a one-on-one ministry approach where a person experienced in companioning, companions a person in need. For example, this approach could apply to pastoral ministers individually calling upon another person at home. Or a program might be designed for a small group of people who are available at the same location. For example, three pastoral ministers calling on a residential care home could each companion another person, or perhaps even two people one at a time, and include some group introduction and after-prayer group sharing. In a small group approach, some of the material and ideas from the early sessions of the ten-week instructional programs might be useful. However, for almost all ministries the approach will always need to be very personal rather than "classroom" style.

Companioned Prayer

Companioned Prayer team ministers

Whenever possible, the introduction of Companioned Prayer into a particular service ministry benefits from at least two Companioned Prayer ministers working together. This facilitates planning, outreach, ongoing learning and assessment, and deep fellowship in the Spirit through the experience of God's presence in the acts of ministry and in those being ministered to.

Ongoing support for the Companioned Prayer ministers

Any program of Companioned Prayer service outreach should offer ongoing Companioned Prayer for the Companioned Prayer ministers themselves. Throughout their program, they will need to continually experience the support of each other and the guidance of God the Father, Son and Holy Spirit through Companioned Prayer.

Working with sponsors

It is very important to work with the leadership of the ministries, and to inform and seek guidance from those who are in positions of leadership within the organizations involved, both religious and secular. For example if your church has a hospice ministry program it may work through a city or county hospice program or other secular non-profit agency. In this case, the Companioned Prayer ministers should ensure that all leadership parties are fully informed of the Companioned Prayer program for the ministry, what is planned and how it is going. Leadership would include the leaders of the church's hospice ministry, the priest or pastor of the church, and the leaders of the secular hospice agency. They should be brought into the planning and implementation processes at various stages, and should also be provided with status and follow-up discussions as the program proceeds and when it is concluded. Sponsor support can not only smooth the way for implementation, it also allows these leaders to enrich the Companioned Prayer service program with their valuable experience and insight.

Evolving into next steps

The Companioned Prayer service ministry should remain flexible and responsive to the grace of God in its planning and implementation of Companioned Prayer service. When things do not turn out as expected, be open to what God may be telling you in these experiences and situations. Often our best plans are not God's best plans, and something greater awaits, if we will only listen with openness, trust, faith and patience. In this way we can be responsive to God and let our program evolve through the gentle nudges of the Holy Spirit.

God's Personal Gift to Us

Having a prayer ministry team that serves those in need is a fundamental part of being a Christian Church and being a Christian. Offering Companioned Prayer as the heart of that encounter is a wonderful way to share God's love and mercy with others. And as we do so, we will find our own heart is opened and transformed. Then reaching out to give others practical aid will not be a "fixing chore", but will be a treasured opportunity to fulfill our own and God's desire to love. Those in need will become God's very special gifts to us to express his love.

For this is what Jesus asked us to do: to love one another, to be kind to others, to take care of the sick, the lonely, the persecuted, those in prison, those who suffer. To be a Christian is to extend Christ's love given freely within us to Him seen in all others through faith, but especially to the poor and those in need. The Good News is to be made real by us through the expression of our love in the daily reality we find ourselves in. This is the great gift we have been given: to be able to bring the love and gift of God's Kingdom to all people. It is in the real relationships that we create, and in the love, care and kindness we give others, that we serve Christ. This love is an active choice, and an activity we can do. And when we repeatedly experience Christ's presence and love within us in Companioned Prayer, his abiding love fills us and heals us, making us whole in him. And in our inner reality of him we are freer to love others. We will want to love others; we will choose to love and serve. And as we grow in our awareness of Christ within us and in others through Companioned Prayer, and as we reach out to others in love and service, we will be transformed: we will truly become Christ's living disciples.

Additional Instructions

*Here is my servant, whom I uphold, my chosen, in whom my soul delights;
...a bruised reed he will not break, and a dimly burning wick he will not quench.*

Isaiah 42:1a, 3a

This chapter presents some additional instructions for both the person praying and the companion. These instructions can be helpful for specific situations and should be learned at least prior to using the prayer in service outreach (see chapter 10) and prior to teaching Companioned Prayer (see chapters 12 and 13). With regards to initially learning Companioned Prayer, I would recommend gaining a few months of regular practice of the prayer before spending any significant time learning these additional instructions unless any of these topics are applicable to your particular situations. Since much of this builds on the material in chapters 5 and 6, if it has been a while since you have read those chapters, you may wish to review them first.

The Loving Heart of Jesus

In GOD'S LOVE AND ACCEPTANCE we are encouraged to take our prayer subject to the loving heart of Jesus. But what is the loving heart of Jesus? Some people may have a specific concept in mind, such as the Catholic devotion to the Sacred Heart and related illustrations. These devotions may venerate Jesus' physical heart as the representation of his divine love for us. For other people the concept of Jesus' loving heart may be unfamiliar and perhaps even disconcerting. Unfortunately both reactions (veneration or confoundment) take us away from our inner felt Companioned Prayer experience, and move us out to some thought, meditation, or emotional devotion. Therefore in addition to reviewing this subject in chapter 3's Jesus Loves Us and in chapter 5's section GOD'S LOVE AND ACCEPTANCE, it may be helpful to further understand how the loving heart of Jesus is surrendered into in Companioned Prayer.

Through our faith we know that Jesus is the embodiment of God's love for us as we are, and that love is expressed not only through Jesus but also through all of God's creation, including us. When we experience love from another person, or when we experience the love we give another person, this love is a sharing of God's love felt here and now, concretely. This love is a portion of the blessing and gift of God's love, the same love that he provided in fullness and transparent purity through Jesus. We experience this divine love in our relationships of compassion, hope, charity, love, tenderness and affection. Therefore we already know from our own experience how tender love and acceptance feels, and we can naturally appreciate how Jesus' tender love for all humanity feels, and how his love for us, with our personal burdens and wounds that we carry, feels. Perhaps we have had some experiences in Companioned Prayer or in other worship or prayer times of more direct appreciation or experiences of Jesus' loving heart, of his pure love or tender compassion. If so, we can also place our self and our prayer subject within how this gentle and deep tender love feels inside, not as a concept, but in a physical letting go and surrendering within. This is a felt mystery that will deepen with time. So be patient, and in faith be okay with not trying to define exactly what it is.

The Body Feel of God's Presence

God imbued his creation with the Holy Spirit. We are open to living in that Spirit in the wholeness of our being – mind, heart, body and soul – in a special and wondrous way through faith; belief based on revelation, God's revelation through his son Jesus Christ, the prophets, scripture, and the miracle and awe of his creation. The revelation of love given and received with one another, and the revelation of love and grace received of God. Jesus demonstrated this incarnation of God's presence and love in his presence, words and actions. Jesus did not simply correct the old theology. He did not simply try to get us to exchange one set of beliefs or interpretations for a more accurate set. Instead he showed us that the reality of divinity – of the Kingdom of God – is to be realized in all aspects, including through the physical, in the concrete here and now. He wanted us to understand that the Kingdom of God is to be lived and carried out not just in our minds; but through faith, it is to be experienced and lived in our complete humanness: our minds, hearts, bodies and souls.

Jesus put great emphasis on demonstrating God's presence in the body. He healed the physically sick and the lame; people experienced this. He walked from town to town, and ate with people. He did not just sit in a synagogue or academy and proclaim a new "correct interpretation." He fed the multitudes. And at the Last Supper he said, "Take and eat of my body and drink of my blood." One of the things he was emphasizing was that his real presence – God's presence – is to be experienced and known through our physical bodies as well as in our minds. And that his real presence accepted fully in this way will actually transform us in the here and now; save us from ourselves and open us to the divine. He is telling us that the new Covenant with God through him is real, not just in a mystical understanding but in the fullness and realness of creation and ourselves. He was always bringing the truth of God's Spirit into concreteness; taking it beyond dogma and into the physical reality of who and how we are, here and now, in action and in body as well as in mind and spirit: in our whole real humanness. We are not just to love in the abstract or to worship love; but we are to love our neighbors and our enemies. He gives us examples such as the Good Samaritan, and others. Throughout every aspect of his ministry he proclaims and demonstrates the Good News in the very real and practical life we are living.

It is in this concrete completeness that we are called to experience the Good News, as God reveals himself within us and heals us in Companioned Prayer. As baptized Christians we are the body of Christ. "Now you are the body of Christ and individually members of it." (1 Corinthians 12:27) Both collectively and individually, through faith and grace, our body is Christ's body, our blood is his blood, as we yield to his will and let his transforming real presence – the loving presence of God – be felt and known in our body. And in Companioned Prayer we frequently bring our attention to our physical nature, our/his body. The reason we do this is more than just to quiet our mind and our emotions. When something comes in response to ASKING GOD and throughout the prayer, there is a special sense to what has come that distinguishes it from other things. There is something more to it, something that can actually be felt. Not felt emotionally, but felt viscerally, genuinely, intrinsically. We can feel it in our body. It has a tangible realness that defies our making it up in our mind or emotions. So when we check inside to sense how something feels in our body in prayer, we are opening our awareness to the Holy Spirit in the reality and concreteness of the physical. In this contemplative incarnational Companioned Prayer, through faith we are open to the tender sense of the Holy Spirit felt in our body, experienced as physically felt; as a gift, not as made up by us.

That the body should have a place in our experience of the Holy Spirit should not be a surprise. Consider how wondrous the body is: how the eyes and sight give us all creation to see; how the ears and hearing give us whispers and song; how our legs and feet give us motion, and our arms and hands give us others to hold; how we can feel the wind, and the cold and the warmth; how our bodies transform food into our nourishment; how even our bodies give us the ability to co-create new life. Our bodies are miraculous, and are inseparable from our humanness, including our ability to grow in God's love and to express his love here and now. It should be no surprise that the body, which God created for his purpose, also has a role in giving us God's love poured out and experienced through the Holy Spirit. "What God has made clean, you are not to call profane." (Acts 10:15) This wonderful human body is a gift of God imbued with his life force. It has more subtlety and gift than we commonly acknowledge. Thus in Companioned Prayer we frequently return our awareness of something that has come to how it feels in our body, in the realness of our humanness, knowing that by doing so we are also nurturing our awareness of God's personal and awesome loving presence. In this gift of God's grace, we begin to understand how our bodies are the body of Christ here, now, personally, and for all of us.

This awareness of God's personal love and care for us in our life, as directly and physically experienced through Companioned Prayer will dawn naturally over time with each prayer experience. In Companioned Prayer the act of bringing our awareness to the body has greater implications than simply quieting our thoughts or stilling our emotions. At some point when this truth is felt within, the practice of discerning how something feels in the body helps us not only when we pray but also in our everyday life. We find that it is possible to be aware of God's living Covenant and to be guided by Christ in our hearts, so that we too may respond to God's call to love, to abide in him, and to help others in the real needs of all of his people and his creation. And then, in him and with him, we will truly be his hands, his heart, his body, his people, his Church here on Earth.

Wanting Change and Recognizing the Issue

One of the most prevalent stumbling blocks to the prayer is created when the person praying lets their attention be held by an attitude of wanting change. The person seeks resolution to their issue in the form of an answer, solace, comfort, healing, or some other sign or mercy from God. This impediment to prayer and to being close to God also occurs when we are seeking "spiritual experiences." The blockage comes because the person is fixed on a preconceived desired outcome, instead of letting go into the issue and in faith letting God provide whatever response he wills. Companioned Prayer calls upon us to be present to our issues in complete faith in God, surrendering to his will, and trusting his justice and mercy. When we hold on to a desired or hoped for outcome, we are not open to listening to what might come. At that point the prayer ceases to be contemplative; that is, it has ceased to be a prayer of listening for God's presence in our life and walking in faith with him, and has instead become a prayer of confession or petition.

Yet when we are in pain or during a time of trial, the desire for relief received from God is only natural. The companion can help the person through this blockage if the person praying lets the companion know what is going on. For example, as a result of the ASKING GOD part of the prayer the person praying must let their companion know that "nothing is happening" or similar phrase. Then the companion can respond. The companion can ask the person if it would feel right or okay for them to be with the feeling of "nothing happening" – or whatever phrase was used by the person praying.

This changes the person's focus from fixating on a desired outcome, to the issue they are truly dealing with at present, right now in their prayer, which is that "nothing is happening." The first movement or shift in their prayer has already taken place, without their being aware of it. They started with their question and its general or related issues, which then shifted to "nothing is happening." Any feelings of impatience or frustration associated with "nothing is happening" are usually a result of having a desire for something to happen or unknowingly fixating on a desired outcome. By following this shift, the person will come back to being present to, and surrendering in faith into, their issue as God is calling them to listen to. It is by letting go in faith into the whole experience and feeling of "nothing is happening" that the person can be free to listen to God. The person need not feel that they have abandoned their original issue. They are just following its progression in a truly contemplative way, being open to what is real within them right now and being open to God without preconceived or desired outcomes.

Just as it is not our goal in Companioned Prayer to have God fix us, heal us or save us, our goal is also not to validate a theology or to have a religious experience. As soon as we want that, we are not open in faith to what we may need to hear from God. Usually wanting to be healed or saved or wanting a religious experience is indicative of a deeper need; some ache or tenderness within us that longs to be listened to. If our focus is to have a religious experience or to have an experience that validates our personal theology or beliefs, then we are no longer being faithful, no longer owning and letting go into our authentic need in faith, compassion and trust. When we want a predefined outcome we are no longer in a relationship of surrender into a living faith within our prayer. Therefore each time we pray we must be willing to let go of our theologies and instead simply trust in God. If you find yourself focused on being healed or saved or having a particular type of experience, then instead, be open to the feeling in your body of your wanting to be healed, saved, etcetera, rather than on the desired-for outcome. If you are companioning someone who has expressed a desire for an outcome, encourage them to be open to journeying with the feeling of the need of their desire rather than its outcome.

Discerning What God is Calling Us To Listen To

Some people who are learning the prayer may expect that in the ASKING GOD movement they are supposed to hear God speak to them; that they are supposed to discern God's thoughts as distinct from their own thoughts. This is an erroneous expectation. In our prayerful surrender to God, he is present to us but we wait for his inspiration through our human feelings and thoughts which we perceive as ours, but as somehow special or unique from our other thoughts or feelings that do not have his inspiration.

Often as a result of asking what feels like God is calling you to listen to in ASKING GOD, what comes is just a symbol, rather than a clear personal issue or subject. When this occurs, pause to notice the general feeling or sense associated with the symbol, and then notice how that feels in your body. If it seems special in some way, use the symbol and its associated feeling as your prayer subject, if it feels right to do so.

Sometimes we may find ourselves looking for or expecting a concrete issue or symbol before accepting it to journey with in prayer. We might find ourselves waiting without giving value to some very slight feeling or sense within that we have received or are aware of. However, if instead we were to allow ourself to accept this faint sense, at least temporarily, to pause and notice it, spending time with it and staying with it for a little while, it may on its own develop into something that more definitely feels like it is something to be journeyed with. This way of noticing can be useful both in the ASKING GOD part of the prayer as well as during BEING OPEN TO GOD'S SPIRIT.

Sometimes a person just is not sure whether what has come is what God is calling them to be with in prayer, or perhaps even whether or not their overall prayer experience is from or with God. In such instances, encourage the person to be open to having that doubt as an issue to be with in their prayer. It is good to turn to Jesus with our doubts. We put our trust first in him, and in him we are open to truth. This does not mean that we must have perfect trust and faith in order to pray. God loves us and reaches out to us in whatever state of trust or doubt we are in. He accepts us and lovingly helps us as we are, with our imperfections, doubts, transgressions, pains, and aspirations. In fact, like Thomas, it is by owning our very real doubts in prayer and allowing them to be our prayer subject, that we may find a greater revealed Truth. However, unless we let the person know that it is okay to be with our doubts in prayer, they may not realize that this too is part of our journey in faith.

Companioning People with Short Attention Spans

Some people, due to their illness or other condition, will only be able to focus their attention for very short periods. For those people, consider offering to companion them only with appropriate sections of the prayer, with repeated instruction or further guidance. Let the person know that the two of you will try different approaches, and together you two will discuss what seems to work best. Empower the person to let you know what they are most comfortable with. Get to know the person and their needs with respect to how to best apply the format of the prayer process, and let them know that you will be discovering and discussing this together through trial and error.

For example, together you might set a length of time for periods of silence after which you are to ask if something came, what they are doing or feeling, what they would like to do, or if they want you to automatically repeat or reinforce certain instructions, to regularly ask for feedback, and so forth. Another approach could be to provide breaks between the prayer's movements with brief discussion, listening or just resting. Such discussion should be minimal and should only support their giving attention and recognition to their prayer experience in the manner that will facilitate their ability to stay with their experience, including as felt in their body, with gentleness and openness to grace. Then gently guide them on to the next part with eyes closed as appropriate and as they wish. Perhaps repeat their symbol of what they have shared and invite them to notice how it feels in their body, which is a member of Christ's body, and then invite them into the next prayer movement. After experiencing this a number of times they may or may not, depending on their disability, be ready to experience the entire prayer in its full continuous fluidity.

Trauma and Major Illness

Some individuals may have experienced trauma related to a parts of their body in their past, including physical accidents, injury, violence or even abuse, including sexual trauma. Never encourage a person to be with physical sensations or feelings (or related emotional issues) beyond their own comfort level. Remember that the person praying is in charge. The role of the companion is to facilitate by following the wishes, and responding to the needs, of the person praying. Sometimes a person's awareness of past experiences or deep emotional feelings may have been repressed and the physical inventory (AS WE ARE) is the first time their awareness is led back to where in their body such trauma occurred. Whenever an individual encounters and expresses feelings of violence or abuse, the companion must be especially sensitive, patient and compassionate.

If, during the physical inventory, the person has stopped within the feelings of past trauma, you might ask them if they would like to check to see if it would feel right to pause for a few moments within Jesus' gentle love and compassion (see GOD'S LOVE AND ACCEPTANCE) or if they would like to go on with the inventory. If they want to pause within God's love and acceptance, it is important to come back to the conclusion of the physical inventory before proceeding with the prayer. That is, do not guide them from there directly into LETTING GO IN THE LOVING HEART OF JESUS unless they have specifically stated that is what they want to do. If at any time in the prayer, including during the physical inventory, they wish to stop completely, honor that, inviting them to stop within compassion and tenderness felt overall inside. They have made an important and very large step in their prayer journey into wholeness.

In addition to trauma, individuals may be personally challenged by other forms of psychological and/or medical conditions, mental as well as physical. In all cases, Companioned Prayer is not in any way a substitute for professional therapy or medical treatment. Nor should Companioned Prayer be considered as a form of treatment for such conditions. However, such conditions often challenge a person spiritually. Therefore to the extent that the person wishes to approach their issue from a faith perspective, within their prayer, you may companion them if you feel comfortable doing so. However, you must companion them with sensitivity, always asking them to check if it really feels okay and right for them to be with their issue, initially and as it changes. Take great care to invite them to repeatedly experience GOD'S LOVE AND ACCEPTANCE with their issue, and to stop whenever they wish.

Other people may come to the prayer and find themselves repeatedly dealing with a surprisingly intensely distressing or traumatic issue. Again, you should feel free to suggest professional therapy or medical help, and discuss the special spiritual role of the prayer as distinct from any form of treatment. You should openly talk with the person to help them understand that what you offer is a prayer and not a therapy. If you feel that the person is using your companionship presence and skills as a form of treatment, or if you feel they are relying on you in any way to be their therapeutic caregiver, you should not companion them until they are clear about what the prayer is about and what your role as a prayer companion is. You should not feel obligated to companion anyone whom you are not comfortable companionshiping; and you should not do so. Instead ask them to discuss their participation in the prayer with their priest and therapist or doctor before possibly returning to practice the prayer.

None of this is to suggest that prayer or Companioned Prayer is inappropriate for individuals that have experienced or are experiencing trauma, dysfunction, grief or other emotional challenges, mental illness or physical illness. In fact, prayer is a natural response to such times of crisis and challenge. Nor would it be proper to suggest that physical, emotional and spiritual healing cannot occur within prayer or for that matter within Companioned Prayer. History and experience tell us that God can and does intervene, and can provide mercy and grace within personally challenging situations. But with Companioned Prayer, it must be remembered that the prayer experience is between the person praying and God, and that neither the companion nor the person praying should view the role of the companion or the prayer practice itself as a substitute for professional treatment if that is what is needed.

Resistances Can Be Doorways

Nevertheless, all of us carry personal challenges and issues within us. It is a part of the human condition. Therefore, when a person is praying it is not unusual for them to come upon hurting or broken places within them. These can be felt in a variety of ways including anger, sadness, shame, fear, pain, anxiousness, tears, and so on. Sometimes, even with deep feelings of hurt or pain, it can still feel okay to journey with those feelings in prayer. Usually when there is a sense of “okay to be with it”, the person praying also has some tangible sense of faith in God’s living presence – that God is with them in their brokenness and pain. If, in your own prayer, you do decide to journey with such feelings, it is important to be with your issue with compassion. Let your prayer companion know what is going on, and ask for help with taking your prayer issue to Jesus’ loving heart and taking plenty of time and repeated instructions if desired, to feel Jesus’ love and acceptance. (See the discussions in this chapter and in chapters 5 and 6 on GOD’S LOVE AND ACCEPTANCE.)

However, a very natural reaction to experiencing feelings of hurt or pain is to not want to be with those feelings or their issues. We tend to hold them off at arm’s length rather than listening inside them for God’s call. When we resist journeying with them in our prayer, however, we usually experience them as barriers – our prayer seems to go nowhere. However, as recognized by Frs. McMahan and Campbell, if ministered to with compassion, experiences of resistances can often become doorways to God’s awesome love and mercy, instead of walls.

It is important to never proceed into feelings of hurt or resistance when it doesn’t feel okay or right to do so. Remember, you (who are praying) are in charge, not your companion. Your inner feelings and defenses need to be honored every time – without exception – by both you and your prayer companion. But with faith and love, often there can be a way to be with the resistance in a manner that does feel okay inside for you to journey with in prayer. Rather than proceeding into the hurt or issue, you might notice the feeling of resistance instead. Notice the feeling or sense of “not wanting to journey with it.” If you are companionshiping someone who has come upon difficult or hurting feelings, you can ask the person if it would feel okay to spend some time with the sense of not wanting to be with the issue instead of with the issue itself, by offering the following wording:

RESISTANCES

When the person indicates resistance, or a feeling of 'not okay' to listening to or journeying with a feeling, issue or symbol, ask them: Would you like to see if it would be okay to be with your sense of not wanting to be with all this? [wait for a response]

If they say no and have not given you any further instructions, help them set this issue aside and then ask them what they would like to do next (e.g. discern if there might be something else that God is calling them to be with in prayer, end their prayer, etc.)

If they say yes: All right; with gentleness and faith, ask yourself, "Would it be okay to journey with 'not wanting to be with' all of this?" Let me know if it is okay to be with the sense of all your resistance to all of this. [wait for a response]

If it's still not okay, say: Staying with how this all feels in the body, and being open to God's tender love, check inside and see if there is some part of this whole thing that would feel okay to journey with, and let me know what you find. [wait]

If they say there is no part of it that they wish to journey with, and they have not given you any further instructions, help them set this issue aside and then ask them what they would like to do next (e.g. discern if there might be something else that God is calling them to be with in prayer, end their prayer, etc.)

If they say yes, proceed to GOD'S LOVE AND ACCEPTANCE.

Throughout this process, make sure that the person praying knows that they are the one in control. Keep the instructions invitational. The companion is simply honoring the wishes of the person praying, and assisting them do whatever they wish to do. The companion does not provide any advice or direction. It is all between the person praying and God.

A similar approach to dealing with resistances can be used when a person wants to talk about or act out their prayer issue. You might ask them to check inside, in their body, and see if it would feel okay to instead journey with the feeling of wanting or needing to act out or talk about it. If not, continue with the instruction for RESISTANCES above. However, if they are okay with proceeding, then invite them to experience some of God's gentle love and acceptance before going further.

The invitation to pause and take their prayer subject to the loving heart of Jesus, and to feel his gentle love and acceptance should be offered throughout the prayer whenever it seems appropriate. Go slowly, allowing the person to have unhurried time to sense and be with their issue or their resistance to it within their relationship with God, being open to Jesus' love, and listening inside to how he might be calling them to be present to their feelings or issues. Give them ample opportunity to be with the body-feeling of their issue or their resistance, instead of being with the emotion or concept of it. And encourage them to notice the body-feel of God's love whenever they let their attention go to how their issue feels in their body. (See the instructions in GOD'S LOVE AND ACCEPTANCE below and in chapters 5 and 6.)

Note that the above processes do not invite the person to be directly with their hurt, need or emotion. Instead, it is the resistance to the hurt that can be the doorway to God's grace. With God's love and compassion, feelings of resistance can be special opportunities to hear God and to be open to his spirit of mercy, reconciliation and understanding.

God's Love and Acceptance

Allowing a prayer subject (including the subject of resistance) to experience God's tender love and acceptance can be a critically important part of a person's prayer. Before reading further, stop and re-read those sections of chapters 5 and 6 about GOD'S LOVE AND ACCEPTANCE. In this section below, additional instruction and discussion are offered.

The companion should always be attentive for clues or statements from the person praying that can indirectly indicate that they may be journeying with a particularly sensitive issue. Symbols that are shared might include the words "scary" "anger" "sadness" and so forth. Descriptions shared can portray a sensitive or hurting picture or situation. Or the person might be giving physical clues, such as heavy sighs, slumped shoulders, or even tears. Note that all of these clues however do not necessarily mean that the person is dealing with painful or hurting issues. It is difficult to ascertain from these clues what the true nature of the person's interior experience is, and the companion should not attempt to do so. For example, tears or sighs can just as likely be tears of joy or sighs or relief. Shared symbols such as "scary" or "sadness" may not convey for example that the person's interior experience or feelings associated with these words might actually be of hope or feelings of God's personal love. So again, do not suppose that these clues indicate a particular interior experience, unless they are accompanied by clear and specific words to that affect from the person praying.

Nevertheless, when such clues are presented they usually do indicate that the person is carrying forward in their prayer a very sensitive issue, (regardless whether the person considers it to be a "positive" or "negative" feeling.) When you feel that they may be praying within a personally sensitive issue, that is the time to ask if they would like to pause and be with it in God's love and acceptance. Joyfully tender issues benefit from Jesus' gentle love and acceptance just as much as hurting or challenging issues. What matters is that the person is praying with a personally sensitive issue. Then the role of the companion is to help the person slow down and spend some time with it, in faith with Jesus' compassion invited and felt within them, held in their body, if that is what the person would like to do.

Sometimes a person may be praying with a particularly sensitive issue and yet when they bring it to Jesus' Sacred Heart they have not perceived or felt his tenderness or acceptance. In these occasions they may ask for help with this, or they may simply indicate that they do not feel Jesus' gentle love or acceptance. As their companion, there are a number of ways you can provide additional support.

First, if the person is fairly new to the prayer they may not have allowed themselves enough time to simply wait in faith in this part of the prayer. This is a contemplative step in which we don't do much beyond being open to God and patiently wait in faith. If we are used to doing something and expecting results, we may need to be reminded to slow down, be patient, take it easy and to approach this step in faith and trust. To help get out of our "instant expectation" frame of mind, the companion can ask us to again notice what it all (the prayer subject and the expectation or "nothing is happening") now feels like in their body. Bringing their attention to all of this as felt in the body will help the person get out of their head thinking and will help them be more open to the contemplative nature of the prayer. You might use a phrase like this:

Would it be okay to take a few minutes to notice how all this feels in your body?
[wait for a response; if "yes" continue with] Within the gentle love of God, notice how all of this feels in your body, and how you physically feel. Take your time, and then let me know when you've done that and we are ready to go on. [wait for a response]

After this, again invite them to Jesus' gentle Sacred Heart, tenderly carrying their prayer issue and taking their time to just wait there for a while with gentleness and compassion, and then after a while to let you know if they are ready to go on, or if they would like some more help with it.

This waiting is more than simply waiting in time. It is also a gentle waiting in an openness to God while still being with our prayer subject. If in response they have done this and have now indicated that they are ready to go on, proceed to LETTING GO IN THE LOVING HEART OF JESUS.

If they would like more help with this there are a number of suggestions you can provide to assist them. If the person has indicated that they are unfamiliar or uncomfortable with the concept of Jesus' loving Heart and cannot "do" that, they are signifying that they probably have abandoned the body-feel of their prayer experience (how they carry it) and have moved out into their intellect. Therefore you might use some of the following guidelines to help them become familiar with the body-feel of Christ's loving compassion. Get to know your prayer partner and learn what approach or suggestions he or she prefers.

For example, you can ask them to recall any number of passages in the Bible when Jesus gave his love and acceptance to others, and then ask them to notice how that experience of Jesus' love and acceptance would feel within them, in their body. Have them close their eyes and take some time with this exercise. Some people have favorite biblical references or experiences that they find comforting and effective. For example a person may be especially comforted by the recollection of the experience of Mary's compassion. Another person may be especially moved by the acceptance and love of Jesus given to sick, hurting or rejected people. Perhaps they will relate to Jesus' seeking and finding the lost lamb, and his carrying it, holding it against his body, as he brought it home. Some people respond to reminders of personal times or experiences in their life when they felt God's love, perhaps directly or through friends or relatives. Sometimes when you know a person's preferences, just a word or short phrase associated with a special scripture, person, place or time might be just enough to remind the person of God's special love in their life and to be a signal for them to stop and invite God's love into their prayer experience.

Be a true partner in faith and love, working empathetically to help the person to be with their prayer issue in gentle faith, if that is what they want to do.

In addition, the following two instructions may be helpful. These suggestions can also be incorporated into the teaching sessions of the prayer (chapter 12). The first instruction is:

Gently hold your prayer issue as if it were a baby or small child. Cuddle it and give it warmth and acceptance. [pause] Notice what it feels like in your body to hold it this way. [pause] Now take all of this to Jesus' tender loving heart, and notice how that all now feels inside. Take your time and then let me know when we are ready to go on. [wait]

The second instruction is:

Okay, notice how all this feels in your body. [pause] Now ask it if there might be just a part of all of it that would be okay with receiving some of God's gentle love and tenderness, and let me know what you find. [wait] If there is a part of it that can receive God's love, continue with: Now gently hold that part with tenderness so that it can feel Christ's gentle love through you. Let Jesus' compassion be your strength as you notice his gentleness and acceptance with how it all feels inside. [pause] Notice how this all feels inside, take your time and then let me know when we are ready to go on, or if you would like more help with this. [wait]

Remember that the purpose of pausing to take our prayer issue to Jesus' loving heart and feeling his love and acceptance is not to make the issue feel better or to make it diminish or go away. The purpose is to help the person carry as much of it forward in their prayer as they comfortably can, holding all of it close to their heart as they walk with Jesus. This is a very important understanding. Therefore in this prayer we do not actively replace hurting or sensitive issues with religious images, thoughts or feelings; nor are we handing our prayer issue off to God. We call upon God and our faith to help us know and closely hold our issues with love and tenderness as we walk with Jesus in our faith journey, but we do not ask him to take them away, nor do we replace them with religious images or religious feelings.

Accepting our burdens, trials and challenges in the same way that Jesus accepted his – in complete surrender to God's will – is our faith-passion, our suffering love for Him in quiet tenderness within our brokenness, our prayer issue. We tenderly accept our prayer issue, within our surrender to God. In doing so we are emptying ourselves of our pride, our control. We are opening ourselves to the possibility of Christ's merciful presence and grace. This is the way of the cross. But we do not do this as a mental concept; we simply do it by fully letting go into how all about our prayer subject feels inside, with the felt tenderness, compassion and acceptance of Christ.

During the learning of the prayer someone may wonder whether the theology of offering our suffering to God relates to this part of the prayer. In this prayer we do not give away our suffering, for Jesus to take from us and deal with. We do not separate our self from our needs, but instead, with God's help, we identify them and carry them forward in prayer. In this act we are offering them to God, but we are also surrendering and offering our self to him along with our needs and brokenness.

Likewise someone may ask if allowing their prayer issue to feel God's love and acceptance might not be asking God to give their sin his love and acceptance. For example, if their prayer subject is a personal sinful act or omission they may think that feeling God's love with it is the same as somehow saying that their sin is acceptable to God. Obviously this is not the case. Sin has the effect of wounding us; of separating us from God; of creating hurt, concern and need deep within us. It is this effect of sin on us that we are taking to Jesus' awareness, and from which we open our self, in humility and surrender, to his loving mercy and grace. We are not seeking God's acceptance of the sinful act itself.

In any case, allowing ourselves and our prayer issue to feel God's love and acceptance is not an intellectual exercise. We want to encourage the person to know how it feels in their body to carry their sensitive inner issue with God's compassion. This body-sense of tenderness and compassion is very important. Time should be taken to confirm that the person can feel God's gentle caring in their body, and that God's love and acceptance is not just a mental picture or religious concept.

Stopping with Feelings of Unfinishedness

At times when a person says they are ready to stop, there may still be a feeling of unfinishedness. This can be both at times when it feels like there was "no progress" during the prayer, as well as times when resolution or closeness to God was felt. All of us carry issues and challenges that are significant in our lives, which perhaps we have been carrying for many years. The essence of contemplative prayer is just being with God: attentively sitting, listening inside, letting go in faith, surrendering in trust and love, and responding with openness and love. It is about letting God have the full freedom to work in us. Giving that freedom means we do not place demands on him. It is not so much about our finding God, as it is about God revealing himself to us. It is a prayer that calls for faith and patience in our walk with God. In this, we are never "finished."

Although God can gift us with mercy and grace in our prayer, we may feel the call to take our issues to God many times, over many prayer sessions. God works with us gently, calling us forward into healing one step at a time, in his own time, as he knows is best for us. Therefore, it is right and expected that when we end our prayer that sometimes we may also feel unsettled feelings or a sense of unfinishedness.

If the person praying has indicated that they are ready to stop, but there are also feelings of unfinishedness, you can suggest the following:

A GIFT WITHIN THE UNFINISHEDNESS

As we close, if there is any sense of unfinishedness within all of this, take a moment to let this place [that feels so use their words if possible] know that you hear it, and that with faith, you can come back and journey with it in prayer at another time. [pause]

Then continue with: Now, being open to God and staying with how this all feels inside, let me know if anything comes when you ask all this, “How does God wish me to be with all of this until the next time we can journey together in prayer?”

[Wait]

Follow the wishes of the person praying according to their response. If it feels right, also invite the person to note the body-feel of what came, and invite them to take a quiet moment to be with this feeling with faith. Then continue with RESTING IN GOD’S PRESENCE.

Sometimes when a person goes through these steps, they may indicate that they would like to continue to be with their issue in prayer. What has happened is that their question and the answer they felt in their heart have invited them back into the BEING OPEN TO GOD’S SPIRIT part of the prayer. Be alert for that possibility, and then as time allows, continue to support their prayer journey. Otherwise, continue with RESTING IN GOD’S PRESENCE.

After we have had enough experience with Companioned Prayer to experientially know that the movement of the Holy Spirit and our awareness of the presence of God is something that we do not acquire by our actions or attitudes of our intellect or our emotions, the following additional instruction may be appropriate to the RESTING IN GOD’S PRESENCE movement of the prayer.

When we come to this part of the prayer we usually have come to an initial natural stopping place and we are ready to take a few minutes to quietly notice and appreciate this gift of God’s presence. This is a very natural step, of just abiding in God’s tender Spirit and resting in it. We do so by taking the time to notice his silent loving presence within the interior place we have come to as a result of our prayer so far. We attend to his gift of his revealed love, grace and mercy. Even if our prayer experience was not felt to be knowingly or significantly gifted or graced, God’s loving presence may still be found within our prayer awareness.

However instead of moving on to the CLOSING PRAYER after a few minutes, we can purposefully take more time to allow our attention, our self, to be further drawn by God into his presence. In doing so, we let ourself be drawn into the quiet movement of God abiding in our heart and in our soul. This is not an analytical or emotional exercise; it is just humbly abiding and appreciating his loving presence experienced in our heart and soul, which we are quietly attentive to. We wait in faith, hope and love – in simple surrender, and allow him to come to us, to nourish and transform us. We welcome him and allow his silent presence to be known, not in an intellectual or emotional way, but as a living reality in our spirit and soul.

We cannot make this happen, but we can willingly give ourself to this attentiveness in God. We let go into all of that, and allow ourself to be drawn into any further presence he may choose to give us. As we sit patiently waiting in inviting surrender, we simply wait in love and are attentive to his silent workings in our self. We may first notice a delicate sense or perhaps a wisp of his extraordinary Self, his real presence, his love. Or perhaps we are aware of a greater clarity of consciousness or interior light. As we sit with this, we do not do anything except continue to gratefully surrender into him. This is not a time for any doing or actions. As our thoughts come through our mind at this time, we simply ignore them and let them pass; we give them no additional energy. Just gently return to the intention of being with God, letting our awareness continue to be within his holy presence. As this continues, we may feel a living warmth in our heart, or perhaps an awareness of divine consciousness. We find that our attention is drawn by God into himself, into his loving presence. We welcome this and simply allow him to do what he wills. In this state we are powerless; there is nothing we can do; God does it all. We may find that we want to spend a long time in his sweet gift of himself. So we do not rush, we give God the time he wishes to give us.

For Christ said, “On that day you will realize that I am in my Father and you are in me. ...And whoever loves me will be loved by my Father, and I will love him and reveal myself to him.” (John 14:20-21) This silent infusion of God within us, by our Lord, is an awesome grace. Be not afraid, but give yourself to him in faith and hope and love. Let yourself abide in him, for he is the way, the truth and the life.

People who have already developed a strong love of God, or people who have substantial experience with contemplative prayer, may naturally fall into this “extra step” without any additional instructions when they are in the RESTING IN GOD’S PRESENCE movement of the prayer. During this extended time, if you wish you can also use a sacred word or phrase to help gently bring your intention back to a receptivity of God’s presence, as in Centering Prayer. In doing so you may wish to use the gift you have received through BEING OPEN TO GOD’S SPIRIT as your sacred word or symbol for gentle recollection. But if you do use the Centering Prayer method in this extended time, your goal of using either a sacred word or a contemplative gift is not to remain in that sacred word or gift, but to use it as a symbol of your intention to be with God, and to allow it to vanish so that you may simply be in God’s presence beyond thoughts, feelings or images. In this way, as for the prodigal son, out of his infinite love and compassion God comes to us and draws us into his loving Spirit, his presence.

Whether or not you choose to use the Centering Prayer method or any other prayer in this extended period, do not worry if you can or cannot feel God’s presence. Simply be in faith that God is with you. Trust fully in God, and through the personal love of Christ allow yourself to be completely in him, surrendering in pure faith, without emotion, theology, experiences, or expectations; but simply being in God, resting in his silent presence.

Because of the additional time required for this “extra step”, when you are praying with others you must have a prayer partner who is willing to companion you to this point and then let you be for some time. Therefore you must have this mutual understanding and support before you take this additional time. In a prayer group setting of three people, the second person can begin to be companioned by the third person while the first continues in this state of infused contemplation. In this case the second and third person may move away some distance (for example if you are all in a church sanctuary) in order that their Companioned Prayer dialog is less intrusive on your extended quiet time. Or you may wish to incorporate this additional step if you are practicing the prayer with other likeminded people in a lay prayer and formation support group as mentioned at the end of chapter 7.

Effects of Long-term Practice: The Great Awakening

What happens as we practice this prayer regularly over many months, even years? We are healed by God's love and grace; we are called into an intimate relationship with him. We are awakened, spiritually. His presence is our most exciting possibility and reality. Our soul becomes aflame for God. We stop looking for "spiritual experiences" in our prayer and find ourselves naturally drawn to him as our silent goal. We are enveloped in wonder and awe at his power and love, present to us now. We find peace in ourselves in finding whom we are created as, in our soul.

We find that our inner awakening is the Great Awakening. We find that our entire life becomes the most exciting journey possible, a journey of becoming one with God, begun here and now in our busy earthly life. We understand that our trials as well as our joys are all part of this transformative journey to God. And best of all, we find that this journey is one that God is making happen for us, because it is certainly beyond our ability to make happen.

We find that our faith and our appreciation for the Church become transformed from simple rational and moral belief into seeing the transformative power and love in the reality of God's presence in all of it. We understand that the value of the liturgy as a transformational sacrament is dependent upon the awakening of our soul in God. When this happens through the passion of God's presence given of Companioned Prayer, then our soul recognizes and responds to the sacraments in the reality and power of the living Spirit of God. And the Church and its faith become for us God's doorway to him given to all of us from his love.

When we pray Companioned Prayer over many months and years, we recognize from inside us that all life is a sacred blessing beyond measure. And we are in awe that we too are called into that blessing. We can only be thankful, and praise God in our worship and service, as we continue to find ourselves responding to his love and truth in all aspects of our worship. We continue to follow his calling as he wills, and we remain open to the continual unfolding revelation of his infinite mystery, without closing ourselves off through a limited or fixed understanding of dogma, while at the same time deeply valuing the great Christian truths taught by the Church that draw us deeper into God's saving presence. We find that our understanding of the scriptures and the Church's teaching increasingly reflects our own inner prayer and worship experiences as we learn to trust God and to let ourselves be drawn into his silent presence. We appreciate that this journey is one of vibrant life, of the living God ever mysterious, ever caring, ever revealing himself, and ever calling us to him.

The Heart's Response to God's Love

With these experiences over time, we find that as God fills our heart with his love, our heart responds. Through his grace our heart gradually learns to love him ever more deeply and passionately. Our love for God leaps with joy, humility and awe at his magnificence and his personal love for us. We are drawn ever more into him and our heart and soul become increasingly focused on him as our most important fulfillment, in which we find divine life.

Through our time with our Lord in prayer, as we begin to appreciate how he has already sacrificed himself for us and given himself to us in love, we find ourselves increasingly giving our self to him – until we discover that through his grace we have totally surrendered to him. All this happens, not because of our doing (since we cannot make any of this happen), but because he is our God who is creating us in his image, by his will, and through his love. All we need do is surrender to him, let him love us completely, and respond to his love. Companioned Prayer is a wonderful prayer to help us do that with sensitivity, openness and faith.

Challenges to Our Formation in Christ

Nevertheless, in this most amazing journey, it is easy for us to get in the way of God; for us to impose our very limited ego-centric perspective and to create challenges to our compliance with our ongoing formation in Christ. There are a number of very common reasons why people stop practicing Companioned Prayer. These are discussed at the end of chapter 13 under “Reaching Out to Those Who Stop”. Some additional notes on our challenges are provided below.

Surrendering to God in prayer means trusting God, willing to place our self in his hands; willing to not be in control, and willing to let God be in control. In Companioned Prayer we are called upon to empty ourselves of our own will. In faith we let go into God’s loving heart with vulnerability; trusting and letting go in him. Some people are not ready for this vulnerability with our living God. They are not ready for this radical real trusting in our Lord. They are not ready to give up their control. They are only willing to have a relationship with God in their terms, not his. And their terms are often steeped in beautiful theology and religious feelings. However, when we are not willing to let go and let God, to give ourselves to him in loving trust, in our human weakness and vulnerability, in his terms not ours, if we are not willing to do all this, then we will not experience the grace of Companioned Prayer.

Another common barrier to being open to God is the desire for spiritual experiences or graces. When we let our ego or self-importance be linked to graces received, then we have become attached to the gift and not to the Giver. Then we worship the gift as an idol, as the desired object, and we are no longer open to the mystery of he who gives so freely. We are grateful for the gift, as we know that we need it and benefit from it, just as those who received Jesus’ healing touch when he walked on earth needed it. But we should not worship the gift and we should not attach self-importance to ourselves because we have received it. A paramount requirement in order to be able to be continually formed by God in his image is humility. Humility is absolutely necessary in all prayer and in all faith formation, including in our Companioned Prayer journey. The Catechism of the Catholic Church at 2559 says, “Humility is the foundation of prayer.” In addition to the customary meaning of humility, humility is also an innocence. A child-like innocent openness to God, a letting go into him without the constraints of egotism, judgement or attachment. This discernment is essential for everyone who wishes to learn and practice prayer.

In addition to humility, we also must be honest within ourselves as we pray. When we come before God to ask him, of everything going on in our life what is he calling us to listen to, we must come to him with all our sins, all our hurts, our broken relationships and promises, all our yearnings and aspirations, ...everything. We must place ourselves before him in our total human condition, as we are and not as we wish to be. God is found in reality, not in fantasy or moods. This requires humility, faith and honesty. And when something comes that is in response to our inner question, we are not to avoid that which we don't like in favor of something more pleasant. We are not to skip over that which God calls us to acknowledge. If we habitually avoid ourselves in this prayer, we are only deceiving ourselves, and we are not allowing God to be present to us in grace and love. Our spiritual journey will have stopped. For it is the meek who shall inherit the earth, who in their humble authenticity and truth shall know the kingdom of God here on earth, in our practical, real, living life. If you are companioning someone who seems to be self-filtering the selection of what comes, at some point you may want to discuss this with them.

Our prayer is not an escape of our personal situations or challenges. And if we begin to use it in a way that avoids our human and personal challenges, if we substitute a religious image or feeling for the grounded body-feel of our prayer subject, we will not be fully trusting in God, and our prayer experiences and our prayer journey will not develop in fullness. For example, if in GOD'S LOVE AND ACCEPTANCE we abandon our prayer subject and simply dwell in the loving heart of Jesus, either as a religious image, theological concept or faith filled feeling or devotion, our Companioned Prayer will have stopped. No matter how rich or blissful the loving heart of Jesus may feel, if we stop our Companioned Prayer experience we will eventually also stop the prayer practice.

Ongoing participation in a Church or religious community is also necessary for our Christian development and ongoing prayer life. Practicing Companioned Prayer in isolation is not enough. Paradoxically, a person who has a weak formation in faith may also stop praying soon after starting if their experiences in Companioned Prayer are quite profound but the person is in general quite suspect of religion. This combination of interior revelation and distrust of religion can affect a self-centered person to think that only they have the true insight, that others simply don't understand, and that religious leaders in particular do not have the depth of experience or understanding necessary to shepherd them into a full relationship with God. Without participating in the worship, revelation and guidance of the Church, the individual is left to rely upon their own experiences and their own interpretation of those experiences, and will increasingly look for prayer results instead of a prayerful surrender in faith. Such individuals need to be encouraged to turn in humility to all that the Church offers and to experience the amazing richness of its prayers, liturgy, word, service and Eucharist with the new insights and grace received in Companioned Prayer. They need to be shown that the Church's activities and resources all embrace the fullness of the divine; and that only by entering into these activities in faith does one discover their effect upon one's own interior life, including prayer life. Thus Companioned Prayer does not replace the Church's other forms of prayer, it adds to them. For example it does not replace the devotion to Jesus' Sacred Heart. And even though Companioned Prayer may be called a prayer of reconciliation it does not replace the Sacrament of Reconciliation. Being able to worship and to receive the sacraments on a regular basis is vital to our full awakening in God. We find our experiences in prayer are further revealed in worship as we respond with our heart enlivened from within by God's love.

Likewise, another challenge to our formation in Christ occurs when we practice Companioned Prayer and we do not have the support of healthy and comprehensive faith formation from our Church or religious community. For example if a church only puts its emphasis on people having a conversion experience or being saved, and neglects the ongoing full faith formation and spiritual growth throughout life's journey, the ongoing interior development as a result of prayer will not have the nurturing and insight that allows us to continually surrender, respond, and grow in God. As we pray it becomes more valuable to have the guidance of the Church, of past saints and Christian seekers who have experienced and understood the divine Christian journey. This rich Christian tradition and understanding can help us know the path and give us necessary perspectives on our Christian journey.

For example, many of the Church's saints have said that we must allow ourselves the time necessary for God to work within us, whether we are aware of his works or not. If not allowed, our impatience becomes a hindrance to our further faith formation. Therefore we must be patient, and know that God is with us always and that with faith we can continue in the journey whether our experiences are richer or poorer. When we seem to be in a place of dryness, we must continue to pray regularly and continue to participate in all aspects of our Christian experience. It is a good idea to allow the whole sense of dryness, our grappling with it and what it might portend, to be the subject of our Companioned Prayer. This is also a time to give up our personal desire for control over what we want from God. We must give up looking for an experience on the level that we are expecting it, on the level that we are used to. We have to stop looking; we must let go and let God. It is a time to slow down, to be open, and to wait in faith while we continue to place our self before him in humility and trust. We must accept that God is doing good for us and that we will grow only by allowing him to work in us in our present condition. In this, Companioned Prayer can be of immense help. Our transformation by him is in his terms not ours. We are called in faith to surrender to him in his terms not ours; in our practical day to day life (not in a hoped for life), and not just in our mental or mystical life.

Without the faith formation support of our Church or religious community, we become isolated in our prayer. When we only practice Companioned Prayer by ourself we miss a vital part of the prayer. Jesus is present to us when two or more are gathered in his name. This is integral to our Companioned Prayer experience. Therefore, we must make efforts to find others in our Church or religious community to pray with. We are one body in Christ, and when we pray together we become spiritually whole and healthy.

Influences of Other Prayer or Meditative Practices

Sometimes people who have spent significant time, perhaps years, routinely practicing other forms of prayer or spiritual exercise, will occasionally notice their established prayer practice gently intruding into their Companioned Prayer experience. This may occur especially during the first few months of practicing Companioned Prayer. It is not necessary to give up other prayer practices, but the student should gain clarity on the differences and similarities between their established practice and Companioned Prayer, as well as understand how to deal with any experiential overlaps between the practices. Some examples are discussed below.

Centering Prayer and the Jesus Prayer

Some forms of contemplative prayer, such as Centering Prayer or the Jesus Prayer, include silently repeating a special word or phrase. In Centering Prayer the practitioner lets himself be drawn inward by his intention to be with God as symbolized by the word, or in the Jesus Prayer lets himself be drawn in faith into the full inner experience of the phrase which ultimately is Jesus' actual presence. Often the sense of the special word or phrase will subtly change or even disappear during the prayer. In these practices one can find oneself carried forward into an inner unfolding quietness and sense of God's graced presence. During Companioned Prayer, particularly in response to ASKING GOD or LETTING GO IN THE LOVING HEART OF JESUS, practitioners of Centering Prayer, the Jesus Prayer, or their equivalents, may find their habitual word or phrase coming into their present Companioned Prayer experience. If this occurs there is no need to try to reject or force out what comes. Instead, let your attention go to the body-feel of such words or phrases. If there is no connection felt in the body with these, then just gently return to your prayer subject or symbol, noticing how that feels in your body. Or simply return to your prayer subject if it is obvious that there is no felt-connection with your habit word or phrase. The same is true for non-Christian forms of mediation that use a repeated word or mantra.

If the habitual prayer word or phrase does carry a particular feel in the body, notice that and be open to letting yourself shift to that body-feeling as part of your journey within the Companioned Prayer session. Let your companion know that something has come and give careful consideration to the response within you when your companion asks you, "Does this feel right, inside, to journey with some more?" If the response to the question suggests that it is not appropriate to journey with the body-feel of the word or phrase that has come (that is associated with your other prayer practice), be open to noticing whether or not it would feel right to continue with your original prayer subject as it has unfolded to that point. If so, then let your companion know by saying something like, "No, but it does feel right for me to continue." Your companion can then assist you continue in BEING OPEN TO GOD'S SPIRIT instead of proceeding on to the next movement of the prayer, RESTING IN GOD'S SPIRIT.

Another aspect of Centering Prayer and the Jesus Prayer is that the practitioner may gently come back to their special word or phrase whenever their mind wanders from their intention or whenever they are distracted by an intruding thought or feeling. In fact, a goal of Centering Prayer is to free oneself of your own thoughts and feelings until there is only a quiet presence of God. However in Companioned Prayer we are not trying to eliminate or pass beyond our thoughts and feelings into silence. Instead we are called by God to respond to the Holy Spirit as experienced in subtly distinctive thoughts or feelings that come, and to follow them in the prayer into God's gift of his mercy and presence. This does not mean that in Companioned Prayer the mind does not wander; it often does, particularly when praying by yourself. But, in Companioned Prayer when something comes we pause to notice how what came feels in our body, how we carry all of it, and we sense whether or not it somehow connects or fits with how our prayer subject has progressed so far. If it does feel connected, then we let our attention stay with this new symbol, and continue to follow God's gentle call in our prayer.

So if you are used to practicing Centering Prayer, and while you are practicing Companioned Prayer you find new thoughts, feelings and symbols, do not ignore them or consider them distractions. Do not automatically return to your prayer subject, but instead pause and discern whether or not they might be the promptings of the Holy Spirit calling you deeper into your prayer subject until you discover God's grace and mercy given within the very thing which you were going to avoid.

Some people practice Centering Prayer more as a psychological practice or as a practice of mindfulness or enlightenment, rather than as a prayer of a personal relationship with our Lord.

When learning and practicing Companioned Prayer, such people must be encouraged to let go into their Companioned Prayer experiences completely within the context of a personal faith relationship with our Lord.

Lectio Divina

Other forms of Christian contemplative prayer and meditation focus more on the received meaning of scripture or the meaning of a Christian word or phrase. Lectio divina is an example of listening and letting go in faith into a scriptural passage, and allowing yourself to be quietly open to new personal understandings of the passage as given by God. This practice is more of an art of openness and surrender in faith, and being receptive to the movement of the Holy Spirit, than it is about analytical progression or systematic examination.

The art of Lectio divina is a practice of subtle inner awareness of unfolding gifted understanding as the practitioner gently and reflectively listens and meditates on the meaning of the passage, especially in the meditatio phase of the prayer. During Companioned Prayer, practitioners of Lectio divina and other forms of contemplative meditation may sometimes find themselves contemplating or exploring the meaning of the symbols, words or images that arise. If you discover yourself to be doing this, use the guidelines provided above under “Centering Prayer” modified for “meaning” rather than “a word or phrase.” In Companioned Prayer we do not, in any analytical or meditative way, dwell on, actively define, or explore the meaning of what comes until the meaning is made clear to us in the end.

Additionally, in the contemplatio phase of Lectio divina, as with Centering Prayer or the Jesus Prayer, a person may be quietly drawn within to experience the silent presence of God. This experience can also occur during Companioned Prayer. However, one should not look for this experience, but should let it happen through God’s grace and gift. If you find yourself leading your attention into silent awareness in reference to past contemplative experiences of Centering Prayer, the Jesus Prayer or Lectio divina, return to the body-feel of your experience, inwardly turn the leading over to God, and be open to what He may be calling you to be aware of. If your experience of silent awareness occurs in the RESTING IN GOD’S SPIRIT part of the prayer, surrender into His gift as long as time allows.

Guided imagery

Some spiritual exercises use guided imagery, usually with a gospel theme. For example the person hears or reads a story from scripture and imagines himself or herself participating within the story. As an exercise led by another person, this practice is sometimes used in Lectio divina to include significant time for pauses and reflections at various points within the narrative. Essentially the participant listens to a sacred story or situation and is asked to picture it in their mind, while also being asked to imagine themselves within the story. Guided imagery is also used in secular settings in therapeutic and self-improvement sessions.

When companioning a person who has spent a significant time in religious or secular guided imagery, you may notice that during BEING OPEN TO GOD’S SPIRIT the person tends to skip rapidly from image to image. In such cases encourage them to slow down and notice the body-feel of each image before proceeding. In Companioned Prayer, the process is not to go from image to image, but to be aware of the whole sense and feeling about any image or other symbol that comes, and then in faith to let go into that sense. Pausing to notice how a symbol registers in the body is a good way of letting the awareness follow this inner journey of faith.

Hypnosis

An even more actively suggestive (and often intrusive) technique than guided imagery that has been employed in both religious and especially secular practices is hypnosis. Individuals who have experienced hypnosis sometimes report that their general feeling of being companioned in Companioned Prayer is similar to that of hypnosis. In fact there are some similarities. Hypnosis also often begins with a suggested awareness of the body, can include talking or feedback between the person hypnotized and the hypnotist, suspends direct awareness of our outer reality and redirects our attention inward (as is common in all types of prayer), and can include invitational suggestions.

However, hypnosis is both suggestive and intrusive in ways not present in Companioned Prayer. For example under hypnosis a person may be asked to notice what their body feels like, but then are given further suggestions that they are getting sleepy, their limbs are heavy, etcetera. Such suggestions are never a part of Companioned Prayer. Likewise a hypnotist may suggest or direct the person to explore a specific issue (like fear of flying), or to adopt a particular attitude or outcome about something (such as an aversion to smoking). In Companioned Prayer the companion never suggests a particular issue or subject, and in fact is usually not even aware of what the person praying is experiencing as their prayer subject. In addition the practice of hypnosis includes the establishment of a trance or altered state of consciousness. Companioned Prayer does not seek an altered state but asks the person praying to be authentic within themselves, honoring how they feel inside as they wait in faith upon God's presence and mercy. In hypnosis, the person being hypnotized relinquishes control of the session to the hypnotist. The hypnotist often leads the person into areas of emotional challenge or pain that the person would not otherwise allow themselves to experience. Hypnosis may include a sense of loss of control and loss of free will during the session, as well as a lack of cognitive awareness of the experience after it is over. There are other important differences as well, including the fact that the artificially relaxed state in hypnosis prevents an issue, symbol or God's compassion from being felt in the body.

All of these differences are very important, and should be made clear to someone who has had experience with hypnosis, whether in a religious or secular setting. Reiterate with the person that in Companioned Prayer we do not relinquish control to our companion. Discuss the role of the companion and the fact that the companion never suggests prayer topics and in fact rarely has a clear idea of what the person's prayer subject is. Likewise, the companion does not suggest prayer issue outcomes. The companion follows the desires of the person praying and never leads them into areas that they are uncomfortable with. In fact, just the opposite happens, as the companion frequently asks the person praying to check inside and see if it feels right or okay to continue to journey with their prayer subject as it unfolds. The person praying never loses cognitive awareness of what is happening either during the prayer or afterwards, nor loses choice or freedom of will or action at any time during the Companioned Prayer experience.

Thus the similarity of hypnosis and Companioned Prayer is only superficial. Nevertheless, people who have experienced hypnosis often comment during their initial learning experiences of Companioned Prayer that the two seem similar. This may also be in part to the pattern of experience that they encountered in hypnosis, and that this pattern has affected their initial learning experience of Companioned Prayer. Thus as soon as the companion begins talking, they immediately and voluntarily give up control and assume a position of being led as in a hypnotic session. Instead one should be alert in prayer; not mentally slovenly or letting others direct us. It is therefore very important to respond to any suggestion of similarity to hypnosis with patience and clear instructional teaching of the differences, so that the person can learn Companioned Prayer within while maintaining integrity and control, surrendering to God with total freewill, and with minimal influence from their past experience with hypnosis.

Bio-Spiritual Focusing and Focusing

Companioned Prayer was originally derived from Bio-Spiritual Focusing, which was developed by Father Ed McMahon, Ph.D. and Father Peter Campbell, Ph.D. Significant components of the practice and teaching of Companioned Prayer were inspired by Fathers McMahon and Campbell. While Bio-Spiritual Focusing has some similarities to Companioned Prayer, it is also very different. Bio-Spiritual Focusing does not have as strong a faith-orientation and it is neither written nor taught as a prayer of surrender to God the Father, Son and Holy Spirit, although some people, particularly religious who learned it in the mid-1970s, 80s and early 90s may still practice it that way. McMahon and Campbell present Bio-Spiritual Focusing as a psychological healing practice that invites holistic spiritual growth. Information about their practice is available in their books, Bio-Spirituality, Focusing as a Way to Grow, Loyola Press, Chicago, 1985 & 1997, Beyond the Myth of Dominance, An Alternative to a Violent Society, Sheed & Ward, an imprint of Rowman & Littlefield Publishers, Inc., Lanham, MD, 1993, and Rediscovering the Lost Body-Connection within Christian Spirituality, Itasca Books, Minneapolis, MN, 2010.

Bio-Spiritual Focusing was developed by McMahon and Campbell out of a therapeutic practice called “Focusing”, which was developed by Eugene Gendlin, Ph.D. in the late 1950’s. Practitioners of “Bio-Spirituality” or “Focusing” who take up Companioned Prayer will need to be encouraged to spend significant time nurturing all of the faith aspects of the Companioned Prayer practice within the support and teaching of a Christian community in order to make the transition from psychology to Christian prayer. While framing a practice in psychological concepts and language may be appealing to some people, it is completely inadequate to the reality of the divine, and actually creates an artificial barrier to letting go into and experiencing the divine presence of our Lord.

Although Dr. Gendlin’s practice is psychotherapeutic and without any spiritual orientation, one of the things that apparently inspired him to develop Focusing was his brief participation as a young man in the Quaker spiritual practice of receptive waiting in God’s presence or light. Quaker spiritual writing even includes the terms “feeling sense” and “felt sense” as used by Gendlin to describe the essence of his focusing practice. The Quaker spiritual practice, however, is not interactive, does not include specific guided steps or movements to facilitate the practitioner's experience, and for some people it may not be clearly centered within the person of Christ. Individuals who have been involved in the Quaker practice of quiet awareness should be clearly instructed that in Companioned Prayer we are praying in the loving heart of our risen Lord, Jesus Christ.

Other traditional Christian spiritual practices

The Christian church as a whole has a long and very rich history of people who have developed interior prayer practices and understandings of spiritual discernment that are even more directly applicable to the experiences of Companioned Prayer. For example see Teresa of Avila's The Interior Castle, 1577, especially from The Sixth Dwelling Place on. Discernment and understanding of personal revelations has always been a role of the Church.

Other spiritual practices established over the centuries by various Christian saints and leaders may include elements with similarities to Companioned Prayer. An example is the Spiritual Exercises of Saint Ignatius of Loyola, 1491–1556. Again, discussion of similarities and differences with Companioned Prayer can be useful. After the practitioner is established in Companioned Prayer, they may also wish to explore the possibility of incorporating Companioned Prayer, or elements of it, into these older traditional practices.

Other prayer practices

There are many other practices that include similarities to Companioned Prayer. An individual with experience in such practices should feel free to discuss the similarities and differences with Companioned Prayer. Such discussion will facilitate an understanding of how their practice may influence the learning and practice of Companioned Prayer for that person.

For example, some churches have created a walking labyrinth patterned after those found in some of the great cathedrals of Europe created in the Middle Ages. When slowly walking a labyrinth in an orientation of Christian faith and inner reflection, this brief journey can facilitate surprising gifts of understanding and acceptance. Significantly, the sense of inner surprise and gifted grace associated with these receptive moments can be very close to the experiences in Companioned Prayer. The common understanding of how the movement of the Holy Spirit can be felt within a meditative or contemplative experience can be beneficial to learning Companioned Prayer. There are several common ways to pray the labyrinth. One is to simply walk slowly, being open to what comes. Another is to consider the walk as representing stages in your life's journey (who you are, how God has called you, etc.), for example being open to insights from childhood early in the walk, and progressing to the present, and then reflecting on the future. Or you may try to incorporate some or all of the steps of Companioned Prayer into your labyrinth walk, as long as you do so without forcing the match, but instead simply have it in mind, recalling the phrases or their intention as appropriate, and see what comes.

The Effects of Companioned Prayer on Other Prayer Experiences

Just as other forms of prayer can affect our practice of Companioned Prayer, particularly when first learning Companioned Prayer, so too Companioned Prayer can affect our experiences within other forms of prayer and spiritual engagements, particularly after considerable experience with Companioned Prayer. After some months or a year of Companioned Prayer, when we have had many experiences of God's real presence, when we know Christ and the Holy Spirit as our Companions and life source and direction within and through us, then that experience will become alive, will flow like living waters, in our other experiences of spiritual engagements. Following are just a few examples.

Companioned-Centering Prayer

Many people wish to engage in a rich contemplative prayer such as Centering Prayer, but report that they have difficulty entering into it or staying with it. However if one practices Companioned Prayer to the extent that our Companioned relationship with Christ is one of intimacy, then it can be very easy to enter into this intimacy when learning or practicing Centering Prayer. In Centering Prayer one uses a repeated sacred word or phrase such as "Jesus" or "Jesus is love" to let go of thoughts or feelings and to bring our intention back to being open to God's presence (see Basil Pennington's and Thomas Keating's many writings about Centering Prayer). In Centering Prayer this word or phrase can be used to ever so gently let go of one's engagement in thoughts and to return or refocus (to recollect) the practitioner's intention to be with Christ, and to be drawn into a contemplative unity with God in which the experience of the word or phrase gives way simply to the experience of the Living Presence. Within the Centering Prayer experience this goal is a silently fluid and expansively dynamic process of participating in God's presence in oneness, and of alternatively being drawn into and out of this unitive presence through continuing to be open to the personal intimacy of Jesus's love.

While the goal of Centering Prayer is wonderful, many people find that entering into Centering Prayer can be challenging and ultimately frustrating. For example, initially the use of the word or phrase may not seem to lead to the experience of the desired intimacy of God; the words become one dimensional or repetitive without an enriched experience; or the mind simply wanders too much to allow one to be drawn deeper into the Source of living water. This may be particularly true if one has approached Centering Prayer primarily as a psychological process or a meditative technique, instead of a personal relationship and surrender to our real and present Lord.

The experiences of Companioned Prayer, however, offer another approach to Centering Prayer. For example, instead of us selecting a word or phrase to use in Centering Prayer, we can be open to letting a word, phase, idea or other symbol be given to us from God as experienced within our quiet meditative prayer time in a similar way as we might receive a symbol in Companioned Prayer. In doing so we are simply open to a symbol that might come from God for our prayer time, using the attentiveness of faith that we have learned in Companioned Prayer to let God lead us to him. For example, it might be a special word or concept, such as the real presence in the Eucharist, the loving heart of Jesus, or the intimation of Jesus as the divine Godhead; or might be a symbol previously received in Companioned Prayer, or something new just now experienced in our Centering Prayer time, including a symbol that is too subtle for words. We can check our body feel or other inner sense to see if it feels right inside to use this in a Centering Prayer way. We can see if we find ourselves drawn back to it repeatedly without effort within our prayer time. We can experience what happens when we allow ourselves to be with this symbol in our Centering Prayer, being open to God's gift of his inner light and presence. In this way we continue to be open to allowing God to gently and lovingly lead us in our Centering Prayer.

Additionally after many experiences of Companioned Prayer over months and years, the intimacy of Real Presence and personal relationship with Christ and the Holy Spirit become a fount of God's loving presence where that Presence is intimate to our presence. Then instead of beginning Centering Prayer with a special word or phrase, we can simply close our eyes and be aware of that intimate presence, be open to the grace of God's love and presence, be drawn deeper into his loving Presence, and stay with the intimacy of relationship as God may wish to share himself. In this manner we can also be open to what symbols might come as discussed above if that happens, or we can simply continue to abide in his presence, however he chooses to lead us in prayer. When we need to bring our focus back to the Presence, we can ask God how does he want us to come back to him, and then silently respond to his call with our intention as our means of recollection.

This approach to Centering Prayer may not be considered by some people as either Centering Prayer or Companioned Prayer as they are individually known, but may be considered by some to be a merging of the two. It may not be considered to be traditional Centering Prayer if we are not using a repeated sacred word or phrase, even though it may represent the contemplative or unitive goal of Centering Prayer. It may not be considered to be traditional Companioned Prayer because we are not asking for a topic or issue to follow in prayer, and it is not the goal to be drawn into God's grace via a personal prayer issue. Instead this blended Companioned-Centering Prayer takes the experience of being open to and being within God's presence gained from many times of being guided within structured Companioned Prayer, and uses that intimacy of relationship and openness as the way into the Centering Prayer experience. It also uses the awareness of how to simply be alert and attentive in faith, and how to allow oneself to be drawn by Christ into closeness with him, both naturally learned through the practice of Companioned Prayer. It is simple. In faith, we close our eyes, are aware of our Lord's intimate presence, are open or attentive in faith to what might come, and simply follow his presence as it draws us into himself. Many practitioners of Centering Prayer may say that this is also their experience in Centering Prayer, and therefore any subtle differences may not be considered significant to them.

This may sound too simple, and as a description of a process, it is simplistic; there are of course other nuances. For example, this infused prayer should start in the same way as both Companioned Prayer and Centering Prayer begin, with a personal prayer of openness or devotion to our Lord, with a short period of body awareness such as breathing, and with an openness or awareness of God's love. Another nuance is that in Companioned Prayer we take frequent time to be aware of how something is felt in our body. In this new Companioned-Centering Prayer, we may instead find that the Living Presence is also experienced as silent presence in our complete self: mind, body, soul, etc. It is not necessarily separate from our incarnational self here and now but is more of a divine infusion within our being as God's presence. Our experience of this same incarnational awareness in Companioned Prayer provides a natural opening to this same unitive experience within Centering Prayer as one body, mind and spirit of Christ. The Companioned Prayer experience which carries into the Companioned-Centering Prayer experience is that our experience is Christ-centered: our prayer is one of relationship; where Jesus Christ is the Son of God the Father, and is our personal and collective Lord and savior, as we respond to him through the love of the Holy Spirit.

Personal Closing Prayer

When we end Companioned Prayer, or Centering Prayer as described above, with our personal closing prayer we may wish to add a silent reciting of the Lord's Prayer or other established prayer. In doing so, a wonderful approach is to think the words without concentrating on their meaning, and to experience the words without hurry, and with natural pauses, being attentive and open to what subtle meaning might be received. If we allow ourselves to let go of our own meaning of the prayer, and to be open to a new meaning provided in the mystery of the Lord's presence, we will experience a new inner grace of these prayers each time we pray. The ability to experience these prayers in this manner is facilitated by the same alert responsiveness in faith that we have gained in our Companioned Prayer.

Lectio Divina

In a similar manner to that described above in "Personal Closing Prayer", our practice of Companioned Prayer can facilitate our practice of Lectio divina. By slowly reading or listening to scripture without analysis, but with reflective awareness, open to following how the Spirit leads us, we can be drawn through all of the stages of Lectio divina. This holy process is enriched by the faith, skill and trust we have learned in Companioned Prayer.

Lectio divina can also be directly combined with Companioned Prayer. In this form we are open to being responsive to a reading of scripture or a similar passage, and follow what comes using Companioned Prayer. A suggested format for companionship in Lectio Divina Companioned Prayer is provided below.

Lectio Divina Companioned Prayer

For praying with a prayer partner

BEGINNING GROUP PRAYER

The Companioned Prayer meeting time can begin with a shared daily office, service or devotional, or a prayer and reading such as the Lord's Prayer, the Angelus, the daily gospel or other reading.

OPENING PRAYER

*Begin by saying, In the name of the Father, of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit, we open our hearts to you, O Lord. Amen.

Then on behalf of the person you are praying with and yourself, say a personal prayer out loud, such as: asking for Christ to be our companion as we listen to his word; for our trust in the Lord; for the guidance of the Holy Spirit; or, to help us listen inside to God's quiet call.

Then invite the other person to also say a personal prayer, either silently or out loud, and if silently, to say "Amen" when they are ready to continue. [wait for the other person to respond]

AS WE ARE

*Then say, Coming before God as we are, take a few minutes to notice how you physically feel. [briefly pause, and then continue] For example, let your attention go to your back and notice what that feels like. [pause] Notice your shoulders [pause], your neck [pause], your head [pause], your arms [pause], your hands [pause], your feet [pause], your legs [pause], your stomach [pause], your heart [pause], and your breathing. [longer pause] Notice the body sense of how you feel right now [pause]; and then let me know when we are ready to go on. [wait for a response, and then go to ASKING GOD]

LECTIO – LISTENING FOR GOD

When they are ready, say: Staying with how this feels inside, and being open to God's loving presence, listen to the reading in openness and faith, letting go into it. [pause] After the second reading, let me know if something comes in response to the reading. [Read the selected passage slowly but naturally. After a minute read it again, and wait for a response. (If nothing comes, read the passage a third time, and again wait.)]

MEDITATIO – GOD'S LOVE AND ACCEPTANCE

Notice how all this repeat symbol if shared feels inside, and how you carry it. [pause] With tenderness and faith, notice how it feels to take all this to the loving heart of Jesus, and to feel his gentle love and acceptance in all of this. Take your time, and then let me know when we are ready to go on. [wait]

ORATIO – LETTING GO IN THE LOVING HEART OF JESUS

When they are ready to go on: Notice how it feels in your body to be with this, in this gentle, caring, faith-filled way. Allow your awareness to seep into your body, to settle in, and sense how all this feels inside. [pause] Within the gentle loving heart of Jesus, wait in openness and faith to see if it feels like there is anything else that God might want you to notice, such as a word, image, feeling or memory that seems to somehow fit with the way this whole thing feels, and then let me know. [wait]

ORATIO – BEING OPEN TO GOD’S SPIRIT

- a. If something comes, reflect back the symbol if shared, pause, and then ask,
- b. Does this feel right, inside, to journey with some more? [wait for a response]
If “no” go to CONTEMPLATIO.
- c. If “yes,” say: Ask yourself, “How does all this repeat symbol if shared now feel in my body?” [pause] With gentleness and faith, let go into how all this feels inside; and let me know if anything comes that fits the way this all now feels. [wait]
If something comes, go back to a.

Repeat a, b, c as long as the person wants to continue, or as time allows.

CONTEMPLATIO – RESTING IN GOD’S PRESENCE

When the person is ready to stop, or if the time has run out: Okay; let’s nurture this special place you’ve come to inside. Pause here and let go into God’s presence within all of this, resting in the quiet tenderness of his Spirit for a while. And then let me know when we are ready to go on. [wait]

CLOSING PRAYER

When they are ready to end, say: As you savor all of this, let yourself know that this is God’s personal love and grace, experienced and felt inside us. [pause] Staying in this holy and precious gift, you may wish to silently offer a prayer in response; and then when you are ready, just slowly open the eyes.

The person praying may also end with an “Amen”, the sign of the cross, the doxology, or other closing prayer said out loud or silently.

The companion may also say out loud a brief prayer of thanks.

CONCLUDING GROUP PRAYER

When the Lectio Divina Companioned Prayer meeting time is over (everyone has had an opportunity for prayer, or the time has come to an end), the shared daily office, service or devotional may be concluded, or a concluding prayer such as the Lord’s Prayer, and blessing may be said out loud by someone with the opportunity for others to also participate either out loud or silently if they so choose.

Since Lectio divina is often practiced in a group setting with one person reading, the following Group Lectio Divina Companioned Prayer can be used in that setting.

Group Lectio Divina Companioned Prayer

BEGINNING GROUP PRAYER

The Lectio Divina Companioned Prayer meeting time can begin with a shared daily office, service or devotional, or a prayer and reading such as the Lord's Prayer, the Angelus, the daily gospel or other reading.

OPENING PRAYER

*Begin by saying, In the name of the Father, of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit, we open our hearts to you, O Lord. Amen.

Then on behalf of the group you are praying with and yourself, say a personal prayer out loud, such as: asking for Christ to be our companion as we listen to his word; for our trust in the Lord; for the guidance of the Holy Spirit; or, to help us listen inside to God's quiet call.

[longer pause] Notice the body sense of how you feel right now. [pause, and then continue]

LECTIO – LISTENING FOR GOD

Staying with how this feels inside, and being open to God's loving presence, listen to the reading in openness and faith, letting go into it. [pause] When I read it a second time, notice if you are drawn to any word or phrase. If something comes, then after the second reading, you may say it out loud. [Read the selected passage slowly but naturally. After a minute read it again. Wait a few minutes for responses. Then (even if nothing is shared) continue with:]

MEDITATIO – GOD'S LOVE AND ACCEPTANCE

Notice how all this feels inside, and how you carry it. [pause] With tenderness and faith, notice how it feels to take all this to the loving heart of Jesus, and to feel his gentle love and acceptance in all of this. [wait a minute, and then continue:]

ORATIO – LETTING GO IN THE LOVING HEART OF JESUS

Notice how it feels in your body to be with this, in this gentle, caring, faith-filled way. Allow your awareness to seep into your body, to settle in, and sense how all this feels inside. [pause] Within the gentle loving heart of Jesus, wait in openness and faith to see if it feels like there is anything else that God might want you to notice, such as a word, image, feeling or memory that seems to somehow fit with the way this whole thing feels, following what may come. Wait about four to six minutes before going on.

CONTEMPLATIO – RESTING IN GOD’S PRESENCE

Okay; let’s nurture this special place you’ve come to inside. Pause here and let go into God’s presence within all of this, resting in the quiet tenderness of his Spirit for a while. [pause awhile, and then continue]

CLOSING PRAYER

As you savor all of this, let yourself know that this is God’s personal love and grace, experienced and felt inside us. [pause] Staying in this holy and precious gift, you may wish to silently offer a prayer in response; and then when you are ready, just slowly open the eyes.

CONCLUDING GROUP PRAYER

When the Lectio Divina Companioned Prayer meeting time is over, the shared daily office, service or devotional may be concluded, or a concluding prayer and blessing may be said out loud by someone with the opportunity for others to also participate either out loud or silently if they so choose.

Companioned Eucharist

Prayer is communion with God. So is the Eucharist. It is a prayer experience of the Real Presence of Christ known and felt inside us within our body, mind and heart when we are open to God in faith. In Companioned Prayer we experience this same Real Presence and come to identify with this intimate divine mystery. When we approach the Eucharist with this inner familiarity gained through Companioned Prayer, we experience an automatic and natural response of being open and welcoming to his presence in the Eucharist in the same manner that we are open and welcoming to him in Companioned Prayer. Thus, the Companioned Prayer experience provides a natural way for our hearts to experience Christ in the Eucharist. This is further facilitated by our direct Companioned Prayer experiences of Christ's presence, loving mercy and grace within us in our brokenness, in our body, in how we presently are, and the repeated experience of how we are the body of Christ. This mystery, beyond explanation but not beyond experiential knowing as revealed by God, is then integral to our Eucharist experience. We know without a doubt that in the Eucharist prayer the Real Presence of Christ is offered and received as our Companion and Lord of love.

Deviating From the Given Wording

If you have practiced Companioned Prayer with others for a while and have an inner affection of its flow and gifted movements, understand the principles of the practice as explained in chapters 4, 5, 6, 9 and 11, and also know the wording of the prayer as provided in chapter 4, do not hesitate to deviate from the exact wording if you are so moved when you are companioning someone, especially in order to more closely respond to a person's unique prayer experience. Staying with the principles, go with your heart, allowing yourself to be more spontaneous and connected with the person praying and their experience as the need arises. God is with you when you pray and when you companion someone in prayer. Trust in his presence and guidance.

Being Open to What Might Come Next

The Companioned Prayer program described in this book is quite detailed. As you engage in this program and in the continual practice of Companioned Prayer, it is important to remember that God is not found in the program. The program is not what is important. The program and its processes should not become ends in themselves to be sought, acquired or defended. God is only found in God; not in any process. When we experience the closeness and presence of God repeatedly in Companioned Prayer, and as we are enriched and enlivened by the gift of his light and love, we may find ourselves being gifted with new understandings, perspectives, or even new consciousness regarding how God might be calling us into him. This may include new ways of praying or being in our personal relationship with him, or it may be other things yet unknown. Therefore, while continuing to pray and practice Companioned Prayer, it is vital to continue to be open to the mystery of God as he may personally call you into being in him, awakening in him, and being present in him. This is the great divine mystery to be followed. Be open to what might come next.

Teaching Companioned Prayer

You are the light of the world. A city built on a hill cannot be hid. No one after lighting a lamp puts it under the bushel basket, but on the lampstand, and it gives light to all in the house. In the same way, let your light shine before others, so that they may see your good works and give glory to your Father in heaven.

Matthew 5:14-16

After you have been practicing the prayer with a partner or in a group for a while, you may find that you want to introduce the prayer to others. Or perhaps you have just been introduced to the prayer yourself, and you would like to offer it to a friend or family member. Follow the call in your heart, and share this gift with others. You are ready whenever you feel the call, whether you have been practicing the prayer for years or whether you have had only one prayer experience. The guidelines in this and the next chapter can help you provide caring and effective teaching.

There are many ways to learn and teach Companioned Prayer. In all instances when you are learning the prayer and learning to companion others, you should consider the learning to be an exploratory experience. Allow yourself and your prayer partners the freedom to make plenty of mistakes, without any pressure “to get it right.” Share your experiences and impressions with each other, and discuss how the companioning process is working so you can become more fine-tuned to each other’s wishes.

A Personal Approach

Personal invitations are always the best way to introduce people to the prayer. Discuss the prayer and the prayer group with your friends and acquaintances. If you participate in a prayer group, let them know when your group meets and that you would like them to join you for a meeting or two to introduce the prayer to them. Let them know that although the prayer is practiced with another person and you meet in a group, the prayer experience itself is always private. Let them know that they do not say their prayer out loud, and sharing is completely optional. Also let them know that the nature of the group is to be non-intrusive. Even so, some people find the idea of showing up at a group to be daunting. If they have reservations you might offer to first share the prayer with them privately in a familiar environment, such as their church or chapel, or even their own home.

The key to sharing the prayer with others is a personal approach. Whether you are sharing and teaching with just one other person, or with a small group, personal attention is essential. Sharing with another person can be as simple as just companioning each other in prayer, and discussing the experiences and guidelines of companioning and of being companioned. Although the remainder of this chapter is focused on teaching in a small group, many of the principles and guidelines also apply when teaching or sharing with only one person.

A Variety of Teaching Methods

There are a variety of ways to teach Companioned Prayer in a group setting within your church or other organization. An excellent way to introduce people to the prayer is for the prayer to be included within your church's various programs. See chapter 14 for suggestions about this. Note however that if this introduction only provides a few experiences of Companioned Prayer, they will definitely not be enough to sustain an ongoing practice. Therefore unless the ministry program offers a continued Companioned Prayer experience such as their own prayer group or structured or integrated program, the introductory offering must somehow transition into participation in an existing ongoing Companioned Prayer ministry group or structured learning program.

Another way is to use the integrative small group approach described in chapter 7 and below. A third approach is to offer a structured learning program, also described below.

Valuing the Prayer

Regardless of the approach, it is very important to emphasize that a personal appreciation of the value of the prayer can only occur as it is practiced over time, usually months. Its value cannot be adequately assessed simply from an introductory experience or from an introductory program. See A Relationship That Grows Over Time in chapter 3 for more information on this. Unless people initially understand this, they will almost always stop practicing the prayer after the structure of the learning program is over. Therefore it is crucial that the orientation of any teaching emphasize that the goal of the prayer is to grow our relationship with Christ and to be formed in him by God's love; and this is an ongoing process nurtured through repeated Companioned Prayer experiences of his presence and grace.

An Integrative Teaching Approach

One way to offer Companioned Prayer is to integrate a program of very basic instruction, ongoing group practice and experience, sharing of our friendship and faith journeys, and interaction with service outreach. This approach is described in chapter 7 under Faith, Fellowship and Our Journey Together in Christ, and is offered in chapter 7's A Model of an Integrative Approach. While this approach may take longer, it may potentially be significantly more responsive to the needs of the people learning the prayer. This type of approach integrates Companioned Prayer within the personal and group dynamics of Christian growth in fellowship and outreach. Formal instruction can be joined to an ongoing Companioned Prayer group by offering 30-minute structured learning immediately before the regular prayer group gathering. Discussion topics and exercises can be taken from the 20 session structured program outlines discussed in the next sections and available at www.CompanionedPrayer.org/Resources.

A Structured Teaching Approach

One way to offer a structured teaching program in Companioned Prayer is to hold a general meeting designed to introduce people to what the prayer is about, and then to follow that with a well-planned course dedicated to Companioned Prayer. Alternatively, if you have enough confirmed interest, you can begin with an introductory one or two day retreat, followed by the extended course; or simply begin with the program outline offered below under “Sample Introductory Course Outline.”

An introductory meeting usually does not include one-on-one companioning, but does offer that in follow-up meetings for anyone who is interested. Let people know that attending the introductory meeting is not a commitment to attending the follow-up sessions. If possible offer the introductory meeting at a publicly accessible place such as your church. Since the prayer is a Christ-centered, faith based practice, a church setting is only natural. Publicize and plan for the meeting, and its follow up meetings, well in advance. Also invite people from outside your church’s congregation. Consider newspapers, newsletters, websites and other means for announcements, including plenty of personal announcements during or after church services. An example of an announcement is provided below. Create your own according to your heart.

An Introduction to Companioned Prayer

At [location, e.g., Trinity Church] the evening of [date] will be devoted to an introductory presentation of Companioned Prayer, a prayer within Christ’s loving presence. In this Companioned Prayer the traditional contemplative blending of devotion, alert listening, and faithful waiting come together with personal and private prayer issues. In faith we take our personal prayer to God, holding it in Jesus’ love, and wait for some inner movement or discernment. We stay with it as it unfolds and leads us to a new personal understanding given from his mercy and grace. The result is very personal and spiritual. As we pray in this way, we often feel drawn very close to God, in a personally meaningful way within the presence of Christ. It’s very unique and quite extraordinary.

The prayer is easy to practice as led or companioned by a prayer partner or within a small group. Even when done with a companion, the experience is completely private. In this companioned small group approach we discover that in our presence to each other we are a community of Christ’s living presence.

Companioned Prayer is a very dynamic prayer that leaves you feeling that you have just been touched by God’s presence. The [name of church or parish] Companioned Prayer Ministry invites you to an introductory evening on [date, time, location and address]. The evening will offer a presentation or overview of the prayer, a group prayer experience, and questions and answers. For directions or more information, call the church office at [phone number], see the church’s website at [URL], or visit www.CompanionedPrayer.org.

If possible, invite other people who are familiar with Companioned Prayer to help make presentations and answer questions during the introductory meeting. Plan the meeting with them, going over who will be making what points. The most important parts of the presentation are the group prayer experiences and the personal testimonies. For your testimony, share with your audience something special about your prayer experience or what Companioned Prayer means to you personally. Explanations of prayer theology, theory or format, no matter how enthusiastically given, are usually dull and boring when compared to sharing something of your heart. Sharing from the heart is the key to encouraging others to learn the prayer. If you have other people who are willing to share, let them choose whatever they wish to share. Encourage them to share whatever they consider most special about Companioned Prayer, even if for only a few minutes. It might be a prayer experience they've had, the friendship of the group, something they have learned as a result of the prayer, their deepening relationship with Christ, how it has enlivened the rest of their faith, or how it has changed some aspect of their life.

In addition to testimonies, the introductory meeting should cover a few basic topics (see chapters 1 and 3 for ideas), offer a group Reflective Prayer experience, and have a time for sharing and questions and answers. A sample planning sequence for an introductory meeting is offered below.

Activity
Opening prayer, welcome & remarks about our Church's Companioned Prayer Ministry
Personal testimonies
Basic topics (see chapter 3), such as: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Practicing the prayer over time • The loving heart of Jesus • God draws us into the prayer
A guided introductory group Companioned Prayer experience, using the Reflective Prayer format (under Introductory Prayer Formats later in this chapter)
Sharing, reflection, questions and answers
The program's overall structure (e.g. number of weeks, meeting times, etc.) and focus (e.g., loving heart of Jesus)
Invitation to sign up for the program
Closing remarks, handouts & closing prayer
Opportunity to meet with any of the presenters individually

In an introductory meeting there is little point in going into detail about the prayer's format beyond perhaps listing the main titles of the prayer movements, which can be offered in a handout such as shown below.

Companioned Prayer

- > Opening Prayer –The companion and the person praying begin with a personal prayer to God.
- > As We Are – Coming before God as we are, take time to notice how you physically feel.
- > Asking God – Ask what feels like God is calling you to spend some time with, in prayer.
- > God’s Love and Acceptance – Take your prayer subject to Jesus, and feel his love and acceptance.
- > Letting Go in the Loving Heart of Jesus – Let go into it with gentleness, caring and faith; and wait attentively within the gentle loving heart of Jesus.
- > Being Open to God’s Spirit – Notice and follow any interior movement from God.
- > Resting in God’s Presence – Quietly rest within God’s tender presence.
- > Closing Prayer – Silently end with a personal prayer.

After the group reflective prayer, allow for a few minutes of quiet time as people take different amounts of time to open their eyes. Then you might offer the opportunity for people to share or comment on what all that was like. When doing so, model the companion relationship of 1) asking by invitation, 2) providing supportive feedback without judgments or criticisms – while still offering insights in how their shared experiences illustrate various aspects of the prayer, and 3) honoring the sacredness or importance that they place on their experiences.

At the conclusion of the introductory meeting, it is appropriate to invite people to attend a follow-on series of meetings or sessions to learn and practice the prayer. Let them know that these will be especially geared to everyone learning together. You might suggest that they should expect to attend all of the meetings in order to begin to get an idea of what the potential of the prayer is all about.

Likewise, you should also let people know that following the learning sessions they will be able to continue as a small prayer group or will be able to join an established prayer group, with regular weekly meeting times.

You can also provide a handout that lists the date, time and place of the learning sessions, as well as the names and phone numbers of those leading the introductory meeting and follow-on sessions in case they have any questions. The disclaimer on the copyright page should be included in the handouts. A copy of the disclaimer is available from the “Resources” page at www.CompanionedPrayer.org. The name and phone number of the sponsoring organization and any associated websites can also be useful.

Follow-on Structured Learning Sessions

There are a number of formats that you can offer for the learning meetings or sessions that can follow an introductory meeting. Offering a regular meeting time twice a week of about two hours each has the benefit of establishing and making available a routine ongoing prayer group time that can continue after the learning sessions.

Individual learning meetings should be close together such as twice a week, as it is useful for the students' experiences with the prayer and the instruction to be fresh and cumulative throughout the learning process. As with learning any form of contemplative prayer, it is very important for participants to have recurring prayer experiences over a significant period of time, such as two to three months at a minimum. Participants should also be encouraged to select a prayer partner and to companion each other between meetings, especially if meetings are only once a week.

If possible, have at least two people involved in the instruction. If you do not have another person to share teaching with, then go ahead and do it on your own, knowing that you are not alone – Christ is your inspiration and your Companion. However, team teaching does give people different perspectives as well as strengthens your own teaching abilities.

In addition to this book, teaching material is offered at www.CompanionedPrayer.org. Some important program topics are offered below.

Introductions

Invite everyone to say something about themselves. Let them know that whatever they share should not be divulged or shared outside of the group without the person's permission. Suggest that they share whatever they feel is important and okay to share. People should have enough time that if they choose they can take the time to share aspects about their life that they feel are important.

Program format

Let everyone know that while the mechanics of a technique can be learned quickly, learning what God offers us in a prayer takes time. Ask for a commitment to participate throughout the entire program, to do the reading homework, and if meetings are only once a week, then after initially learning the prayer, to practice Companioned Prayer with another person between meetings.

Together we will be exploring, experiencing, and creating something new. We are going to find out how to open ourselves to experience God's personal grace and mercy, felt and known within us – his divine presence.

What will be covered

Let everyone know what will be the major topics you expect the group to cover during the program, such as:

- The prayer is a Christ-centered prayer
- Experiencing the gentle love of Jesus within our prayer subject
- The structure of the prayer form

- The role of the companion
- The role of the body in the prayer
- How to discern the prayer subject
- Following the movement of the Holy Spirit
- What happens when the prayer is practiced over time
- Other topics and questions related to the prayer that are important to them

Ask if there are any additional topics that they will want covered. As much as possible, weave these and other subjects into students' learning experiences of the prayer.

Questions and answers as a result of the Introductory Meeting

If an introductory meeting was held, ask if they have any questions as a result of the meeting. Let them know that you do not expect them to understand the prayer format or everything covered in the handout until they have had some extended experience with the prayer.

A Christ-centered prayer

Let people know that Companioned Prayer is a Christ-centered prayer. We pray to God through Christ, our Companion in prayer, placing ourselves in his hands. We call upon his name and seek his saving presence as we bring our personal issues and our self to him in prayer. For, "everyone who calls on the name of the Lord shall be saved." - Acts 2:21.

Experiencing our prayer subject within the Loving Heart of Jesus

Help people be open to experiencing the loving heart of Jesus. Letting go into our prayer subject within our experience of the love of Jesus is the heart of the prayer. Discuss and share this and provide appropriate exercises. It is critical for people to understand that Jesus' loving presence is experienced in its fullness through the felt-sense of their prayer subject. This discussion can be supported with a group prayer using the Reflective Prayer format offered later in this chapter.

Practicing Companioned Prayer and Reviewing the Prayer Format

After a couple of group experiences with Reflective Prayer, individual companioning can be introduced using the format in Introductory Prayer Formats later in this chapter that has the subtitle, "An Introduction to the Loving Heart of Jesus". Prior to the participants breaking into groups of two or three to companion each other one-on-one with this form, a review of this form with the group is useful. Everyone should have the experience of companioning another person, and of being companioned, at least twice using this form before using the full Companioned Prayer form.

When ready to proceed to the full form, first discuss the additional steps contained in the full form. Then let each person companion another, and be companioned using the full Companioned Prayer form of chapter 4. This full form should then be used for the remainder of the program.

Let everyone know that they are just learning the prayer and that everyone should consider it to be a learning exercise. “Mistakes” are permitted and expected. Nobody expects anyone to do it perfectly. Everyone should feel comfortable to just stumble along. Remind them that it is okay to ask what to do next, or to ask for an instruction to be repeated, etcetera.

Review of the Prayer Forms

It is possible to spend days discussing each aspect or movement of the prayer, but then there would not be enough time left for the experience of the prayer. Since the experience is more important than the explanation, let participants know that most of the learning time will be devoted to actually practicing the prayer. As a result you will not have enough time to cover all the subjects that you would like to, nor will you have enough time to discuss the subjects that you will talk about to the level of detail that you will want to. Fortunately it is not necessary to have an intellectual understanding of the prayer movements in order to pray. Begin with a very brief overview of the main point or points associated with each prayer movement appropriate to the form being used, similar to the approach suggested for an introductory meeting. You may wish to include a few exercises within your discussions. Always try to keep the discussions a two-way dialog instead of a lecture. Don't worry if their point is not on track with the point you wanted to make. Creating a collaborative learning environment demonstrates the mutually caring relationships you want everyone to bring to the prayer group.

General guidelines for the person praying and for the companion

Let them know that they do not have to be an expert in the prayer in order to companion another person. Re-read chapters 5 and 6, and pick out a few of the important points to discuss with the group. Include that the role of the companion honors the requests of the person praying and the companion should provide a loving and supportive prayer environment. Throughout the learning program, when reviewing chapter information, a very useful practice is to ask the participants what they found to be most interesting or useful in the chapter.

Encourage sharing our stories and getting to know each other

A structured learning program offers many opportunities for people to share their personal stories and for participants to listen and get to know each other. This type of sharing and learning is crucial for the group to become a Christian small group faith community, and is crucial for their ongoing participation and practice of Companioned Prayer. The program should be more than a class; it should also become a group of friends. Due to the time constraints of the learning material and time for prayer, the structured program outlines presently offered at www.CompanionedPrayer.org/Resources do not include enough formal sharing exercises of our personal journeys. Therefore, it is important to encourage this type of sharing throughout the periods for discussions and sharing to the degree possible. You can model this approach by sharing information within the context of your own story, and asking others specifically how the discussion topics or prayer experiences relate to their life's journey and challenges. Make sure that such requests are always presented in an open and invitational way without singling out any individual, and without creating the sense that personal disclosure is a requirement.

Continuation of the practice

Continue until everyone has had enough experiences being companioned and to be a companion until you feel they have a good introductory understanding of the prayer, from an experiential basis, on how to practice it. Usually this is after being companioned and being a companion at least six or eight times each using the full Companioned Prayer form within the learning sessions, with additional prayer experiences between the meetings as necessary. Invariably some participants may miss a couple meetings, so it is prudent to have enough meetings scheduled in order to facilitate the number of prayer experiences needed, even with a missed meeting.

After separating into smaller groups to practice the prayer, always get together again in a larger group before ending any meeting. End each meeting with some general sharing, or comments that you have, as well as with a prayer or reading said out loud on behalf of the group.

Practicing being a Companioned Prayer Ministry Group

After most of the introductory information and guidance for initially learning the prayer has been given, try to have at least one continuation meeting that models the functioning of a Companioned Prayer Ministry Group regular prayer meeting, or arrange for the group to participate in an ongoing Companioned Prayer Ministry Group. This can also serve to offer the continuation within a ministry group format, or can be a prelude to the class members joining an established Companioned Prayer Ministry Group.

Obviously all of the above should be spread out over a number of weeks so people can be comfortable with the amount of material and experiences at any one time. This will also give them some time to reflect on their prayer experiences, their learning it, and any effects that they may notice between meetings.

During these learning meetings, provide just enough information to allow them to comfortably experience the prayer and be a companion to each other. Do not spend much time discussing the theory or the theology of the practice, except that it is important to cover the basic topics found in chapter 3. Likewise do not feel compelled to spend a lot of time going over finer points of the prayer or companion instructions except as they may come up in questions, group dialog, or in response to observation of the prayer practice. Instead, refer participants to the applicable material in the chapters of this book or in the handouts provided. However you may wish to remind people that the prayer and the companioning processes are not intellectual exercises. They are exercises of faith, and the intellect only needs to be satisfied to the point that the person feels comfortable surrendering into the prayer in faith and trust in God.

More than anything else, we learn the prayer from the experience of the prayer itself and the love of our Companion, Jesus. There is no advantage to pushing people into learning the details of the practice before they are ready. Concentrate first on just giving them a regular experience of the prayer and the experience of being a companion. The nuances as well as the additional instructions not covered in the learning sessions can be provided later after they have some months of ongoing experience with the prayer.

It can be beneficial at some point in the instruction to let the students briefly know that Companioned Prayer fits beautifully within the Church's rich tradition of contemplative prayer and ongoing faith formation. You can give a few examples of this, or refer them to someone in your local church or religious community that offers such instruction. In addition, let your students know that with Companioned Prayer you and they are all embarked on the same personal spiritual journey, a lifelong Christian awakening of devotion, growth and union with God, and that it is the most exciting journey imaginable.

In addition, near the end of the instructional sessions, let your students know that Companioned Prayer can be used in service outreach as it is explained in chapter 10, and invite them to consider how they might be drawn to this outreach as they gain more experience over time with the prayer.

It is important that the number of learning meetings is clearly defined, or the last one is stated as the end of the learning sessions. This is particularly true when the Companioned Prayer group ministry meetings will be a continuation of the learning meetings in terms of place and times. This will ensure that at some point everyone will understand that they are all there to support each other equally and that you are not there to continue to provide instruction. As a leader and teacher you must resist the temptation to continue to comment on how their prayer practice might be improved. There can always be more time for that later if that is what the group might want to do in the future. In the meantime, it is important that they come to know the ongoing group ministry experience of mutual support and vulnerability without instruction or criticism of the practice. They should have the clear experience of a non-hierarchical prayer group structure, operating through the shared inspiration of the Holy Spirit in everyone.

However, if you feel that additional instructional guidance and encouragement are necessary in order to ensure that the group will continue and be able to best support each other, then discuss this with the group. You will want group understanding and support about your continued instructional input, while at the same time letting the group know that it is your desire that the group transition to a mutually supportive model as soon as possible. In fact, if additional guidance and encouragement is required, you should simultaneously encourage mutual support as described above and in chapter 7. You may consider identifying specific periodic meetings that will include ongoing instruction, so that the regular meetings maintain their openness to mutual vulnerability and support through shared inspiration of the Holy Spirit.

At the end of the basic learning sessions, hopefully all participants will have learned the following:

- The prayer is a Christ-centered prayer where in faith and hope we place ourselves in his loving heart.

- The group is a safe place: each experience is private (you don't have to pray out loud or share); there are no personal criticisms or judgments; etc.
- The prayer itself is non-intrusive and non-manipulative even when practiced with a companion.
- The group, our companion, and the prayer all honor our unique spiritual journey.
- The prayer offers significant long term potential for spiritual growth and renewal, within the rich traditions of the Church.
- The prayer experience feels like a personal gift of God's love and grace.

Introductory Prayer Formats

An introductory group prayer format, which can be used in an introductory meeting and in a first session, is provided below. This group prayer format is called "Reflective Prayer" and can be said by one person to a group. It contains all of the parts of the prayer, modified for a group experience, except the LETTING TO IN THE LOVING HEART OF JESUS and the BEING OPEN TO GOD'S SPIRIT parts of the prayer.

Reflective Prayer

OPENING PRAYER

In the name of the Father, of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit, we open our hearts to you, O Lord. Amen.

AS WE ARE

Coming before God as we are, let us take a few minutes to notice how we physically feel. [pause] Let your attention go to your back and notice what that feels like. [pause] Notice your shoulders [pause], your neck [pause], your head [pause], your arms [pause], your hands [pause], your feet [pause], your legs [pause], your stomach [pause], your heart [pause], and your breathing. [longer pause] Notice the body sense of how you feel right now [pause]

ASKING GOD

Staying with how this feels inside, and being open to God's loving presence; notice if anything comes when you ask yourself, "What feels like God is calling me to listen to, inside me right now?" [pause for about a minute]

GOD'S LOVE AND ACCEPTANCE

Notice how all this feels inside, and how you carry it. [pause] With tenderness and faith, notice how it feels to take all this to the loving heart of Jesus, and to feel his gentle love and acceptance in all of this. [pause for one to two minutes]

RESTING IN GOD'S PRESENCE

Let's nurture this special place we've come to inside. Pause here and let go into God's presence within all of this, resting in the quiet tenderness of his Spirit for a while. [pause for two to three minutes]

ENDING

*Softly strike a chime, or say: In God we give thanks, Amen.

A format that is useful for individuals when initially learning to companion one other person, before they use the full Companioned Prayer, is provided below. As with Reflective Prayer this format emphasizes the experience of the loving heart of Jesus. In contrast, the full Companioned Prayer draws out the complete letting go into the felt-sense of the prayer subject, within Jesus love.

Companioned Prayer
An Introduction to the Loving Heart of Jesus

OPENING PRAYER

*Begin by saying, In the name of the Father, of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit, we open our hearts to you, O Lord. Amen.

Then on behalf of the person you are praying with and yourself, say a personal prayer out loud, such as: asking for Christ to be our companion; for our trust in the Lord; for the guidance of the Holy Spirit; thankfulness for this time of quiet; asking Christ to be present within our needs, inside our very brokenness, inside our joy; to help us listen inside to God's quiet call; to be mindful of our sins, and of the grace and blessings received; or, to humbly journey inside with Christ.

Then invite the other person to also say a personal prayer of concerns, challenges, intercessions, devotion, or thanksgivings in their life for themselves or others, either silently or out loud, and if silently, to say "Amen" when they are ready to continue. [wait for the other person to respond]

AS WE ARE

*Then say: Coming before God as we are, take a few minutes to notice how you physically feel. [briefly pause, and then continue] For example, let your attention go to your back and notice what that feels like. [pause] Notice your shoulders [pause], your neck [pause], your head [pause], your arms [pause], your hands [pause], your feet [pause], your legs [pause], your stomach [pause], your heart [pause], and your breathing. [longer pause] Notice the body sense of how you feel right now [pause]; and then let me know when we are ready to go on. [wait for a response, and then go to ASKING GOD]

ASKING GOD

*When they are ready, say: Staying with how this feels inside, and being open to God's loving presence; let me know if something comes when you ask yourself, "Of everything going on in my life, what feels like God is calling me to listen to, inside me right now?" [wait for a response]

GOD'S LOVE AND ACCEPTANCE

Notice how all this feels inside, and how you carry it. [pause] With tenderness and faith, notice how it feels to take all this to the loving heart of Jesus, and to feel his gentle love and acceptance in all of this. Take your time, and then let me know when we are ready to go on. [wait for a response]

RESTING IN GOD'S PRESENCE

Okay; let's nurture this special place you've come to inside. Pause here and let go into God's presence within all of this, resting in the quiet tenderness of his Spirit for a while. And then let me know when we are ready to go on. [wait for a response]

CLOSING PRAYER

When they are ready to end, say:* As you savor all of this, let yourself know that this is God's personal love and grace, experienced and felt inside us. [pause] Staying in this holy and precious gift, you may wish to silently offer a prayer in response; and then when you are ready, just slowly open the eyes.

The person praying may also end with an "Amen", the sign of the cross, the doxology, or other closing prayer said out loud or silently.

The companion may also say out loud a brief prayer of thanks.

Both the Reflective Prayer and the Introduction to the Loving Heart of Jesus are available on the "Resources" page of the CPCF website at www.CompanionedPrayer.org/resources.

Sample Introductory Program Outlines

Sample ten-week, introductory program outlines are provided on the "Resources" page of the CPCF website. These sample outlines both assume two meetings per week of one-and-a-half hours each.

These programs are referred to as extended retreats, as the primary learning and personal growth comes from experiencing the prayer. One retreat program is based on participants reading parts of this book and discussing it at each meeting, with most of the book eventually read and discussed. The other retreat programs do not rely upon the book or homework and study. Each of these other sample retreats contain all of the essential topics for discussion. Handouts are offered but only as optional supplements, not as required reading. One of these sample retreats includes a Lenten theme (a pilgrimage to the loving heart of Jesus) and an Easter theme (meeting the risen Christ), and is designed to be offered during those seasons. Another is a retreat into the loving heart of Jesus, which is appropriate in any season. You may wish to develop similar retreat programs with other themes, such as Advent-Christmas, or focused on other topics of faith, or with special emphasis for a particular service ministry. As these and other instructional materials are developed and shared, we will endeavor to put them on the Companioned Prayer website.

When presenting and discussing topics, be very careful to not talk and explain so much that you jeopardize the necessary time for actual prayer, group reflection and personal sharing. Remember, everything need not be explained! Whatever outline you use or create for your own retreat, be prepared to modify it as you teach, in order to meet the needs of your participants.

As appropriate, encourage retreat participants to volunteer to present select material, at least the beginning group prayers, the concluding prayers, and the scripture readings. When using the outline based on this book, at the end of the tenth meeting and each meeting thereafter, ask for a volunteer to facilitate the discussion of the prior week's assigned homework. Involving participants in the leadership will strengthen their faith, facilitate their learning the prayer, and develop the fellowship of the group.

Teaching Challenges

Introducing guided prayer and openness to the Holy Spirit

Many people are not familiar with either being led by another person in prayer while sitting with their eyes closed, or with pausing to notice interior felt movements of the Holy Spirit. In such cases it can be beneficial during the very first meeting (including the general introductory meeting, if held) to provide a few exercises to acquaint them with these experiences before leading them through a group Companioned Prayer.

For example, you can lead them through a reflection of Psalm 46 verse 10, "Be still and know that I am God." You can do so by first inviting them to sit comfortably, close their eyes and to briefly notice their breathing and what their body feels like. Then let them know that you will be repeating the line, leaving off a portion each time. And that after each time you say it, you want them to keep their eyes closed and to be open to noticing what feelings, thoughts or images might come. You can break up the sentence as follows:

Be | still | and know | that I am | God

That is, the first time say the entire sentence. The second time, leave off the word "God". The third time, stop after "know"; and so forth. Allow enough time (for example, a half-a-minute) after each pause for them to notice what might come, but do not ask for feedback during this exercise. After the last pause, invite them to open their eyes. Let them have time to do so; and then invite them to share their experiences. Help them confirm their experiences of noticing the movement and grace of the Holy Spirit.

After that simple exercise, you can invite them to participate in a similar but different experience of the Lord's Prayer. Let them know that this time you will again begin with awareness of the body, and that you will next be saying the Lord's Prayer slowly, one phrase at a time and inviting them to again notice what it feels like in their body, and to be open to what may come as a result of letting go into each phrase. You can even repeat some of the phrases or ask them to notice what might come and to notice how it all feels after you have said each phrase. At the end, again allow them time to immediately share.

These two simple group prayer exercises will familiarize participants with being spoken to with their eyes closed during prayer, and receiving guided instructions while simultaneously focusing on their inner experiences. These prayer exercises will also help them intuitively understand how the body-feel can be part of their prayer experience, and how it can help them be open to the Holy Spirit. Finally, these prayer exercises give them experiences in waiting and noticing the movement of the Holy Spirit. All these experiences will help them to be more open and comfortable with these similar experiences within Companioned Prayer.

Some people will want to begin Companioned Prayer by desiring to only experience the bliss or love of God. When taking their prayer subject and themselves to the loving heart of Jesus, they may wish to simply linger in that state, even when they are being guided through the remaining parts of the prayer. If you sense that this may be occurring you will want to give clear instruction that the prayer is not about avoiding or self-filtering what God may be calling them to listen to, even as their prayer progresses. Reaffirm that their prayer subject is not to be obliterated or replaced by God's love; not to be handed off to Jesus for him to take from us; but that His love should allow us to be closer to our prayer subject with tenderness, and with his help, his love should allow us to carry it forward into our prayer experience felt within our body. See the material on this subject in chapter 5, and under "Challenges to Our Formation in Christ" in chapter 11, and in "Reaching Out to Those Who Stop" in chapter 13.

A critical period

Because the inner graced experiences of Companioned Prayer can be subtle, and since most people come to value the prayer over time, the first month or so after completing an introductory course is a very critical period. People must be encouraged to continue practicing the prayer with others in a Companioned Prayer group ministry during this formative time of new prayer awareness, in order to allow their repeated experiences to deepen and solidify. Without this ongoing Companioned Prayer experience at this time, it is likely they will stop even though they may be intellectually enthusiastic about the Prayer, and even if they have had a personally meaningful experience in the prayer. Experiencing the prayer regularly over time is crucial in order to continue. See A Relationship That Grows Over Time in chapter 3.

God's presence instead of experiences

If we teach Companioned Prayer as a way to have experiences of God's grace, then each time someone prays the prayer they will be judging the prayer and themselves based on their immediate experience. This sets up the person to be in a daunting 'success' or 'failure' situation every time they pray. And each time they will wonder if they can do it, if their experience was a 'good' or 'satisfactory' experience, or if Companioned Prayer is right for them. Instead, teach Companioned Prayer as a way to be open to God's gentle presence, to sit in his loving embrace, and to feel his peace and quiet. If experiences come, those are added blessings. But just being present and surrendering to God with humility, honesty and faith is the goal. Anything beyond that is God's doing and not ours.

Personal attention to private needs

As part of a teaching course or retreat program, you may wish to also have a one-on-one private instructional session with each student during the last two weeks of the course. As described in the second and third paragraphs of Reaching Out to Those Who Stop in chapter 13, the purpose of these meetings is to help the student share any difficulties they may be having with their prayer process, and to provide additional specific instruction as needed. If students wish to discuss broader issues of their personal spiritual growth in these private meetings, do not hesitate to refer them to your church's priest, pastor or trained spiritual director. These meetings can also be a good opportunity to personally invite each student to regularly participate in an existing or new Companioned Prayer ministry group following the class, thereby encouraging them to continue their prayer practice in Christian community.

Teaching within the Context of Faith and Fellowship

The previous pages have focused on the basics of understanding and teaching the prayer. However, it is important to frame the learning of Companioned Prayer within the rich context of our Christian faith in a way that makes the learning of the prayer both personal and inspiring. Instruction must relate to our individual experiences of awakening and growing in Christ, and must be also supported by traditional Church and scriptural teachings. See more about this in the next two chapters, Teaching from the Heart and Companioned Prayer and the Church. It is critical that the prayer not be taught as a technique, but instead as a prayer of deep Christian faith that offers a personal encounter with God. This involves sharing, scriptural references, and affirmation of common experiences and challenges in our deepening relationship with God.

For example you can teach all the basics of Companioned Prayer as outlined, but integrated with, or related to, a specific topic area. There are many ways to do this. You can have an extended retreat (e.g., over six weekends) centered on a specific theme, such as “A Pilgrimage to the Loving Heart of Jesus – with Companioned Prayer”, “The Story of the Prodigal Son: Coming Home to God – with Companioned Prayer”, or other themes appropriate to the season or mission of your church or community. You can use specific scripture passages or readings. You can use music or the Psalms. You can use the lives of the Saints. You can use other types of Christian contemplative prayer traditions. You can use our spiritual journey of coming to know the fullness of Christ. There are many themes that can be incorporated into a Companioned Prayer course or retreat that will help people relate their personal story to their faith and the prayer, will inspire them in their faith, and will help them understand how our gifted experiences of our Lord in Companioned Prayer are invaluable to our becoming close to or abiding in our Lord.

It is equally important to teach within a compassionate faithful environment of fellowship, friendship and trust. The learning environment must be one of shared personal trust and love. Without this, people will not readily open themselves to the depth of experiencing the Lord and his graces. Instead, they will remain in an intellectual-only mode of reception, and will only minimally allow themselves to transition into the mystery of God’s presence within the prayer. Therefore the learning environment must consciously foster compassionate sharing, caring and trust through both discussion and experience. See the section titled, Ministries of Compassion and Community in chapter 10 for more information on this.

Subsequent Instruction and Retreats

This second phase of instruction and practice can be a richly collaborative experience of people who know from their own Companioned Prayer experiences the depth and awe of God’s mercy and grace. This collaboration is also facilitated by the fact that they have been practicing and sharing their experiences together for some time, and have learned how to be open and trusting with each other within such private and sacred experiences.

Participants of a regular Companioned Prayer group may wish to get together outside of the regular prayer group time to plan and prepare for, and to offer, a series of additional learning meetings. These might be focused on specific companioning skills, employing Companioned Prayer within certain ministries, or practicing other forms of Companioned or contemplative prayer as discussed in chapters 8 and 11. These can be in the format of additional dedicated sessions or in a retreat setting. Retreat type programs can offer a wonderful combination of instruction, worship, sharing, fellowship, reflection, private time, and discussion all within an environment suitable for quiet immersion in our faith in God.

There are endless possibilities for suitable topics and activities at a Companioned Prayer retreat. A few examples are:

- Extended time to practice Companioned Prayer with others
- Open discussion, questions and answers, and sharing
- Review, discussion and practice of Companioned Prayer challenges, guidelines and/or learning additional instructions
- Companioned Prayer ministry groups
- Companioned Prayer service outreach
- Teaching Companioned Prayer
- Intercessory Companioned Prayer and other Companioned Prayer formats
- Time for the additional infused contemplation of Resting in God's Presence
- Sharing of our Companioned Prayer experiences and faith journeys
- Companioned Prayer within the contemplative prayer traditions of the Church
- Theology revealed in our Companioned Prayer experiences (see the examples in the previous section, and in the list in chapter 14)
- The Companioned Prayer experience within other traditions, practices, or personal faith journeys
- Companioned Prayer within collective prayer, liturgy and worship
- Time for individual personal prayer, silence, reflection and journaling

Plan your Companioned Prayer retreat with your group and come up with an agenda that works for the group overall. Do not try to fit too much into what time you have available. Let the time you do have be unhurried so that people can sink into their experiences and have time to reflect and listen inside, allowing themselves to be open to the greater truth within, which such an uninterrupted program and setting can allow. You may want your retreat to revolve around only one or perhaps two topics or activities. Remember, you can always have additional retreats or workshops later. Keep the retreat a prayerful experience of being close to God and not just an exchange of information.

Additional Teaching Practices

For those who wish to teach Companioned Prayer, in addition to the planning involved, some time might be set aside to get together and discuss and practice specific companioning and teaching skills. Everyone who is planning to be a teaching companion should at a minimum learn the material in chapters 5, 6, 11, 12 and 13.

Chapter 13

Teaching From the Heart

They said to each other, “Were not our hearts burning within us while he was talking to us on the road, while he was opening the scriptures to us?” That same hour they got up and returned to Jerusalem; and they found the eleven and their companions gathered together. ...Then they told what had happened on the road, and how he had been made known to them in the breaking of the bread. While they were talking about this, Jesus himself stood among them and said to them, “Peace be with you.”

Luke 24:32-36

This chapter encourages you to teach from your inner sense of the holy, from your heart and soul, and then to see what happens.

Christ Centered

Teach Companioned Prayer as a personal, faith-centered, spiritual, prayer practice that through faith, can open one to reconciliation, to mystery, and to God and Christ. Do not teach anything less. In fact, if Companioned Prayer were to be prayed without the understanding and intention of our faith, it would cease to be a Christian prayer. Christ comes to us in this prayer because we believe in him, we long for him, we ask for his presence within our brokenness, within our humanness. And he does so from his abiding love.

You cannot do it without God. Do not take a spiritual practice and turn it into a secular one because we happen to live in a secular society. Do not water it down into a new-age practice, a motivational technique, or a psychological procedure. You must teach from that depth of experience within yourself from which you know God: that core essence of your being and experience that is most special, from where he touches you; from your soul given to God. Teaching from any other place will not work. Teaching from the intellect will not work. Teaching in a medium or format that does not directly and plainly honor that holy essence and experience will not work. For example teaching prayer as a way to relax, or as a way to be with your feelings, or as a way to solve problems or improve creativity, etcetera, when you yourself know that the experience of prayer is so much more than that, is not being truthful inside yourself, and will not work.

Do not be concerned with mass appeal and acceptance. Success should not be measured by how many people take a class, but instead should be based on facilitating the opportunity for God’s grace to affect people’s lives through the prayer. Companioned Prayer enlivens us with God’s grace, and it is the process of nurturing the ability of people to be open to regularly knowing and experiencing spiritual grace within their lives that should constitute success. Therefore teach from the prayer's strength: the divine depths of its transforming experience. Honor that. Inspire from that and from nothing else.

Do not teach because it gives you intellectual satisfaction or provides you with emotional reinforcement. For example do not teach out of a need to be considered by others or by yourself to be a spiritual leader. Instead, teach because you feel called by God to do so. Teach with joy and humility. Know that the gifts and insights that you share are not yours, but are given to you out of God's loving grace. Therefore, teach in His name only.

You do not need to be a "whole person" or "perfect" in order to teach. Teaching from open brokenness is much more valuable than teaching from some sense of purity or from a sense of having all the answers. From the perspective of incompleteness, personal challenges and trials owned and shared with Christ, it is okay to be a leader. When you feel called by God to share Companioned Prayer, you must teach, guide and inspire. You can do it without controlling. You can do it in a way that encourages and invites each person to be open to the mystery of growth and gift from within. Know that you are not responsible for the student's inner experiences. You are powerless to make anything happen. It is between the person and God.

More important than the actual instruction, is the attitude of the instructor. You must let go of wanting to fix people, of wanting them to have wonderful prayer experiences, of wanting them to adopt Companioned Prayer as their means to personal salvation or as some kind of supercharged spiritual path. You are not the savior. You must let all of that go; and instead just be very genuinely happy to be with each person on a very personal level, to offer to share the prayer and some instruction, but most of all simply to be loving, personal, and caring for one another. That is the goal of teaching Companioned Prayer, to create that kind of environment and those kinds of relationships. This environment and these relationships are built on mutual trust, vulnerability, humility, compassion, and friendship, all within the context of Christ's loving presence within all of us and his love for all of us. Abide in his love felt within us, and share his love with others in the reality of our actual presence to one another. Then within that very authentic Christen love and fellowship, let God do what he wills with respect to the instruction and personal experiences of Companioned Prayer, and don't be concerned about the results.

Faith

It is our faith in the reality of the living God that allows prayer to work. Without faith imagine letting go into, what?... your psyche?... your feelings?... your body? Now consider letting go into your personal issues within faith, within the love and compassion of Jesus' living presence. With God's help you can risk being more inside your prayer subject acknowledging your brokenness and your needs, to risk being more open to God's presence within you, and to accept his gift of grace and change. After Christ healed someone, he did not say, "Your understanding of yourself healed you." He said, "Your faith has healed you"; and not "faith" as one's concepts or theology, but faith as borne of real need, turning to God, revelation, recognition, and personal trust and surrender to our Lord.

Remember you are teaching prayer based on faith and love; not teaching faith based on prayer. In other words, don't use teaching of Companioned Prayer as an excuse to teach your particular faith orientation or your religious views. Your goal is not to convert anyone to your religious beliefs. Your role is not to "save" anyone. Teach Companioned Prayer as a process of inner personal spiritual unfoldment, mystery, gift, growth, discovery and grace. A way to experience God's love from within – to know his presence and to be open to listening for his encouragement, love and direction. Let God do the "converting." He will be much better at it than you. Give your students the freedom to have their own personal relationship with God as he chooses to reveal himself within their prayer. Have faith that God will do whatever is right for each person.

Do not get drawn into theological or biblical debates or justifications. The justification is God's self-revelation within the prayer experience itself. The purpose of teaching in a faith-centered manner is to support the experience of letting go into trusting God, not to intellectually justify the prayer. Jesus was sentenced to death because the religious leaders did not recognize that the miracles that he performed were from God. They ignored the reality of the miracles in favor of defending their theology with religious argument and debate. Every time we pray to God in Companioned Prayer we experience some small or special miracle. Do not turn away from the reality of God within those miracles. Surrender into the miracle of God and into a living relationship with him. Teach from there, and from that living faith, and not from religious argument and debate. We have received a gift from God. Jesus comes to us in this prayer. Do not reject him again; do not crucify Jesus a second time.

Some people in your faith community may want to challenge you and reject your teaching Companioned Prayer based on their theological interpretations. You do not need to struggle with such people. Just abide in Christ in your heart, and answer them silently with your non-judgmental love, in God's love given within you. Have faith and trust in God's will. And continue to offer this most precious gift of God's presence, his mercy, love and grace. Offer it from the simple faith and love experienced and known in your heart.

Other Faiths

Can this prayer be taught and practiced by people of non-Christian faiths? Yes it can. God's ability to reveal his presence and share his grace is not limited to only one faith. Companioned Prayer is suitable for all people open to the truth of God from within their personal faith. While retaining the essential foundations of the prayer, Companioned Prayer must be presented in ways that allow people to open themselves up to the living presence of our Lord within their personal experiences, including their own deep appreciation and meaning of faith in their own cultural and religious context and personal story. Once they discover their personal relationship with God as experienced in Companioned Prayer, they will be drawn to God's truths contained in their faith and also in the Christian faith as God calls them into the fullness of His relationship with them. Therefore the purposeful conversion of anyone learning the prayer, from their own faith to the Christian faith, should never be part of the teaching of the prayer. As instructors we must have faith that through the Companioned Prayer experiences, God can and will most effectively call each person to his or her own relationship with Him as best for that individual. For "The LORD is near to all who call on him, to all who call on him in truth." – Psalm 145:18.

Sharing

While teaching Companioned Prayer, it is not only okay to share some of your own prayer experiences and growth, it is necessary. Your personal testimony will help people to learn to trust and value their own prayer experiences, as well as the prayer process. Or you may wish to share your experiences anonymously; that is, without necessarily saying that they are yours. Similarly you can share some experiences of others just as long as you do not identify who they belong to. Just as hearing our symbols reflected back to us in the prayer grounds us in the experience and invites us to continue our prayer journey in faith, when we hear others share their prayer experiences we often hear similarities with our own experiences. And that reinforces our experiences and promotes understanding within us and between us of what this prayer is all about, how spiritual growth happens, and why this is a spiritual process. It builds trust in letting go into all of it, into surrendering to God within the prayer experience, and inspires us to continue.

When sharing experiences, be humble and respectful of others. Let them know that you do not expect them to share if they do not feel comfortable doing so. Always choose your opportunities to share in relation to illustrating some point about the prayer practice that will help them learn to trust God. Let people know that everyone's experiences are different and that specific experiences are not a measure of anything, and certainly not an indication of holiness. They are in fact more indicative of our state of sin – our separation from God, our wounded and broken life, and our profound spiritual needs; together with the undeserved and underappreciated gift of God's mercy given out from his complete lovingness. Thus, one prayer experience is not better than another. Our goal is not any particular experience. What we receive each time in prayer is what we need most.

Another benefit of witnessing some aspect of your or others' prayer experiences, and of relating these experiences and the prayer process to the Christian experience, is that it helps convey the sense of mystery, grace, and God's presence within the prayer. It will allow you to communicate the essence of this practice – that it offers a way to be open to the divine, completely as personal gift. Those learning the prayer will catch the sense of this, supported by their own personal spiritual experiences, as they risk being close to their issues within the power of their faith in God.

Intellectual Discussion

When teaching, do not try to define your prayer experiences or those of your students, theologically or any other way. Don't put their experiences into a box and constrain them to your definitions. For example, do not try and define "grace" or "God." Keep it open and mysterious. Let people define their own experiences from the nature of their experiences, recognizing that such definitions are personal and will change as the individual changes and grows. In this respect, one definition is not more "right" than another, so just don't get into it. Leave figuring out the meaning of prayer experiences to outside of teaching the prayer. In fact, it is best to refer theological discourse to the church or religious organization of which your group is a part.

In addition, thorough or detailed discourse about the prayer practice within the basic teaching sessions can make the learning of the prayer feel like an extensive intellectual explanation, which can get in the way of letting go. Extensive explanation establishes the context of learning to pray to be analytical thinking, and reinforces the feeling that analytical thinking and logic should be the medium of the experience, thereby causing the learning of surrender to God within the prayer to be more problematic.

This does not mean that questions should not be answered, or that inquisitive discussion should be stifled. Intellectual understanding should be clear and satisfied. However, let some of the answers come from the experiences within the prayer, instead of all through teacher explanations or group discussions. Encourage your students to take their doubts, intellectual issues and curiosity into their prayer experience, being open to allowing those very questions and issues to be their prayer subjects, unfolding and developing over time.

Similarly, providing people with copies of this book or similar material when they are being introduced to the prayer or anytime soon after they have begun the practice is usually not helpful, unless it is part of a structured learning program. Otherwise it can actually hinder their ongoing walk with God with this prayer. While we do want to nurture their ongoing prayer practice, it is important not to try to engineer their growth and learning. A Companioned Prayer teacher is more like a gardener who tends the garden but who realizes that God is the one who actually makes it grow. You can rely upon God. It is his mercy and grace experienced through our encounter with the Father, the Son and the Holy Spirit through faithful Companioned Prayer experiences that will provide the spiritual awakening and growth that is just right for each individual. The support of a learning environment is important, but it is God who ultimately calls each person to himself. It is not a book full of information or an exhaustive intellectual program that will do it. Create a space to let God do it, and encourage participants to open their hearts to him in faith.

Misuse of the Prayer

In practicing this prayer and understanding its experiences, we should personally avoid trying to absolutely fix, define or limit various terms of faith and experience, such as “God”, “mercy”, “sin”, and so forth, because our understanding of those terms will change and deepen as we continue to have various experiences in the prayer, and as we change and grow according to how God forms us. We should not rush to define but instead should remain open to the mystery of God’s reality, knowing that it is always larger and beyond our limited comprehension.

In fact, although some understandings and graces received in the prayer may feel to be complete within a single prayer, we may find that months or years later, the revelation may continue to unfold through the same symbols and showings into gifts of continued or greater meaning and personal significance. Therefore we do not make life-changing decisions based on a single prayer experience or even a few prayer experiences. Instead we know that God reveals his love for us over time, and in his time not ours, as best for us, not necessarily according to our script or our desired schedule. He calls on us in faith, for us to love and trust him. Our growth as a human spiritual being is an ongoing process and a lifelong personal journey. A journey with many surprising twists and turns, of celebrations and sadness, of trust and surrender. As our journey unfolds and expands, we are in awe to find that his mystery and presence is real.

Likewise we should never impose our personal vision on others, even if we believe it to be of great benefit or good. Love is not a justification for lack of honoring others' intellectual, emotional or spiritual freedom. Our personal prayer experiences, understandings, or visions must not be used or promoted in ways that do not let people have full freedom to learn their own inner truth in their own time and in their own way, with the support and guidance of the Church. No matter how profound your own experience, it is personal to you. God calls each of us in a unique way to our own unique truth in him. The power of that truth is experienced as compelling and authentic only when it is congruent with our inner personal story, with who we are as a unique person.

Therefore, let God speak this truth in each of our hearts, and do not assume that your personal truth must be understood or agreed upon by everyone else. Using your personal prayer experience in ways that result in feelings of power over others, in feelings of aggrandizement, pride, self-importance or being better or more special than others, or in imposition of your personal will, beliefs or vision upon others, are all a misuse of God's gentle grace and love for you. Nor should anyone give such authority or status to another individual who might display or claim such self-importance or exclusive vision. God gives true authority and understanding only to the humble and vulnerable; and which is authentically expressed simply in love and service to others. Therefore, do not use either affection or knowledge as a justification for personal, political, social, or religious power over others.

This does not mean that the expression of our prayer experiences cannot be manifested in community. As Christians we are naturally called to share our experience of God's personal presence and love. In fact, one of the best expressions of the reality of our prayer experiences is within our practical and daily relationships with others. The inner truth and vision known within us can be expressed in loving and caring non-codependent and non-controlling relationships, out of the gifted grace of our own inner freedom and Christ's loving presence within us. In spending time being authentic and caring, by giving and sharing of ourselves, our faith and experiences of grace and mercy are made concrete within ourselves and others.

Creating an Open Learning Environment

When teaching, you and your students are all involved in a mutual process of discovery and learning. Let them know that unlike learning traditional subjects like history, math or philosophy, we are not here to learn about facts or ideas. Rather we are here to learn an ongoing process of how to be open to new discovery from within – from God.

When explaining the prayer process, pause occasionally to remind them that this is the dry part: understanding the process, learning the "how to," is very different from the experience of prayer.

Some people respond very positively to using journals to capture the symbols and experiences of their prayer. When teaching, you might want to hand out journals and set time aside to write in them.

When arranging for the instruction, you should not charge for your time. However you might want to ask for donations for teaching materials (handouts, journals, etcetera) and for any out of pocket expenses, food and facilities that you have to pay for, such as retreat center accommodations. However, no one should be turned away for lack of money. If you absolutely need some stipend, try to arrange it from the sponsoring organization rather than from the individuals learning the prayer. When people directly pay for something, they usually expect some specific results. The prayer is then turned into a consumer item instead of the gift of grace from God. In addition, when people pay you, their focus may be more on what they are getting from you, i.e., are they getting their money's worth from you and from their learning experience, instead of just being open to what comes from God. "You received without payment; give without payment." – Matthew 10:8b.

The ability to personally teach Companioned Prayer should not be based on any organization's approval. There should be no approval, certification or other authorization of status of anyone who wishes to teach, share, or companion others in Companioned Prayer. The criteria are within the person who wishes to mentor others: humility, faith, love, and a personal sense of being called by God to do so. However, this should not diminish an organizations' ability to decide when, how or by whom it offers its Companioned Prayer programs. If you feel ready, but an organization is not ready to sponsor your desired teaching activity, you may wish to allow ample time for further discernment regarding your own readiness. If after such unhurried consideration, you feel you still are called to teach, there are many other people of need or organizations that you may wish to consider.

Long Term Spiritual Growth

The support of the Church and the understanding of how Companioned Prayer and our prayer experiences fit into our overall ongoing Christian spiritual development are vitally important in facilitating our prayer practice and our ongoing transformation by God's love. This understanding and support enlivens and deepens our dedication to our lifelong prayer journey with Christ.

Therefore, people need to know from the outset that Companioned Prayer is meant to be experienced over a long period of time, and with full participation in the Church. People of faith seek overall spiritual wholeness and closeness to God that enriches and enlivens their lives and their faith on a continuing basis as they are drawn to union with God over time. They do not simply desire a technique or temporary experience.

For most people contemplative prayer is so different from their training and orientation, and so non-supported by our action orientated consumer society, that it can be difficult for them to easily absorb it into their daily lives and to regularly practice it. And yet for most people, it is only through its regular practice that recognition of its deep personal significance and spiritual potential becomes grounded. It is this follow-on support and practice, from a person's first introduction to the prayer, which must also be given the highest priority and nurturing.

Reaching Out to Those Who Stop

It is not unusual for some people to stop practicing the prayer shortly after they have learned it. People stop for a variety of reasons. (Also see “Challenges to Our Formation in Christ” in chapter 11.)

One of the most common reasons is that sometimes when people are learning the prayer they are hesitant to share their experience of the prayer process, e.g., what is or is not happening, instead of learning how to best deal with the particular process challenges that they may have experienced. Examples of these challenges include, their mind wandering, difficulty accepting or recognizing symbols, looking for meaning in a symbol instead of the inner felt sense of it, abandoning their prayer subject for religious images or feelings, dealing with distractions, and so on. So instead of learning the nuances of the prayer process as it specifically relates to them, they keep quiet and just assume that they are not right for the prayer, that the prayer is more suited to people other than themselves. Even if this situation is experienced during the learning sessions, the person will usually get something positive from the prayer such as quietness, restfulness, or fellowship with the other students and the instructors. As a result, they may remain positive during the learning sessions but then stop practicing afterward.

Therefore instructors need to convey to their students how to recognize the common subtle challenges to the prayer, and to encourage students to share their personal difficulties with their prayer process during the learning sessions. Only in this way can the instructor give them the specifically personal information necessary for them to learn the fullness of the prayer process and to truly surrender to the presence of God in their prayer practice. An additional approach is to offer private one-on-one follow-up for anyone who wishes, and to particularly encourage those who you believe may need additional instruction. Let the students know that the intent of this kind of follow-on session is not simply to pray, but to review their unique practice concerns; kind of a prayer practice checkup with some further personal instruction specific to their needs.

Often people soon stop, even after having a very personally meaningful, faith-filled prayer experience, simply because the prayer experiences are subtle. We perceive and feel the experiences at a subtle level of awareness, which can be easily dismissed or even forgotten once we are thinking, perceiving and functioning at a more tangible, everyday level of activity and awareness. Thus, we may need to explain that routine prayer experiences, of being drawn into the awareness of God’s subtle graces, are necessary in order to allow our awareness and perception of him to develop over time with deeper awareness and clarity, both within the prayer and outside of it. Without this regular prayer practice, it may be easy to initially dismiss the value of the prayer, and to not return to it. This may be reinforced if at the outset, people liken their prayer experiences to the subtly of dreams, which of course are routinely dismissed and forgotten. Therefore it may also be necessary to explain the differences between everyday dreams and our prayer experiences; prayer in which we consciously open ourselves to the very real presence of our Lord and savior.

Many people turn to a new prayer practice only at a point of crisis or transition in their life. They are turning to God in response to finding themselves in a specific time of trial or at a turning point in their life. When that trial or transition is over, they may feel less inclined to continue listening for God's call within their needs. This happens even when their response to their challenge is assuaged through a personally significant, even life-changing, spiritual experience in prayer itself. Such people usually are not aware of the deep personal rewards of continuing the prayer practice over time.

Sometimes people stop because they confuse their new understandings received through the prayer with spirituality. They are so taken by their new religious or spiritual insights or experiences that they perceive they have reached some kind of inner intellectual or relational plateau or goal. They are not aware that God's call goes beyond our intellectual and emotional zeal; that true conversion is a lifelong ongoing divine transformation in which we are changed and grow in our soul by God's real presence within us as we surrender to him in continuous prayer, service, worship and love of others.

People may stop practicing Companioned Prayer when they do not have a foundational appreciation for how the prayer fits within the larger context of Christian faith and formation. For example, a person's Companioned Prayer experiences may change over time with experiences becoming less vivid, with symbols and showings becoming more subtle, while God quietly invites them into his presence for his continual silent work within their soul and encourages their response. Without knowing how these changing experiences relate to Christ's ongoing spiritual development of us, a person may become impatient, or may continue to focus on God's gifts received in prayer instead of God's presence and his transformation within them. As a consequence they may cease to pray regularly. Therefore it is important that Companioned Prayer be taught and practiced within an established Christian church or religious community that provides informed access to and support of ongoing personal formation in Christ. Additionally, if someone is experiencing less obvious graces or dryness in Companioned Prayer, they should be invited or encouraged to extend their period of prayer time within the RESTING IN GOD'S PRESENCE as described in chapter 11.

Other people stop practicing the prayer because they do not want to get in touch with their feelings or issues. This prayer asks us to be present to our issues and feelings in order to carry them forward to God in prayer, listening for his word and mercy. The prayer asks us to be fully present to who we are and how we are carrying our burdens. We allow ourselves to be open to an inner confessional as called by God. Even though we do so in surrender to God and in his presence, awaiting his mercy and grace, some individuals find themselves not comfortable or ready for such vulnerability. Some people carry an expectation that spiritual growth should be available as a technique, devoid of sacrifice or emotional demands. Yet as humans, spiritual growth only comes with an acknowledgement of our human condition, an ongoing realness. To allow ourselves to be fully present to our brokenness, to our real human condition, requires faith that God is and will be present to us in our need. It usually requires a faith-centered, loving and supportive prayer group or prayer partner as well. Then it is easier to be present to whatever we find God is calling us to listen to. In Companioned Prayer, with humility, honesty and faith, we allow God to identify those personal needs and limitations that challenge our spiritual growth. God invites us to acknowledge them and to mature and be transformed through them by his loving healing grace.

This idea that personal spiritual growth requires an openness to inner vulnerability, that our ongoing walk with Christ requires us to willingly pick up and carry our own cross, is not often taught in our churches these days. It is a Christian truth that is usually ignored in favor of a Christian message of feeling good in Christ. Yet look at Jesus' life. His own spiritual journey called on him to be fully present to the trials that God called him to face. And just as God was present to Jesus in his trials, Jesus is present to us in our life and in our prayer; we are not alone.

Companioned Prayer takes us to the heart of this Christian truth, where we can experience God's mercy and grace from within our challenges. However, because this truth is not generally taught and because we live in a culture oriented towards gratification, some people are not aware that true prayer includes acknowledging our needs. Consequently they are not expecting to do so or are not comfortable in doing so. Without understanding why such ongoing acknowledgement is necessary, they withdraw from the prayer practice, and revert to using religion to "feel good" and to avoid their inner truth, instead of using it to grow spiritually in Christ.

Sometimes people stop if they begin to treat the prayer as a technique. In a technique, we do something to get a result. If Companioned Prayer begins to be viewed as a means to receive something, or to gain grace, to alleviate suffering, or for some other outcome, then we are using faith and prayer for our own will. But in Companioned Prayer we give ourselves in faith to God with humility, authentically as who we are and how we are, without manipulation or expectation. If we begin to practice the prayer as a technique to gain grace, grace will cease to happen and eventually we will stop the practice. (Actually we will have stopped practicing it as a prayer long before we stop reciting the words.)

People will not continue when they approach Companioned Prayer as a prayer of experiences instead of as a prayer of being close to God. If they are looking for an experience each time they pray, they will be judging the merits of Companioned Prayer each time they pray. They will wonder if their prayer experience is a 'success' and whether or not they can do the prayer or whether it is for them. No one can face this type of challenge every time they wish to pray and be expected to continue the practice. Therefore people should understand that the goal of the prayer is to just be with God with openness, humility, honesty and surrender. If experiences happen, that is an added blessing but it is not the goal. We must not idolatry our experiences, even those graces given to us by God. Over time our prayer experiences will draw us even closer to God and will facilitate our surrender to him, but they are not the goal.

Other people may stop practicing the prayer because they are not ready to accept that God can be so personal to them. They may have had a view that God is entirely transcendent, ethereal or other worldly, and their faith is more of an understanding of spirituality or doctrine without personal experiences or without a personal relationship with Christ. It can be quite disruptive to experience that God is also personal. The implications can be staggering, and some people will choose to avoid a prayer that facilitates a personal relationship with Christ.

Sometimes very religious people are not open to the prayer because they place their highest value on clearly defining their faith in terms of certainty. To them faith is about being certain of, and committed to, a clearly articulated theology which defines their understanding and relationship with God. While the idea that God is mystery may be acceptable, they may be uncomfortable actually experiencing God as mystery, as it might challenge the comfort of a fixed or certain understanding of God, regardless of their degree of devotion. Associated with this can be a response to the prayer that they simply do not like, or are uncomfortable with, the interior experience of Companioned Prayer. When sharing Companioned Prayer with any such individuals, they should be approached with patience and love, emphasizing that this is a prayer within the loving heart of Jesus, and they should be encouraged to listen to their doubts and challenges in prayer, if that is what God is calling them to listen to.

Therefore do not be surprised to find that after a while some people stop practicing the prayer. You need to acknowledge that everyone is at a different point in their faith journey, and that some people may not be ready to take their next step, or that their next step might be different than what you think it is. You must allow them the grace to not go forward as you might perceive it. Do not consider it a failure either of you or of them if they have stopped practicing the prayer, or if they are intermittent in their participation in a prayer group or with a prayer partner. Have faith that God will call them back at the time when they are ready, and that he continues to lead them. In the meantime, be glad that you were able to share with them the prayer practice and experiences that they did have. Continue to be positive with them and invitational without any pressure or guilt.

Sometimes when someone stops participating, or misses a number of times after being very regular, it can be helpful to reach out to see if you can help the person with any misunderstandings about the practice or issues with the group. Perhaps you will find that it is a simple matter of logistics; for example a new job has made it difficult for them to arrive at the meetings' regular start time. Or the person may have some personal issue they are dealing with that they are not sure they want to spend time with in prayer or are not sure they want to take into the prayer group, even privately. Or perhaps they might have some misunderstanding of the prayer process and what it means. If someone has missed a few prayer group meetings, do not rule out the simple possibility that they are sick, and should be called on (refer to chapter 10 on service outreach). Often, meeting with them outside of the group time is just the extra personal care needed for them to be strengthened and encouraged to also hope that your love and care will be present to them as a prayer partner or in your prayer group.

Therefore, anyone involved in teaching Companioned Prayer should hold the view that the prayer is not simply a technique to be learned, something simply taught and handed off. A more nurturing individual approach needs to be embraced, recognizing it takes commitment and time on our part as a teacher. This prayer is learned and practiced one person at a time. This one-on-one approach needs to be appreciated even when teaching and meeting within a group experience, and even when the prayer is practiced within a church or other Christian community.

Companioned Prayer and the Church

I pray that, according to the riches of his glory, he may grant that you may be strengthened in your inner being with power through his Spirit, and that Christ may dwell in your hearts through faith, as you are being rooted and grounded in love. I pray that you may have the power to comprehend, with all the saints, what is the breadth and length and height and depth, and to know the love of Christ that surpasses knowledge, so that you may be filled with all the fullness of God. Now to him who by the power at work within us is able to accomplish abundantly far more than all we can ask or imagine, to him be glory in the church and in Christ Jesus to all generations, forever and ever. Amen.

Ephesians 3:16-21

A Prayer to God

How do we know that the prayer experience is of God? Because our prayer is made to God the Father, Son and Holy Spirit; by the nature of the experiences; by its relation to scripture and the teachings of the Church; and by its fruits.

What makes any prayer a way of communing with God and not simply a self-serving expression is our intention and our faith. We believe in God and his accessibility, and we enter into a communion with him through a relationship of faith, love and hope. This is what we are doing in Companioned Prayer. Within this personal relationship of faith, love and hope we listen inside to what it feels like God is calling us to be aware of in our life, to those challenges, trials, concerns, joys, thanksgivings and aspirations that are personal to us. We open ourselves to God and trusting in him we bear our soul, our all. We allow ourselves to be present to one of our most personal and private aspects of our life because we know that in prayer, God may let his love and mercy be known to us from right within our very intimate and tender concern or aspiration. In essence, we are bringing this personal and private part of our self to God, taking our hurts and our joys to the tender loving heart of Jesus and our self along with them. In his presence in community and within us, we wait in faith for God's will and his grace to be felt and known, for the movement of the Holy Spirit. And then we rest in whatever blessing or understanding we may have received, and pray a prayer of thankfulness or other response as appropriate.

As a prayer, Companioned Prayer combines the traditional form of taking a personal need or concern to heart and to God in prayer, along with the traditional contemplative aspects of attentive listening, waiting, receiving and resting in his Spirit.

Praying in God's Will

Some people may wonder why this prayer seems to be so efficacious. Why does it seem that God answers our Companioned Prayer so often compared with our awareness of his response to our other prayers? This may be in part because in Companioned Prayer we seek to actively pray his will instead of our own will:

1. By allowing God to pick our prayer subject we are following his will instead of our own.
2. By following and letting go into the movement of the Holy Spirit as our prayer subject shifts and evolves, we continue to follow his will instead of our own.
3. By being in our prayer with simple humility and faith, we are surrendering to his will instead of our own.
4. By letting go into the loving heart of Jesus, we are surrendering into the love of God, which is his nature and will.
5. By continually taking the time to just be with what comes from God and to notice and nurture our awareness of it, we are letting go into what God wills for us instead of our own will.

We do all this with full freewill, in faith and simple humble trust in the love of the living, ever-present God the Father, Son and Holy Spirit. God personally knows us, loves us, and wills only the best for us. As we give ourselves to him in Companioned Prayer by conforming our prayer to his will, it is our experience that he reveals his will in us through his grace and his love.

The Prayer Experience

When we pray in this way, we can find ourselves surprisingly open to God's mystery and loving personal gift. Over and over again, people describe their experiences as gaining insight and understanding, new directions and discernments, a realization that what was received was given as gift, that we did not make it happen and in fact we could never have made it happen; and that what did happen was very personal and private healing, reconciliation, understanding, love and grace. We experience all this with a sense of mercy and often a strong sense of the personal divine presence. God's very real mystery, of his being deeply and actively involved in our life beyond our appreciation for this personal love, is usually an overall quality of our prayer experiences. As revealed by God in our prayer experience, we may also gain direct awareness of his awesome power as well as his awesome loving tenderness, forgiveness and care.

Symbols and showings that come to us in the prayer may often be related to scripture. Sometimes the appreciation that they are scripturally based may not happen until later when we read or hear the relevant passage. Sometimes their scriptural relevance is clearly understood immediately. The presence of God may also be felt more than through symbols. We may find Jesus gently revealing himself, healing us and calling us to a new life in him. God may choose to open our hearts to his mystery and love in personal ways beyond our rational expectations or understandings; ways that call directly to our hearts and souls.

Christian Scripture, Faith and Tradition

These interior Companioned Prayer experiences reflect many fundamental tenets of Christianity. By experiencing these directly, interiorly and with both personal and universal applicability, the prayer experiences are confirmed over and over again to reveal the living waters of the faith. Just a few of the many Christian tenets affirmed in this way include:

- God's mercy, grace and love felt and known inside as gift;
- Sin, forgiveness, redemption, acceptance and reconciliation;
- The beatitudes;
- Honesty of what is real in ourselves (our brokenness, vulnerability, hopes, etc) as doorways to Christ and God's grace;
- In weakness I am strong in Christ;
- We are the body of Christ here on Earth;
- The Trinity: Father, Son and Holy Spirit;
- Healing (physical, emotional & spiritual);
- Trust in God and he will guide and protect your soul;
- Where two are gathered in his name;
- Be still and know... truth as revelation;
- It is not through laws or works that we are saved, but by God's love;
- Incarnational spirituality: God's living presence in Christ, in us and the world;
- Revelation as spiritual mystery, divine vision and gift;
- Walking with Christ; carrying our cross;
- Responding to God's personal call;
- Prayer and reverent listening; Humility
- The gentle loving Sacred Heart of Jesus;
- Personal salvation, and Christ our personal savior;
- Spirituality as more than a belief in a mental concept or emotion; but as an ongoing living relationship with God;
- The role of love and compassion in faith;
- Love God and one another as ourselves;
- Being a servant to each other;
- Thankfulness and worship as a personal response to an interior reality.

Are these experiences something new? No. They have been going on for 2000 years. The Church has an incredibly rich and well documented history of people of faith who have recorded such experiences and expressions over the centuries. In addition, it is now and always has been the common experience of Christians everywhere that God is personal and universal, awesome and loving, that he gives us freewill but is also merciful and saving. You don't have to be a saint in order to know the simple yet profound truths of Christianity. You can know them directly through prayer. And if any of your individual prayer experiences do not have clarity of meaning, do not try to create your own clarity. Trust that the knowledge you need will be revealed by God, with your faith, given to you out of his mercy and grace in the manner and time when it is best for you. This may occur when you least expect it. It can occur within another prayer, or during worship, as a result of service, or within a loving relationship. Within all this, we find that the reflections of our prayerful experiences and our ongoing Christian formation are crucially and wonderfully supported by the rich teachings and traditions of the Church. Reflection and discernment are most valuable within a Christian community established in faith and supported by history, tradition, and others who understand the tender whisper of Christ within.

The Church has wonderful resources and writings of spiritual teachers who have followed the inward journey of Christ's call. Examples are Julian of Norwich, Francis of Assisi, Teresa of Avila, Therese of Lisieux, Thomas Merton, Meister Eckhart, and many many others. And certainly read and listen to the scriptures. But with the awakening of your awareness of God within your heart, trust and follow God's loving draw and expression within you. Your spiritual path will be unique to you. It will be your living, personal relationship with God as revealed by him. It will not be the identical path of another saint. Whether your journey follows a traditional form or is more uncommon, it will be your own path, your own journey, because it will be God personally calling and revealing himself in you. Therefore have trust and faith in his very special loving presence as he beckons, pulls and fulfills you in his ways. Be sensitive to this loving presence with a sensitivity learned and nurtured in Companioned Prayer, and with the many other aspects of the Church's worship, prayer and traditions. Be continually open to the living mystery of God within you.

It is not the singular experiences of Companioned Prayer that are the objective of our spiritual journeys. It is God's loving presence revealed within us and his drawing us into him in our heart, and our responsive expression of that love, which is the goal of our spiritual journey. Companioned Prayer is just one wonderful way to discover and nurture that joy within a full life of faith.

The Prayer's Fruits

Prayer that is authentic, that is based in the grace of our Lord, will bring about changes in us and in our relationships. With true prayer we will find ourselves silently being in God's love and giving love to others, and serving them. God's real loving kindness, compassion, humility, and appreciation of others find expression through us. This is a general outcome of a regular practice of Companioned Prayer. Love and charity will grow in us, as will our discipleship. This discipleship will be not only a personal relationship with our savior, but will be increasingly identified with our Christian community, our brothers and sisters in Christ, his Church, his body.

A Living Faith

Our Companioned Prayer experience affirms that God is with us and active in us now, in this moment. In prayer we find that we are alive in God, and are called to new awareness and new journeys beyond our limited comprehension as he deepens our relationship with him. In this way God calls the Church into ever renewed spirituality born of the living presence of God within us through Christ revealed by the Holy Spirit. Therefore follow this inner holy expression, prompting and call. Do not be afraid to live in God's Spirit with Christ, and to make his authentic presence, revealed in you, real in the Church through loving one another. Do not wait to love. Do not think that to be a real Christian you must wait to have an advanced theological appreciation of the faith. The Holy Spirit was given to us by Christ to keep us current, alive in the present presence of the living God; that we might learn, grow, share and love in his revealed fullness, which is beyond our intellectual knowing. With this prayer, allow yourself to let God call you into a living, ever deeper, faith in him and him in you. And in his grace, live in love now. God creates all life anew in him in the present. Live in his trust, in faith, and above all in love, all through his grace and gift of himself revealed within us by him. So pray and love, and be ever new in the fullness of Christ, and be not afraid to let his grace be revealed in and through you and the Church.

Christian Community

As Christians we are the body of Christ, and our experiences of Companioned Prayer call us to be a Christian community to each other. Church is present when we come together in faith in Christ's presence to support each other in prayer and service. Therefore you do not need to wait for your local church to officially establish a Companioned Prayer group ministry before creating a prayer group or before finding prayer partners. All baptized Christians are called directly by God to believe and serve him, and to support each other's walk with Christ. It doesn't necessarily have to happen inside a church building. It can happen when we gather in a living room, or when we call on someone in need. The possibilities for church, for Christ to be present in our midst, can be found amongst us in Companioned Prayer in numerous ways. In addition to new prayer groups and prayer partners, Companioned Prayer should be incorporated into existing church and religious activities such as seminaries, spiritual direction, contemplative worship, service ministries, small groups, retreats, Bible study, catechesis, Sunday school, and teen youth programs. In fact, the practice of Companioned Prayer should be only one facet of a balanced approach to Christian spiritual formation. A full life of faith includes regular engagement in other forms of Christian prayer and Christian life, including worship, study, service, fellowship, and creativity. But with Companioned Prayer we find ourselves becoming increasingly open to being called into the living fullness of Christ within these activities in answer to God's tender presence within us.

It is possible that resistance to Companioned Prayer can occur from those who only feel comfortable if they are the ones who define what God wants for us or how God may be available to us. But do not let that stop you from praying and listening to God, and letting Christ and the Holy Spirit be known within you. We pray for the will of God to be known in our hearts. Respond to his call in faith and actively support each other in prayer. It is really all about faith, trust, surrender to God, and letting him be active in our life. We should all forgo our persistent controlling, and learn to listen and respond to God's personal love and concerns for us. Jesus lived and modeled this trust in God, even in his trials and challenges and even unto death. Companioned Prayer can open the door in our life to divine gift and love, known and felt intimately in our soul.

What This Means for the Church

What does all this mean for the Church? Well, first it means that it is possible to foster a prayer designed for Christian community (in prayer groups, prayer partners, and prayer outreach) that can connect people to God and enliven the understanding and appreciation of the faith, all from within very personal and private prayer experiences. It is not a matter of theological explanations and constructs. The reality is revealed and known directly. Our faith becomes alive from within.

This awakening can happen within the Church's ongoing worship, formation and ministry programs and can be further supported by dedicated Companioned Prayer groups and Companioned Prayer service outreach. Priests, pastors and lay ministers can simply incorporate the prayer into their regular programs. It is easy to include a few introductory prayer sessions within your church's programs of worship, education and service. Most church programs lack time or resources for personal prayer, and instead focus on reading, discussion and corporate prayer. Personal exploration of God's presence within us is often relegated to an intellectual understanding. Time devoted to quiet personal prayer and reflection is usually relinquished for time spent on information, with the unstated and usually mistaken hope that people will take time for prayer and reflection on their own while at home. Even small groups and Bible studies usually try to develop our Christian formation largely through discussion. Today most churches give the lowest priority for quiet time to be with God. Yet, it is in the inner quiet of personal prayer that faith allows us to go beyond our limited intellect and controlling behavior, and allows us to be open to the experience of God's real presence in our life. Companioned Prayer offers an excellent way to include personal, quiet, contemplative prayer within the Church's many programs, whether they are worship, education, ministry or service. In doing so, whether in only one or two sessions or throughout the program, participants will receive an introduction to the inner life of Companioned Prayer within their Christian community.

In addition to fostering Companioned Prayer partners, ministry groups and service outreach, the Church also has a role in supporting healthy spiritual growth in the discernment and understanding of the personal revelations of prayer experiences within the context of our faith formation. For example, in addition to the customary faith formation classes and groups, the Church can sponsor trained spiritual direction, and lay prayer and formation support groups as described at the end of chapter 7. This ongoing support at the parish level is essential for our spiritual development both personally and as community. Such a vital and spiritually thriving environment should not only draw us into a deeper understanding of ourselves and our relationship with Christ, it should do so with the perspective that the development of our mind, heart and soul within God is God's divine unfolding love and mystery. For although our Companioned Prayer experiences carry specific personal meaning, they are also experienced as mystery. We intuitively know that what is revealed and understood is only partial. It becomes clear that our understanding is limited by our humanness. Even though that humanness is far more capable of receiving God's gifts than we think, the divine reality of the gifts and mystery will always be far more than our understanding and appreciation. God is God and we are not. We are simply his children, his creation, born and given life from his love. That in itself is amazing, but it pales to nothing in significance to Him. Yet we and the Church are both called by God into a growing relationship of trust in living in the Spirit, and to risk being open to change and new understanding from our challenges and grace received as we are called into a new realness beyond measure.

Beyond Experiences and Theologies

As we respond to his call and as our spiritual journey unfolds, we should not limit ourselves to our current understanding of our theology or our experiences, because the fullness of God is beyond our present understandings and it is also beyond our present experiences. It is God who, in drawing us into his fullness, will reveal his truth to us in ways that only he knows. How he will be calling us into the gift of himself and how we will respond, are at present beyond our understanding. But in faith we give ourselves to him, we abide in him with our whole being, and we willingly let him carry us beyond our current understandings and experiences – thereby opening for us his divine way, his truth, and his life in an ultimate glory only known by him. Therefore we are called not to a fixed understanding of "truth" as much as into a living and ever deepening relationship with God and God's creation.

Companioned Prayer gives the Church another way to promote how people can be open to the reality of that personal relationship, rather than trying to define the experience and its outcomes for them. Ultimately we are saved by our Lord's personally transforming power, mystery and love – his presence revealed as gift within us by him over time as we acknowledge our natural human yearnings and vulnerabilities, in trust and openness within God's Spirit. The Church can encourage us to be open to this ongoing possibility of trust and transformation within its teachings and sacraments, and within a personal prayer relationship with God. When that personal relationship is experienced through Companioned Prayer, and as it matures through continued prayer experiences, the teaching and support of the Church at the same time become personally tremendously meaningful. We find the gift of God's presence and grace universally experienced in Companioned Prayer occurring and being fulfilled in us within our Church worship; in the liturgy, in song, in the Word, in each other, in prayer, and in the sacraments, especially in the Eucharist. Then the fullness of our faith becomes our living reality, and we are continuously surprised to discover anew the fullness and joy of God's love for us.

In this way we are inspired beyond continued interpretation and explanation, into the reality of a constant living and expanding relationship with our loving God through faith. Jesus' primary message was not to ask us to re-analyze the scriptures or theology, nor was it to re-interpret the experience of God's people or our own personal experiences. Instead, he asked us to know the Father, through him and with the guidance of the Holy Spirit. Jesus said: Abide in me; if you know me you know my Father; believe in me; I am the way, the truth and the life. He called us personally to become new in him and to be ever called into God by him. And in God, we find love and are called to love.

Called to a New Hope

But how are we to know and accept this possibility? How can we be personally called to God? Our Companioned Prayer experiences broaden our awareness of what the possibilities are. Our view of God and reality is expanded. Our own prayer experiences are often felt to be miraculous and divine. We then also inwardly understand how the miracles of the Bible are also within the realm of divine reality, and we know that the truth is more than we had dared to hope.

Our personal awakening to God's loving presence in our life, realized through the quiet experience of his grace, opens us to a new way of living. We discover that for us the risen Jesus can be more than a belief in an understanding of him; he can be personally known. In this prayer and in life we find Christ has been and is forever our Companion. We begin to know this gift of divine love and presence continually. When we are quietly sensitive to his will and love, our choices and actions are based on a greater, natural purpose and hope. We find him calling us, and guiding us into an ever closer relationship with him, into a lifelong journey of becoming in him. And in him and through him, all of our life can become an expression of God's love. The possibilities for reconciliation and renewal offered through this prayer, to each of us personally, to each other, to the Church, and to all society, are incomprehensibly immeasurable.

This is not just another interpretation of theology. It is actual transformation – a healing and making whole in Christ by his grace. By being authentic to our yearnings, limitations, vulnerabilities, sins, brokenness, and needs – by listening, acknowledging and holding these in prayer with God's help, and simultaneously in faith being open to Jesus' caring loving presence, we find over and over again his mercy and grace given and received, and we are changed.

A Prayer of Reconciliation and Renewal

Whatever the understandings or gifts we receive in Companioned Prayer, whether it is that we know that we are no longer alone, or that it is okay to trust in God, or that mercy and healing are God's gift to us, that we are a child of God, that Jesus is our personal savior, that God ever calls us to himself and reveals his grace within us, that it is okay to love others, that we are one,... no matter what specifically happens in our journeys in prayer, we will not be the same. We find that over time we become more complete, more of who we authentically are. But at the same time we find that who we are means being a part of something wonderfully more, a divine mystery and presence, not only transcendent and beyond all knowing, but also very personal and caring. When that is known, not just intellectually, but experienced as basic to our soul, then we are changed.

Then we sing out in praise and worship. We are free to love and serve God, our fellow humans and our planet home. We are renewed in Christ.

Postscript

If you have read parts of this book and still have not gotten together with someone else to try out Companioned Prayer, I commend you for actively seeking a deeper understanding of the wonder of Christ. But an intellectual understanding as a result of reading this book will not tell you much about what the prayer experience is like, and especially what it is like to practice it over time. So honor your desire, and take the next step. Experience the gift of God's living grace, one prayer at a time.

If you have already begun to learn Companioned Prayer, I encourage you to continue the prayer with regularity, and to especially continue within the mutual support and discovery a Companioned Prayer ministry group associated with your church or religious community. I hope you too experience Jesus' love within this prayer in ways that transform you. The depth of faith and experience awaiting your prayer journey in Christ is the precious gift of his divine self.

Come; let us learn of all this together.
